DESERTED CAMP TELLS OF LOSS OF YOUNG LIFE

Kawartha, Land of Smiling Waters, Is Under Brooding Silence.

FATE'S PLAYTHINGS.

Balsam Lake Still Holds Its Dead in Cold Embrace.

(By Examiner Staff Reporter.)

BALSAM LAKE, July 23.—Rippling waters today softly sound a requiem over the resting places of the bodies of the eleven young men who perished in the grim catastrophe that overwhelmed the war canoe of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew camp on Tuesday night. None of the bodies has yet been recovered.

Kawartha, land of Smiling Waters, is sad. Never before have these usually limpid lakes reached out to grasp human life with such prodigality. From all over the continent people have flocked to find on Kawartha's laughing waters surcease from toil and balm for work-shattered nerves. Even now the lakes are crowded by holiday makers; canoes and motor boats are happily skimming the surfaces of other lakes.

But silence reigns here at Balsam Lake.

The waters—not laughing that night, but hungry—grimly keep what they have taken unto themselves. Perhaps not for days, perhaps not for weeks; it may be that never shall they deliver up the bodies that a few short days ago held youthful spirits that had the world before them and high ideals of Christian service beckoning them on.

Yesterday a saddened sky threw a mantle of grey over the scene of the unprecedented tragedy, and a drizzling rain fell steadily. A motor launch and the Government tug Harwood dragged the lake bottom, almost hidden from shore in the lowering mist. The Harwood was rushed to the scene by A. L. Killaly, Superintendent at Peterborough of the Trent Canal. It left Kirkfield shortly after dawn, under command of Captain Thomas Sadler, and was quickly at its solemn task.

Camp is Deserted.

Very little remains to show that Long Point was a few days ago the centre of life and activity for a large party of boys on holiday. The eight tents were deserted yesterday, but even these have gone. And their going has removed a poignant reminder of what might have been. Yesterday morning, in the dim light of dawn, the blankets of the eleven boys lay just as they were left after the lads had slept their last earthly sleep. Sweaters, towels, little personal belongings, marked the void more vividly than any staring headline or crude bulletin. All that was lacking was the vital spark of life.

Today the camp site is as deserted as a plague-ridden island. The survivors rushed from the spot and its heart-rending associations. The Union Jack, which flew at half-mast from the time the tragedy was announced, has been taken away.

Sitting here on a rough bench where some of those boys sat not so very long ago, one can reconstruct the scenes of the terrible night. Not terrible at first, for here at the camp all was the joyousness of life in the open. Down there on the beach the canoe had been tied to the little pier. It was found necessary to go to Coboconk to bring over canoes and provisions, in preparation for the starting of the camp routine and training on the following day. Volunteers were called, not only to paddle the big war canoe, but to bring back the smaller craft. How many volunteered? No one knows how many attempted to sail on the death cruise, but probably had there been room the craft would have carried twenty—or twenty-five—or thirty—instead of the fifteen who found room.

Joking, "kidding," the happy boys took their places, paddles uplifted. On the shore were gathered those who could not go. They watched as the steersman ordered "dip," and the long canoe shot out from land, breasting the choppy waves. Then they turned away and came up to the tents. When the canoe came back it was with a remnant of that happy party that set out so lightheartedly. Four out of fifteen.

When the canoe had not beached by midnight, and no sign of it was seen at half past two, the boys who remained here at camp allowed their beacon fire to die out. Their comrades had doubtless remained at Coboconk over night. Why not? They had talked about it the night before.

And at lunch time on Wednesday they were still unalarmed, though wondering. It was thought better to send a couple of their number to telephone enquiries to Coboconk. They got the car and were stepping into it when out of the bush came four drooping, undressed, bruised and weary boys, Lambden, Waller, Wigington, O'Hara.

That is what this now bleak camping spot has witnessed, and that is why this tract of lake-lapped land must always be associated with tragedy and vanished happiness.

Arthur Bacon's Story.

Arthur Bacon, of Peterborough, who returned to the camp yesterday for equipment after spending the night with a cottager, made the same trip on Monday night that was attempted on Tuesday night with so disastrous result. On that occasion he was accompanied by Raymond Allan, Sidney Manley and E. Lant, and the return trip was made without difficulty. Art Bacon also made the trip from Chemong to the camp.

Eleven Victims of Balsam Lake War Canoe Tragedy

THEY WERE ALL HEROES; EVERY ONE

Eleven members of the St. Andrew's Brotherhood camp, drowned after their war canoe had upset on Balsam Lake, are shown above. Nine were from Toronto. They are: 1. Oliver Mardall, of 1016 Mount Pleasant road, who sacrificed his life in an effort to save his companions. Mardall's father was lost in the Empress of Ireland disaster. 2. Gordon Heale, 384 Lumsden avenue. "I am not going to write, mother, I won't be long," was Heale's last word as he left home on Monday. 3. A. R. Shea-Butcher, of 6 Parr avenue, field secretary of St. Andrew's Brotherhood, and lay reader of St. James' Cathedral, who, with Oliver Mardall, swam away from the upturned canoe in order to give the others a better chance of being kept afloat by it. Mr. Butcher had injured his knee some time ago and must have known that he was giving up his only chance of safety. The picture was taken while he was orderly to Sir Arthur Currie during the war. 4. Mr. Shea-Butcher in his surplice as lay reader at St. James' Cathedral. 5. A picture of Mr. Shea-Butcher as he was when he left for the camp. 6. Vernon W. Clarke, 106 Pricefield road, a U. T. S. student, who was drowned almost in sight of land. Clarke had won a life-saving medal some time ago. 7. Frank Burkitt, 12 Wilmot avenue. Fifteen years old, he was the youngest member of the canoe's crew. He had written home on the afternoon before his death. 8. Walter Mark Burgess, 99 Seaton street, who was enjoying the first outdoor holiday of his life when tragedy overtook him. His father was killed early in the war. 9. John Wigington, 87 Queensbury avenue, Birch Cliff, who spent his last hour encouraging his younger brother, Willie, to continue the fight for life. 10. Harold Bakewell, 445 Oakwood avenue, and his four brothers. LEFT TO RIGHT TOP ROW, Harold, Leon, Norman; BELOW, Howard and George. 11. Joseph Edwards, Jr., 168 Earlsdale avenue. Joseph was a student at the Central Technical School. 12. RAY ALLAN, PETERBORO, who left the upturned canoe and struck out for shore to get help. He was a strong swimmer, but was never seen again. 13. Harry Mills, 183 St. Andrew's street, Galt. He was a well-known local athlete. His parents were at a picnic when news of his death reached them.

AEROPLANE LEAVES SUDBURY TO AID IN SIGHTING BODIES

Premier Ferguson Grants Request of Toronto Man.

HIGH HOPE HELD.

Rev. Canon Vernon Satisfied Canoe Would Carry 15 Safely.

(Special to The Examiner)

TORONTO, July 23.—As the result of an order issued by Premier Ferguson just before noon today, an airplane of the Provincial Forest Protection Service leaves Sudbury this afternoon for Fenelon Falls to assist in the search for the bodies of the eleven boys drowned in Tuesday night's war canoe accident.

The application to the Premier was made by Fred Miller, president of Miller and Sons, florists, an uncle of Harold Bakewell, 445 Oakwood Avenue, one of the drowned boys.

"If an airplane will help in the locating of these boys' bodies, then an airplane you shall have," said Premier Ferguson when Mr. Miller made personal application to him. The Premier immediately telephoned the Department of Lands and Forests and gave the necessary orders.

Mr. Miller told the Premier that

He Went Out With The Sunset

Last Rays of Tuesday's Setting Sun Fell on Raymond Allan's Heroic Sacrifice—He Might Have Clung On, But He Chose To Die in the Hope That the Others Might Be Saved.

"There was another sublime act as the last rays of light were falling, and that by a young lad still in his teens, Ray Allan of Peterborough. Ray saw that there was little chance of the canoe being brought to shore in the way we were attempting it. Three-quarters of a mile from shore, he volunteered to try and swim to land to bring help. Leaving the canoe, he struck out manfully against the wind and waves. I saw him last about fifty feet from the canoe and then he passed from sight. I fear that he did not long survive to surmount the obstacles of wind and wave."—Arthur Lambden, camp adjutant.

THE WEATHER.

There has been considerable moderation of the oppressive heat which prevailed recently. Yesterday's highest figure was 75 degrees, a drop of 14 degrees from the preceding day. The change to cooler conditions is a blessing to little children and people who are ill. It has sometimes struck me when the temperature rises to a high point, say 90 degrees, what is there to prevent it going up another 25 degrees? The consequences would be calamitous and more disastrous than the black plague, and yet there is apparently nothing to prevent such an occurrence but the overruling hand of an all-wise Providence.—W. NINE PARTIES ARE SEARCHING THE BOTTOM OF BALSAM LAKE Drags Are Being Used, But Work Lags For Want of Guide.

CLOUDLESS SKY.

Task Seems Impossible With Only Contradictory Reports Available.

(Special to The Examiner).

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 23.—Balsam Lake lies to-day beneath a flood of sunshine. It is a smile of veiled secrecy, for the lake still holds in its warming waters its eleven dead, despite the efforts that are being made to find them.

From a cloudless sky the sun beats down. A slight breeze from the north-east fails to stir the surface. The visibility is as clear as it possibly can be—but not clear enough to plumb its depths.

Out on the lake to-day nine boats are searching for the eleven members of St. Andrew's Brotherhood, who died when the war canoe tipped. Included among them are two boats manned by Toronto life-savers, for last night Superintendent Hilliard Lang, Patrol Officer Dewey Robinson, and Seaman J. Sullivan came up to put their experience to the task of recovery. They stayed all night at Mr. Goodman's lodge at Rosedale, which they are making their headquarters, but were out shortly after dawn to begin their task.

Deep Sea Net Useless.

Unfortunately, the Toronto lifesavers met a check from the start. They had brought with them their big deep sea dragging net, equipped with 85 hooks. But they found they could not use it. The rocky bottom of Balsam Lake caught the hooks and held them.

So they were forced to turn to the bar drag. They are now using a bar ten feet long on which are heavy

EXCURSION BUS CRASHES INTO STORE WINDOW

Ten Women and Children Killed When Bus Rolls Down Incline.

DRIVER HELD.

Twenty-four More Kept at Hospital—Was Not Speeding.

NEW YORK, July 23 (Canadian Press).—Ten women and children out of 48, who sought to escape the heat of New York City in a bus excursion are dead today and the driver of the bus, which overturned, is held in New York City Jail.

Three others of the passengers were on the danger list at a New York hospital, and all the rest were injured.

The passengers were returning to their homes in Brooklyn after spending the day in Bear Mountain Park.

Witnesses said the bus, driven by Lastro, was not speeding prior to the accident. The machine jumped over the Erie Railroad crossing in the heart of Sparkhill, N.Y., and fifteen feet east of the crossing suddenly swerved to the right, then started rolling down a slight incline. Witnesses say they saw Lastro working frantically with his levers and heard frightened screams of the women and children as the machine gathered momentum. The brakes refused to hold and when machine reached the bottom of the hill and crashed against a store window, it rolled over.

Fourteen of the injured were sent to their homes after first aid treatment. Lastro was taken to jail and twenty-four were kept in hospital.

No charges have been filed against Lastro as yet.

MEMORIAL SERVICE.

Does Not Think Camp Will Be Discontinued Following Tragedy.

(Special to The Examiner).

TORONTO, July 23.—If present indications take form it appears likely that a memorial to the heroism of A. R. Shea-Butcher, director of the ill-fated Balsam Lake Camp, who gave his life in an effort to save his 13 charges, and also to that of Oliver Mardall, 18-year-old choir boy, who was the first of the crew to go, will be mooted in private session of the clergy affected and of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew's officials.

Giving his own opinion as to whether the Balsam Lake camp would be discontinued as a result of the drowning, Rev. Mr. Hartley said he did not think that such drastic action would be taken. He pointed out that the affair might be regarded as an aid to experience in the Government May Act To Prevent Accidents

TORONTO, July 23 (Canadian Press).—The Ontario Government may attempt to prohibit the use of canoes in deep water as a result of the tragedy at Balsam Lake, according to Hon. W. H. Price, acting Attorney-General of Ontario. Hon. Mr. Price stated to-day that it would be possible to devise regulations governing the use of canoes at summer camps at lake and river resorts, and that those safety regulations might be drawn up and given Legislative effect by the Ferguson Government.

STUNG BY BEE LITTLE GIRL DIES

Died Twenty Minutes After Receiving Sting at Her Father's Bee Farm.

MONTREAL, July 23 (Canadian Press).—Stung by a bee, Jeanne Dube, 13 years of age, died 20 minutes after at her father's bee farm at St. Bruno. The girl had been trying to prevent a bee from stinging a boy, while they were in the farm laboratory, and the insect stung her on the lower lip. Five minutes after she was stung she became unconscious, and despite the efforts of a doctor who was called, she remained in that state until she died. Mr. Dube told the doctor that his daughter had been stung many times by bees, as their farm was quite large, having over 125 hives, but that the sting had had no ill effects other than a temporary pain, and she had never shown any signs of being ill after being stung. The boy, Leroux, was stung on the foot by a bee, which had been trying to take some honey from a part of an old bit of honey comb. The lad stopped to chase away the insect, and when he did so, Jean Dube saw that another bee had entered beneath his head netting and that he was in danger of being stung in the face. She seized the netting and tore it from his head, releasing the bee, which stung her on the lower lip.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Sir,—It may be remembered by those who see the vital necessity of looking more closely into the economic requirements of Eastern Ontario that a writer in your journal called attention not long since to the grave danger in Government ownership of the development of some sections of the province at the expense of others. This may be done as a measure of wise general policy but that it will work out badly for the neglected sections is manifest. We have a case in point at present and at home. The Eastern Ontario Power Association meeting at Belleville July 5th and following days draws attention to the following facts: 1. That the proposed lease and development of the Ontario Government through the Hydro Commission of the Gatineau power will work out badly for Eastern Ontario because it is proposed to convey this additional power to Toronto, etc., at a voltage of over 200,000, which will have to be stepped down to suit the eastern distributing system and rexuirements to 40,000. Also that the 60 cycle will not correspond either. The consequence being that power for Eastern Ontario will cost us $4 to $5 per horse power extra. Such a handicap will put us out of the electric power zone altogether. 2. That at the present time the excessive and increasing cost of Hydro-Electric power is driving manufacturers out of water-generated electric power and back to steam power.

The contrast between Hydro-Electric power and electric power developed by ourselves in our naturally favored neighborhood is apparent. If we do not find representatives capable of taking this matter up and carrying it through, the future of Eastern Ontario, Peterborough included, is doomed.

The giving away of our peculiarly favorable position in the development of cheap electric power at our near-by water-privileges is gradually driving us to the wall. There can be no denying the facts set out by the association, and if we do not get back to our former favorable position Peterborough will have only herself to thank for the great loss involved. It is all very well for municipalities having no near-by opportunities for development of electeric power from water to applaud the H. E. Commission in its plan of taking away from those who have to give to those who have not these exceptional opportunities, but for those enjoying these opportunities to do so is little short of madness. Government and H.E. ownership and management as a political war-cry was calculated to arouse great enthusiasm, and it did so, but that it was a grievous mistake for Peterborough ought to be plain enough by this time. WOMEN DO WELL AT OSGOODE HALL

Women's Law Associations Present Scholarship in Memory of First Graduate.

TORONTO, July 23 (Canadian Press).—It is interesting to note that the Women's Law Association took a forward step this year by presenting a scholarship in memory of the late Clara Brett Martin. It was offered to any one in the Osgoode graduating class who reached a certain standard. And a man won it.

"There is room for women every place," said one beneficent Toronto lawyer recently, "in law, yes. It took Florence Nightingale some time to convince the people of her day that women had a place in the army, but she proved it for all time. Women have come to stay in legal ranks, and they will find their niches and fill them well."

Since Miss Clara Brett Martin broke into the legal ranks about 25 years ago, 53 young women have graduated from Osgoode Hall, and over twenty of these are following their professions in different parts of Canada. Quite a number occupy salaried positions requiring legal knowledge, and some have been brave enough to hang out their own shingles and take their chances on a practice, usually finding their faith justified.

This year six girls emerged successfully from the examination tests at Osgoode Hall, and will be called to the Bar sometime in the autumn. In a class of over 150 the women students of 1926 had no reason to be ashamed. Six there were who faced the difficult tests, and six graduated with credit to themselves and to their school. The fact that not one of their group was plucked is a source of comfort to the girls, whose feelings one expressed in her remark: "Of course we don't claim to have taken a wonderful standing, but we feel sincerely thankful that we all passed, particularly when we remember that 15 men of our year had not such good fortune."

"Girls do not go to law school for social life, because there is none. With the exception of the annual dance there is no jollification of any kind, and a young women entering law sticks pretty faithfully to her books. Most of our girls this year were not university graduates, and it meant plenty of hard work to reach the required standard of 40 per cent. on the total. One of our group had an average of 70 per cent."

TENDERS FOR PAINTING.

Tenders for painting the outside woodwork of the Ashburnham City building, with one coat of best lead to be determined by the Trust) will to be detrmined by the Trust) will be received by The Peterborough City Trust up to an including Saturday, July 24th, next.

The ridge boards, ridge rolls, metal gutters, eave troughs, down pipes and fire escapes are to be included, as well as the cupola on the roof.

The lowest or any tender is not necessarily to be accepted. Address tenders to A. Stevenson, Secretary Peterboro City Trust, 332½ George street. 4d-19-2388

MAN NOT FREE TO MARRY AGAIN

Divorce in States Will Not Permit Re-marriage in Canada.

VICTORIA, B.C., July 24 (Canadan Press)—A man may free himself from the shackles of matrimony by way of a divorce court in the United States and yet be subject to arrest for bigamy if he re-marries on returning to Canadian soil, according to an opinion of Mr. Justice Dennis Muphy, of the British Columbia supreme court.

The question revolves around the terms "domicile" and "residence" as interpreted by the United States and Canadian courts. States south of the international border will recognize a man or a woman as a resident of the United States after varying periods of from six months to a year. But even while the residence qualification may be met, the Canadian applicant for divorce in the United States must also establish a domicile in the United States.

The interpretation of "domicile" is not always a matter of time. In the main it must be established that permanent residence was contemplated. In other words, it must be proved to the satisfaction of a judge that the holder of the divorce papers, did not rush across the line with the idea that divorces are more easily obtained there. As a matter of fact, a few days' domicile may be sufficient to satisfy a Canadian judge.

It is apaprent, however, that few people leave British Columbia to secure divorces in the United States. According to some authorities, divorce is easier to obtain in British Columbia than in many states of the Union and cases are given where couples have actually crossed the border into this province to obtain court orders affecting their legal separation.

First Complete Story Of Balsam Lake Tragedy

ARMY OF VOLUNTEERS IS BUSY DRAGGING BALSAM LAKE TO-DAY

Camp Site Is Crowded By Searchers and Bereaved Parents.

PROVINCE STIRRED.

Premier Says Aeroplane Is Available If Desired By Officials.

Recovering from the first shock of the catastrophe that swept down upon them on Tuesday, residents of the district near Balsam Lake have joined in the search for the bodies of the eleven victims.

According to Dr. F. A. Logan, Coroner for the County of Victoria, any bodies recovered will in all probability be brought to Rosedale, on Balsam Lake, for transhipment to Lindsay, where an inquest will be conducted under the supervision of Crown Attorney Ernest Anderson.. Provincial Constable Storey is bending every effort to the search with the full authority of the Attorney-General's Department at Toronto.

Full realization of the tragedy came yesterday almost for the first time, when parents of the victims visited the now deserted camp on Long Point.

A Day of Tireless Search

After a day of tireless effort spent in the search, citizens of this vicinity are but strengthened in their belief that many days will elapse before Balsam Lake yields up the bodies of its eleven victims. Willing hands there are aplenty, and the entire resources of the community have been put at the command of the bereaved parents, yet those who have spent years on the lake point to several features which militate against success in the quest.

First and foremost in the minds of those engaged yesterday was the lack of definite information as to the exact spot where the canoe upset. Except for a rough diagram given them by one of the boys who had interviewed the survivors, the searchers were without guidance and were faced with the prospect of dragging their grappling irons across at least three miles of open lake.

Strong Undercurrent in Lake

Again, old residents point to the fact that not only is the water at least 30 feet deep in the vicinity, but that a strong undercurrent drifts toward the eastern end of the lake, and they are confident that when the bodies are eventually recovered they will be found considerable distances apart. To enable dragging operations to be carried out with any immediate prospects of success, they say, at least one of the survivors should return to the scene of the accident and guide the search parties.

Despite all these dificulties, dawn of yesterday saw workers assembling for the grim task. From farms and from near-by towns came volunteers, bringing with them grappling irons of every description. All rowboats and launches on the lake were pressed into service, and as noon approached each hour saw fresh parties setting out from the shore on Long Point, where a white flag flying about the litle pier, marked the spot where the touch of death had stilled the exurberant spirit of youth and where anxious parents waited the tidings which the lake might send.

Tug Leads Dragging Squadron.

Most important of the day's activities was the arrival of the Government tug Harwood from Kirkfield, where it is stationed on work connected with the maintenance of the Trent Valley Canal System. Commanded by Captain Tom Sadler and in charge of District Superintendent Chester Dalgleish — men familiar with the lakes of the region—and equipped with a plentiful suply of grappling irons, it patrolled the vicinity of the accident until darkness rendered further effort useless. Parties putting out from the camp, at the suggestion of the Government men, attached their craft to the sides of the tug until a line of grappling hooks some thirty feet wide was formed. Then, steaming slowly up and down, the vessel conducted a systematic patrol of the entire area.

At the camp early yesterday morning there were parties of farmers and campers ready to attempt the search. Drizzling rain made it almost impossible to distinguish the outlines of the nearest island — scarcely half a mile away—while a stiff breeze lashed the water into whitecaps, which made the launching of a rowboat nothing less than foolhardy. Two hours' delay was enforced upon the impatient searchers, and as the time passed motor cars brought scores to the camp on Long Point.

Bereaved Parents Watch From Shore.

Conspicuous among these were parents of the lost boys—men with set faces, drawn by a night of sleepless vigil, and women heartbroken by the suddenness of the tragedy which had fallen upon their homes and their loved ones. Even thirty-six hours after the accident they refused to abandon hope, clinging to the straw that some of the boys might have swam ashore and even now were marooned on one of the many islands. In the face of such hopes the residents of the district were silent, withholding the information that on the previous day launches had skirted the shores of every island, and that, as the information spread, a thorough search had been conducted around the borders of the lake.

Among the first to arrive were Messrs Edwards and Wigginton of Toronto. Before leaving Toronto Mr. Wigginton had talked with his son William, aged 16, who told the heartbreaking story of how, in the darkness, while the spent boys were clinging to the upturned canoe, death had taken his brother John. Another sufferer from the tragedy was Mrs. Ellen E. Allan of Peterboro, who, although almost prostrated by the shock, insisted on being taken to a cottage ne. Long Point, where through the long hours of yesterday, she waited tidings. Although stunned by the tragedy, parents such as these refuse to abandon hope until the waters of the lake have yielded the last body.

Removing Loved Ones' Effects.

Possibly the most pathetic of all the scenes at the camp since the afternoon when the survivors staggered in with their dread tidings, occurred yesterday when parents of the boys were removing personal effects from the tents. Expecting to be gone for a few hours only, the boys had left everything ready for use. As bespoke a well ordered camp clothing was folded on bedding rolls, knives and forks were neatly piled on the dining tables, but in order to secure the effects of their sons parents were forced to conduct a search of the entire camp. Finally, bearing suitcases, and even fishing poles, which the youthful sportsmen had brought to enhance holiday delights, men plodded to their motor cars. For them —as for a large portion of the community—the grim hand of tragedy had closed down.

From leaden skies driving rain drenched the crew of the tug and the men in the boats alongside, as, hour after hour, they sat holding the ropes attached to their grapnels. Now and then from one of the watchers would come a cry. A sharp signal to the engine room and the flotilla halted its funereal process. Then as the other irons were quickly hauled up to prevent fouling, eager eyes bent on the man who had felt the sudden tug. As the line came up, hand over hand, silence fell upon even the lake men, hardened to silence. But each time as the clawlike iron broke the surface, it was empty. Grapnels once more plunged beneath the waters, the tug swung around; men hunched their shoulders in the downpour and the work went on.

Minister Aids in Search.

One of the leaders in the search was Rev. Ernest Harston, minister of the United Church at Woodville. For five years, he has conducted a camp for young people on the site at Long Point recently taken by the Brotherhood of St Andrew. Only last week a camping outing for young people of the district under his supervision had been brought to a close. Never, he says, in his years of experience as a camp director had he had an accident to those under his charge. Such a record he attributes to two things—that immediately upon arrival at the camp each newcomer was given a course in life-saving and was examined for proficiency, and that all campers were forbidden to venture out on the lake in craft of any sort.

Keenly appreciative of the meaning of such a tragedy as that of Tuesday, fully acquainted with the waters of Lake Balsam, and quick with the spirit of helpfulness of the out-of-doors man, he was early on the scene yesterday, bringing with him a complete set of grappling irons and several of his parishioners to aid in the search.

Mail That Will Not Be Delivered.

On his arrival from Woodville he brought with him a bundle of mail addressed to boys at the camp, 11 of whom will never read the words of caution sent by parents back in the city.

Among the mail was a postcard from the stationmaster at Woodville, addressed to the late R. Shea-Butcher, camp leader, informing him that supplies for the camp had arrived, and had been waiting for several days. From this, Mr. Harston is unable to understand why the expedition set out across the lake to Coboconk to obtain supplies, since, he says, Woodville has always been the source for campers at Long Point.

Another arrival at the camp was Rev. W. T. M. Swan, 240 Quebec Avenue, Toronto, associate director of the camp, who was to have succeeded Mr. Shea-Butcher next week. The late director, he says, was a fully experienced leader, and had been widely known for his ability. Mr. Swan, accompanied by several members of the executive of the association, was in charge at the camp supervising the removal of personal effects and joining in the search on the lake.

Plane Available.

"The minute they ask for a plane they can have it," said Premier G. Howard Ferguson last night, when advised that the search parties at Balsam Lake believe that an aeroplane would render invaluable assistance in locating the bodies of the 11 war canoe victims, and that a request for a forest patrol machine will likely be made of the Government.

"A terrible thing has happened," said the Prime Minister. "The whole country is shocked. The Government desires to give, and will give, all possible assistance in the search. If a plane can be of any aid, we will have it there in a hurry. The minute they ask for it, they can have it."

Mr. Ferguson said that in the event of a machine being detailed for Balsam Lake duty it would probably be detached from the Sudbury air base.

At the Camp.

Fourteen-year-old John Mardell, 1016 Mount Pleasant road, told the story of the little group who were left behind in camp and how they received news of the disaster. He had broken down when he heard how his big brother Oliver had quietly swam away from the overturned war canoe when he saw that it would not support the weight of all those who were clinging to it. But it was with plucky composure that he described the boyish drama that attended the arrival of the survivors.

"They had left the evening before in good style," he said. "The canoe had a full crew, with two to each thwart. They poised their paddles, and then at the word 'dip' from Mr. Shea-Butcher they struck off and disappeared in the dusk.

"We were not sure whether they would stay overnight at Coboconk, and none of us thought of being anxious that evening except once. That was when one of the boys picked up a paddle in our tent and started swatting flies with it. 'There's one gone; there's two gone,' he kept saying, and suddenly I felt that something had happened. I did not say anything, though. It was just a queer feeling I had.

"When the canoe had not returned at noon we began to wonder where the boys were; and after dinner it was decided that Sid Manley and Harold Bakewell's brother, who were going into Kirkfield for supplies, should telephone Coboconk to see if they had left there.

Survivors Appear.

"Just as they were getting into the car we saw four of the boys come out of the bush with half their clothes gone. They were Bill Wigington, George Waller, Leonard O'Hara and Art Lambden, the adjutant of the camp.

"Sid Manley was secretary-treasurer and Art spoke to him first: 'Call all the boys, I have something to tell them,' he said.

"Then he broke down—they were all of them nearly fainting from exhaustion. But in a few minutes he recovered himself, and then he told us. He said how the canoe had upset and they had clung to it until one after another gave out and slid into the water. Then he named the ones who were gone, beginning with my brother—'one of the best Christian boys in the camp, and a good friend,' he said. Then I broke down; and do not remember very distinctly what else Art told us.

"But, afterward they all talked. They said that when Mr. Butcher saw that the canoe would not float with so many hanging on to it he just looked around and then swam away. He knew he could not swim far, he had a lame knee that he had twisted once in a boxing bout. And then Oliver followed him.

"When they had finished telling us about it, we got them each an egg and a cup of tea, while two of the boys went in the car to Kirkfield for a doctor. Canon Vernon and another clergyman arrived half an hour later. They were coming to join the camp; but when they heard what had happened they told all of us to pack up and come home. Art Lambden and Sid Manley stayed behind to help."

Leonard O'Hara's Tale Of the Fateful Voyage

Leonard O'Hara, one of the four survivors of the Longpoint tragedy, was yesterday resting in bed at his home, 127 Bloor street west, after his terrible experiences.

"It was not all the swimmers who came through," he stated. "I cannot swim very well myself and some of the strongest swimmers were those who went down early. The Clarke boy, too, could not swim very well."

Leonard stated that when they started out in the trip he was in the stern of the canoe.

"We had been out only about half an hour and were about mid-lake a mile or so from the shore when the canoe upset. There was some wind and the waves were fairly high but I do not think it was that which caused the boat to upset.

"In my opinion, and as far as I could see, some of the boys at the front missed their stroke.

Inexperienced Paddlers.

"Were they all acquainted with canoes?" he was asked.

"No, I have had some experience with small canoes, but not with war canoes. Some of the boys had no experience at all as far as I understand.

"Once we were in the water it was impossible to swim. The water was so cold that we immediately began to cramp. Mr. Shea-Butcher shoved off from the canoe so as to give more room to the others, and he was soon exhausted.

"There was little struggle left in those who had become exhausted. They simply seemed numbed and when they realized they could not hang on they simply let go and sank.

Tried to Save Chum.

"When we were about 100 yards from the island, Vernon Clarke went down. He was the last one of the casualties to let go. Previous to this we saw a couple of the paddles floating under the boat. We got these out and one of the boys, I forget which, straddled the stern and began paddling to help the canoe along, the rest of us hung on as best we could. Four or five times we shoved Vernon Clarke up onto the canoe and each time he fell off after hanging on a minute or two. The last time he slipped off I tried to catch him again, but he was gone, that was only 100 yards from the island.

Collapsed On Island.

"When we got there we were so exhausted we dropped to the ground. Even the next morning we were so exhausted we could hardly turn the canoe over; one of the boys could do nothing."

O'Hara stated that he had on only a pair of trousers over his swimming suit and when he got in the water he kicked free from the trousers.

"I was the only one, I believe, who had a swimming suit on, and this may have helped me to stay up, but it wasn't much use being able to swim because I was cramped all over."

A similar opinion was expressed by Jack Mardell at his home this morning to that voiced by Leonard O'Hara. Jack Mardell did not attribute the cause of the canoe upsetting to a squall, but more likely to the canoe overbalancing by some of the paddlers missing a stroke or themselves being thrown off their balance.

Canoe For Training.

"The war canoe was brought from Peterboro last Monday by the lads, and was for training use" said the Rev. J. M. Swan, of 208 High Park avenue. "It was a terrible tragedy. I was to have gone up this morning to give a series of lectures."

Langden Tells Story Of Night Of Horror

Sitting slumped down in his seat on his way home to Toronto with his tired head resting on the shoulder of his chum, S. G. Manley, 24 Langley Avenue, Arthur Lambden, aged 30, told for the first time the story of the night in which eleven boys went to their death in Balsam Lake when the war canoe of which he was steersman capsized when struck by a sharp wind when broadside to the waves.

He interrupted his story from time to time to gaze far out across the fields as if he would set out the memories of that harrowing night and then told of the battle for life of the four survivors, through the hardships of heat and cold, thunder and hunger, icy water and scorching sunburn. He himself fought through the long night and the scorching day that followed clad only in his thin shirt through which the sun blistered him terribly. Of the other three who lived through it with him only two had trousers.

Struck By Wave.

All but himself had retained their shoes as well but he had to make the trip over rocky ground and through stubborn bush back to camp barefoot. This is his story of the tragedy:

"The moon was at a thirty degree inclination as we set out Tuesday night to cross the lake to Coboconk. It had been dark for hours before we reached land after the accident, so it must have been well past midnight.

"It all happened in a minute. We had just come out of the calm water along Long Point and as we struck out across the Narrows a strong wind caught us. With it came a big wave which caught us broadside on. We tried to right things, but before we could bring the boat around the boat was over. The good camp discipline helped us then. I don't think the fellows had any idea it was the end. They kept cheerful and cheered each other up. It was getting dark and we were all hanging on to the upturned canoe. Mr. Shea-Butcher went in about half an hour I think.

Asked For Missing Ones.

"After that I lost track of the time. The others went at I don't know what intervals. They would be helped up on the canoe two or three time by their chums and would at last lose their strength and drop back into the water without a word. It was awfully hard after a little while for the other boys began to ask where this one was or where that one was and there was no answer from them. But the boys held on gamely as long as their strength would last.

"After a time I counted only nine of us left. I swam around the boat from time to time and tried to cheer the others up and lend a hand where I could. Then there were eight left, then seven, then six—it was hard." Mr. Lambton's voice broke from time to time in his frantic story and his face was drawn and pale as he tried to go on and tried to hold back his tears.

Got Bread and Butter.

Then he came to the story of the four who had lived.

"We held to the boat as the night wore on and it drifted about at the mercy of wind and water. Long after midnight we sighted land. It was Grand Island, three furlongs away. We were able with what strength we had left to turn the water-logged canoe gunwale up and managed to get in and with feet and knees in the water which half filled the boat we managed to propel it the rest of the distance with the single paddle which had remained in the canoe. We reached shore at last and threw ourselves down. I do not think we slept, it did not feel like sleep somehow but more like a state of coma. The sun came up and woke us and we found ourselves quite dry. Waller having kept his trousers on said something about food and started off with Wiginton through the bush to look for a farm house. Waller was a great little leader during the time that followed and he came back in half an hour or so with some butter and a whole loaf of bread. He had had a little money left in his pockets and was able to buy them and the rest of us were penniless and as I had only a thin shirt and no shoes the boys did not get any milk at the farm and did not tell them what had happened. We ate what food we had got and got ready to cross to the camp.

It was eight o'clock when we started, four of us in the big canoe with only one paddle and a piece of board. It was three-quarters of a mile across the narrows. We got half way across after an hour's slow paddling only to be caught again by the same wind from around the point which had capsized our canoe the night before. We dared not risk it again and we turned back and went all the way back to Grand Island. We had four or five hours' sleep after that and as the wind died down a bit we decided to try it again. We reached shore this time but it was not Long Point. We were some distance down the shore and had to cover this through extremely rough country.

"Most of us were terribly sunburned and the trip through the bush infested with mosquitoes was very painful. Sometime in the afternoon of Wednesday we reached the camp and received every attention. Fred was put to bed. Dr. Ross, Jr., of Kirkfield, attended me. I think we had been five hours in the water. Wigington and O'Hara were the worst cases of sunburn."

As soon as Mr. Lambden reached Toronto, tired and worn as he was, he began his sad duty of visiting the families of the dead boys.

Parents Enjoying Picnic Hear Of Their Son's Death

GALT, Ont., July 23.—It was a sad coincidence that the news of the terrible tragedy of Tuesday on Balsam Lake, in which Harry Mills, of this city, was one of the victims, should be received here while the Trinity Church picnic was just at its height in Soper Park, and the parents of the deceased were in the throng enjoying themselves. Owing to the intense heat of the afternoon the sports had been delayed until after the meal hour, the children spending the afternoon bathing in an effort to keep cool. Rev. Canon Snelgrove, was busy running off the races when a messenger stepped up to him and handed him a telegram. He stepped aside and read the news that Harry Mills had been drowned.

The Canon first looked up, Mr. Mills in the throng and told him, and then Mrs. Mills was informed of the tragedy. The parents went home with their pastor, who remained with them most of the night. Mrs. Mills was completely overcome by the shock at the loss of their only son.

The news of the tragedy soon spread and what was a few minutes before a happy throng of Trinity people, soon became a sorrowing crowd.

The late Harry Mills was one of the most prominent young men of the parish and he was much missed at the picnic, since he was secretary of the Sunday school. He was also vice-president of the A.Y.P.A. and a sidesman of the hurch. He was a lad of exemplary life, a willing worker with a most promising career. He was exceptionally popular among the yonng people of the city.

When he left for the brotherhood of St. Andrew camp on Sunday last with Arthur Lambden, the adjutant, it was his second trip away from home without his parents. He generally spent his vacation at Centre Island, Toronto, with his mother. He was a sprinter of note, a good swimmer and an active member of the Y.M.C.A. He was employed as an apprentice draftsman here.

MANY SPURNED THEIR OWN CHANCES TO ATTEMPT RESCUE OF WEAKER BOYS

Physique Failed, But Courage Never — Butcher Thrust Canoe Forward As He Relieves It Of His Weight and Sinks—A Glorious, Sorrowful, Chapter.

The first complete story of the tragedy of Balsam Lake is told by Arthur Lambden, camp adjutant, one of the four survivors of the party of fifteen. He recounts the heroic acts of many of the boys and pays fine tribute to Raymond Allan.

Mr. Lambden was brought to Lindsay by Chief of Police Umphrey on Wednesday afternoon, and put to bed in his own home, for his condition is such that he was not able to proceed to Toronto. At times his mind wandered, and he showed clearly other evidences of suffering. His body was one great sunburn, the result of an exhausted slumber of several hours in the blazing sun after the war canoe with its small quota of survivors finally reached the shore.

His finger nails were torn,

Raymond Allan Showed Fine Nobility in Death

..."One of the boys, Ray Allan of Peterborough, showed a fine nobility in death when in his last strength he decided to try and seek rescue for the others ashore. He announced his intention. He pushed away and began swimming bravely. But, in his already weakened state, the lake conquered him. He had scarcely gone fifty feet—he had not yet vanished from his comrades sight—when he suddenly sank. He had gone the fine way of "Bob" Shea-Butcher."—Toronto Star.

ABOUT BOYS' CAMPS.

As a word of assurance to parents who may be worrying about the safety of their youngsters who are members of boys' camps, it may be pointed out that tragedies like the terrible affair at Balsam Lake have been hitherto unknown at such camps.

At the Rotary Camp at Clear Lake, for example, there has never been a serious accident, and every care is taken in the loading and management of boats, safety first being the inevitable guiding principle on all occasions.

This is true of other boys' camps where every possible precaution against accident is taken by the directors.

The boys are not allowed to take any chances, and the camp outings are usually carefully planned so that boats are efficiently manned and not overloaded.

In fact, it may be said that the youngsters at Camp Rotary are more carefully looked after and are given less liberty in the handling of boats than are the sons of families of private camps at the lake.

The camp directors recognize the responsibility that is theirs, and the safety of their young charges is made the principle aim of all camp activities.

SPEEDING USELESS AND DANGEROUS.

So long as motor car manufacturers boast of the speed performance of their products, and so long as motorists delight in bragging about the speed records they set up, it seems an uphill task to preach in the interest of safer driving the gospel of moderate speed.

The fact that excessive speed is dangerous and usually useless, as the Ontario Motor League puts it, does not seem to have any effect upon the conduct of motorists.

Yet it is true that in a long run steady driving at twenty-five miles an hour will get you there as quickly as varying inconsistent speeds with spurts of 40 miles an hour or more.

In a five-mile run you gain only 4½ minutes by driving 40 miles instead of 25 miles per hour.

What does five minutes time mean to the average motorist coming in from or going out to Chemong, for instance?

And yet most of them drive over that road as if their lives depended upon finishing the journey in record time.

A sign noticed on a small car the other day was neither grammatical nor refined, but it was to the point.

It read, "Speed on, big boy. Hell ain't half full yet."

And in that rather vulgar sign there is much food for reflection.

"GREATER LOVE HATH NO MAN."

Out of the blackness of the tragedy that took eleven young lives one bright beacon light shines out as the Balsam Lake accident is considered.

Young Canadians have not forgotten how to die that others may be saved.

As their fathers and older brothers laid down their lives on the battlefields of Europe, so in the darkness of Balsam Lake on Tuesday did young men sacrifice themselves for their comrades.

The best traditions of the British race were lived up to when R. Shea-Butcher, the camp director, and Oliver Mardall of Toronto jumped from the overturned canoe to make room for weaker boys and sank beneath the waves, and when young Raymond Allen of Peterboro struck out for the distant shore to try to get help and was drowned in the attempt.

Suitable recognition of the conduct of Shea-Butcher and Mardall is being arranged in Toronto, and Acting Mayor Nagle Phelan has taken the proper course in calling the local Council together tonight to consider similar action in regard to Raymond Allen, who tried to save his comrades by attempting swimming ashore in search of help.

This heroic youngster thought of the safety of others, and gave his own life in the vain but glorious effort to bring aid to them.

In some way or other his action should receive community recognition.

THE BALSAM LAKE TRAGEDY.

The tragedy at Balsam Lake where eleven members of a war canoe party of fifteen boy campers were drowned when their thirty-foot craft upset is one of those inexplicable accidents that those well acquainted with camp life, the handling of boats and the art of swimming find it difficult to realize.

There are conflicting opinions as to whether or not the canoe was overloaded.

A crew of fifteen was the boat's normal complement, perhaps, if she was to be used for racing purposes—although it must be remembered that when war canoe crews are at full strength they realize that there is always the possibility that their craft will go over.

Whether fifteen passengers, not all of them perhaps expert in massed paddling, was too much of a load for an after-dark cruise across a fairly wide lake is a matter of opinion.

Survivors, still dazed from their terrifying experience, do not seem to be certain whether the boat was turned over by the wind or was upset through some of the paddlers losing their stroke.

At all events the canoe spilled its fifteen occupants into the water and only four survived, despite the fact that nearly all the boys are described as having been excellent swimmers.

Most swimming experts are surprised that the loss of life was so great.

They would have expected that, granted that so many good swimmers were thrown into the water, a greater percentage than one in four would have been saved.

The cutting off of eleven bright young lives by a tragedy that stalked suddenly out of the joy of a boys' camp holiday has cast a gloom over the whole district.

LOOKING NORTH.

There are not wanting signs that the eyes of America are beginning to turn from the hectic south to the heroic north. We suppose there always will be those adventurous people who believe that fortune is to be found beyond the horizon. This tendency may be in the blood of most of the denizens of this hemisphere, for their parents or their ancestors believed a freer and happier life lay beyond the billows of the Atlantic. So we may expect great movements of people across our continent. For a while the lure of Florida dazzled and held and drew with promises of sunshine and easy money thousands from the northern States and Canada, to the great concern of Chambers of Commerce. Now reality is bringing home cruel facts and disillusion is succeeding golden dreams.

Will the next great trek be northward? There are straws floating past which seem to show that the tide is eddying in our direction. Well, we have no lemon groves, but we have some of the finest apples in the world. Our real estate may not be rising in price as rapidly as the sand on the Florida beaches, but we have valuable mineral ores. We have no tropical scenery, but our forest playgrounds entwine themselves around the heartstrings of all who visit them. Our enthusiasm for salesmanship and advertising may not be so great, but we have a passion for education. In short, in this great Canada of ours we are building for time, not for the moment.

An affectionate regard for Canada is springing up among many Americans. On Monday last Mr. R. B. Newcomb of Cleveland spent a few hours in our city. It was a graceful act on the part of the inspirer of Canada day in Cleveland to come in person to invite Hamilton to take full part in next year's festivities. Mr. Newcomb voices the feelings of many Americans towards Canadians, but perhaps his enthusiasm carries him a little too far when he predicts that the greatest development in the Western Hemisphere in the next five or ten years will be in Canada. At first blush, we would like to think so, but we do not want a repetition of the Florida boom, tenuous expansion and rapid collapse. Steady advance, building and developing as we go, is what we would most desire to see.—Hamilton Spectator.

WANTED—EXPLORERS.

When Byrd hopped over the North Pole in an airplane, and, following him, Amundsen sailed serenely over the top of the globe in a dirigible, the impression created in the minds of many, and, indeed, publicly voiced, was that the last phase of exploration had been reached. Their triumph, it was believed, marked the end of the trail to the unknown places of the earth, and closed, not merely one chapter in the history of discovery, but the whole book. It seemed as if the world had yielded up the last of its mysteries, and for the explorer there remained no other fields to conquer.

That, however, is not the view of geographical authorities who have made a scientific study of the terrestrial sphere and have earmarked, so to speak, for future conquest regions still uncharted or unknown. It is emphatically not the opinion of Dr. Hogarth, the President of the Royal Geographical Society of Britain. According to that distinguished scientist, the situation today is, not that the limit of exploration has been reached, but that there are too few explorers to undertake the work of discovery which calls for completion.

In Central Asia, in Central Australia, in Southern Arabia, and in the regions of the Poles there are still, Dr. Hogarth points out, great tracts of land and water which challenge investigation and the spirit of adventure, that seeks contact with the unknown; but he lays emphasis on the desirability of the quest being conducted on thoroughly scientific lines, and deprecates the encouragement of expeditions which, he claims, are nothing more than "stunts."

It may be doing an injustice to the President of the Royal Geographical Society to assume that when he alluded to "stunts" he had in mind the recent achievements of Byrd and Amundsen. He is too keen a scientist not to realize that the cause of exploration and discovery, which he has so much at heart, can be served in different ways and by different methods; and if the plucky young American and the veteran Norwegian proved nothing else by their spectacular flights to the Pole, they demonstrated that in the organization and equipment necessary to successful exploration aircraft have claims to an important place.

Experiment, after all, is the key to progress in every branch of science, and the aerial journeys of Byrd and Amundsen were tests of the capabilities of aircraft as aids to exploration rather than exploring expeditions in the strict sense of the term. Inevitably, the results obtainable from such hurried surveys under Arctic conditions must fall considerably short of those that attended the older and slower methods of travel and search in regions remote from civilization when, of necessity, the explorer had time and opportunity to study his surroundings at every stage of his progress along the weary trail or across the icefields; but that value need not be discounted before it is more fully determined.

Dr. Hogarth's concern for the future development of geographical science is due, one suspects, less to the "stunt" activities of explorers of other countries than to the inactivity of those of his own. Recent achievements have suggested that Britain is not holding her own in the sphere in which she formerly led, and the reason advanced is a lack of financial support, the organization and equipment of exploring expeditions being a much more costly affair than it used to be. To overcome this obstacle, the President of the Royal Geographical Society proposes the establishment in Britain of an exploration fund to assist in the work of search and discovery which, for the time being, has suffered a slump.

The idea is a practical one that should not fail in its appeal to a people who cherish the traditions, and take a pride in the achievements, of a long and glorious line of navigators and explorers, from the heroes of the Elizabethan age, down through the list associated with the search for the Western Sea and the extension of outposts of the empire, to the Scotts and Shackletons of modern times. If financial aid is all that is needed to re-awaken the spirit of those adventurers, and ensure a continuance of the work to which civilization owes so much, the present inactivity in the field of scientific exploration should not long continue.—Ottawa Journal.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK.

TORONTO, July 23.—There was a slightly firmer tone to the close of the cattle market yesterday, due to the light runs this week. Choice handyweight butcher offerings, and heavy finished steers, were, if anything, a little short of the demand, and prices for the best selections stiffened a little from the earlier decline. Quotations, however, are not materially changed from yesterday, and the small run today was easily cleaned up at steady to slightly firmer prices.

Exporters have shipped east this week about 1,100 cattle, the bulk of these bought outside. The export demand has improved during the week.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 23.—(Canadian Press)—The export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was confined to sales of odd loads wheat, oats and barley. The demand in the domestic market was also of a limited character, but prices were steady.

Further weakness developed in the market for spring wheat grades of flour and prices dropped another ten cents per barrel. The volume of business transacted was fair. Prices for all grades of winter wheat flour were well maintained with a small trade passing.

A fairly active trade was transacted in millfeed and the undertone to the market was firm. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was quiet, but prices were unchanged.

The little business was done in eggs but prices were steady. The receipts were 1,579 cases.

The wholesale trade in car lots of potatoes is now about over for the present owing to the fact that local farmers are now marketing sufficient supplies to meet the requirements of the trade and they are selling at $1.75 per bag for 80 pounds.

Extreme dullness again marked the butter trade and sales of odd lots of No. 1, pasteurized were made at 32 1-4c to 32 1-2c per pound. The receipts were 3,076 packages.

CHICAGO GRAINS.

CHICAGO, July 23.—(Canadian Press).—Big domestic receipts, together with enlarged estimates of yield in Canada, did much yesterday to accelerate wheat selling here, and to make values decline, wheat closed unsettled, 1 1-8 to 2 1-8 net lower, with corn 1 1-4 to 2 1-4 off, oats unchanged to 1-2 at 5-8 down; and provisions varying from a setback of 17 to 5 cents upturn.

More arrivals of wheat from southwest attracted special notice, and in particular, a huge run of 977 carloads at Kansas City alone. In this connection it was pointed out that total receipts at primary domestic terminals today were 3,141,000 bushels, as against 2,173,000 bushels a week ago and 1,782,000 bushels a year back. So far as Chicago territory is concerned, country sales of wheat were the largest so far this season, and there were indications that receipts here next week will be on a liberal scale. All erports at hand pointed to considerably greater yields than had recently been looked for.

According to a Chicago trade authority who is traveling extensively in the Canadian Nothwest, the three prairie provinces are now likely to harvest 23,000,000 to 48,000,000 bushels more than was suggested by this latest official forecast. Another private estimate, in this case, from a Kansas City expert, puts the Canadian prairie output far higher. Under such circumstances, and with better weather conditions prevailing, wheat prices crumbled, influenced more or less to by declines in the stock market and by uncertainty as to financial situation in France. The break in wheat prices, however, brought in some export business, about 500,000 bushels, largely wheat at the Gulf of Mexico.

Good rains and cooler weather gave a downward swing to the corn market. Besides the country was a free seller of corn to arrive. Oats held comparatively steady on account of unfavorable crop advices.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 23.—(Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.85.

Sterling cables $4.85 1-2.

TO WHAT DOES IT RELATE?

Not long ago there died a man who had written a useful text book on science. Wishing to pay a tribute to him, a man who had assisted in editing the book wrote:

"A born teacher, every letter to me contained helpful suggestions. He counted on one grasping his points without wide discussion."

The sentence beginning "A born teacher" will not bear analysis by a grammarian. To what does "a born teacher" refer? Surely not to "very letter" and also not to "me." The sentence should be recast as follows:

"He was a born teacher, and every letter to me contained helpful suggestions." Or the writer might have said:

"A born teacher, he wrote letters to me, every one of which contained helpful suggestions."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

WHAT IT'S ALL ABOUT.

Mrs. Moo and Bow-Wow-Wow
Have had a perfectly awful row,
But nobody seems to really know
Just how the trouble started, though.
Mrs. Moo may have tossed a horn
(As cows have done since cows were born),
Or Bow-Wow-Wow may have said "Hello"
In the only way that a dog can know,
But one thought this, and one thought that,
And now they've had a regular spat,
And Mrs. Moo has pawed the ground,
Bow-Wow-Wow has raced around,
And two good friends have fallen out,
And nobody knows what it's all about.

Bow-Wow-Wow and Mrs. Moo,
Two nice folks as you ever knew,
Now bark and moo when they're passing by,
And nobody knows the reason why.
I certainly hope that folks like us
Will have more sense than to fight and fuss.
For boys can bark, I have heard it said,
And even a girl can toss her head.
But, if we do have an awful row,
Though I can't see why and I can't see how,
If one says that, and if one says this,
An ugly boy or an angry miss,
I hope we're sure, when friends fall out,
That we know at least what it's all about.

DEATH ON THREE PLANES.

By Dr. Frank Crane.

The world's champion spaghetti eater died out in Los Angeles the other day. He advertised that he ate twelve hundred pounds a year. He said it ate it four times a day at the rate of a mile of spaghetti a minute. Put end on end, he boasted, the quantity he consumed each year would reach eight times around the world.

He was found dead in his room surrounded by food. The doctors pronounced the cause acute indigestion. He had eaten himself to death at the age of thirty-three.

That is death on one plane—a low plane.

Turning to another page of the morning paper you read of death again.

A farmer in western Texas heard his wife scream as she was gathering turkey eggs, and running to her he found that she had been bitten by a rattlesnake.

He sucked the poison from the wound and saved her life.

But through a crack in his lip some of the poison entered his system. He steadily grew worse and the next day was dead.

That is death on another plane—a far higher one.

The first was on the plane of animals: the second on the plane of heroic men.

Then turning to another page you read of approaching death of a third kind.

A scientist seeking to conquer disease was forced to make dangerous experiments. From them he contracted a malady which has necessitated more than half a hundred operations.

Yet with only one eye, a thumb and a single finger, he returns dauntlessly after each operation to his dangerous work, and to almost certain death.

Doing work that will make life easier for those he has never seen, making sacrifices for a cause from which he will reap little personal reward, without being spurred on by the fact that he is helping loved ones or those closely related to him, he works on.

He is slowly approaching a death on the highest plane.

Supertwist adds Record Mileage to the comfort of Goodyear Balloons

Scott Jct., Que.
I have on my car two Goodyear Tires which have been in use for two years and have given 19,000 miles. They have never been off the car since I bought them and I recommend Goodyears to all my friends. Edouard Peichat.

Galt, Ontario.
I feel that a letter of appreciation is due your company for the wonderful service Goodyear Balloons have given on my Essex. I have ridden over good and bad roads for 17,000 miles without the least trouble from tires or tubes and I am satisfied they are still good for another 5,000 miles. J. H. Bennett.

Medicine Hat, Alta.
My last set of Goodyear Balloons on a Chevrolet Coach were good for another 10,000 miles when the car was disposed of after running 18,500 miles over all conditions of road and trail. H. H. Bateman.

Victoria, B.C.
I put Goodyear Balloons on my Packard reluctantly because I did not think they would be economical. However, I have run the test and I cannot speak too highly of the service they have given. I received 18,000 miles, which is a greater mileage than I received on any previous occasion. Besides this, I enjoyed greater comfort when travelling. John Nairn.

THE comfort of Goodyear Balloon Tires is obvious. From your very first ride on them you receive all the evidence you need.

But with many people the question arises "Will balloon tires give the mileage?"

And Goodyear users answer "Yes".

In actual service, the Goodyear Balloon has not only equalled the high-pressure tire in stamina and lasting usefulness, but in countless instances has excelled it.

In the important work of perfecting the balloon tire Goodyear went back to the original sources of tire strength.

In its own mills it developed a new and revolutionary cord to solve the special needs of low-pressure construction—the now celebrated SUPERTWIST.

It gives the body of the tire that extra degree of elasticity and endurance which Goodyear knows is indispensable to economical balloon tire service.

All Goodyear Cord Tires, and Goodyear Tires only, are now made with SUPERTWIST.

BILLS PASSED TO STABILIZE BELGIAN FRANC

State Railways Are Handed Over To Private Company.

TAX ON VISITORS.

Measure Purposes Closing Cafes and Dance Halls at Midnight.

BRUSSELS, July 23 (Canadian Press.) — The Senate yesterday unanimously ratified the bill, turning over the State Railways to the National Railway Company. This step, together with the naming of King Albert as financial dictator for the next six months, is intended to aid in the rehabilitation of the currency.

The Belgian franc held its own yesterday, being quoted at 43.95 to the dollar and 213 to the pound sterling.

A cabinet council will meet today to discuss the proposed special tax on foreigners residing in Belgium, or transient residents. The sponsors of the measure demand 50 per cent. of the price of the rooms occupied by transients, or 50 per cent of the amount of the lease of regular residents if they are subjects of countries the currency of which is at a high rate on the exchange market.

Another decree likely to be passed, related to closing of cafes and dance halls at midnight. The tax against foreigners is meeting with much opposition, as reprisals are feared. The opponents of discrimination against foreign residents contend that the moment had been ill-chosen, as Belgium needs the moral and financial assistance of Great Britain and the United States.

HEAVY TAXATION

HONOLULU, July 23. — Associated Press. — Hawaii's bill for taxation purposes of forty-three leading sugar plantations in the territory of Hawaii has been increased approximately $16,076,000 over last year. Their total valuation is $109,593,450.

PUPILS MAKE FINE SHOWING

Douro Children Are Very Successful in Their Entrance Examinations.

DOURO, July 23.—The local schools made a fine showing on the entrance examinations. From No. 7 (Mr. Louis Boland, teacher) all three who tried were successful; also the three students from No. 12 (Mr. Everett Sloan, teacher) who tried were successful. In No. 5 two tried and two passed, one, Anna McMurray, obtaining honors. Thus this clever girl has again distinguished herself. She will be remembered as the winner of the Chamber of Commerce grand prize for essay-writing. Her teacher, Miss Frances Fitzgerald, may well feel proud of the success of her pupils. In No. 1 (Miss M. Weatherhead, teacher) two pupils were successful, and in No. 9 (Miss M. Lynch, teacher) three were successful. Thus all the local schools who sent pupils had splendid success.

Miss Veronica Johnson of Lakefield has been re-engaged as teacher in S. S. No. 8.

Mr. and Mrs. James Sweeney and Mrs. Michael McManus spent the week-end at Fort Ste. Marie, visiting the shrine of the martyred Jesuits.

GUARD IS SHOT SIX JAIL FARM CONVICTS FLEE

Former Inmates Believed To Have Shot Prison Farm Guard.

FLEE IN CAR.

Trusty Switches Off All Lights in Prisoner's Quarters.

HUNTSVILLE, Texas, July 23 (Canadian Press).—Two men, believed to have been former inmates, shot and killed the guard at Ferguson Prison Farm near here early to-day and freed six convicts, in one of the most sensational prion deliveries in the history of Texas. The eight men escaped in a motor car under the fire of other guards. All have eluded capture so far.

The first inkling of the raid came when three shots from an automatic shot gun were fired point blank into the body of a picket guard, Will Rader, 50. Rader was killed instantly.

When the shooting began the building tender, Pat McCoy, a trusty, switched off all the lights in the prisoners' quarters. The man who did the shooting called out the names of six prisoners and told them to strike matches and get ready to leave. He went directly to the inner compartment and unlocked the door to the prisoners' lock-up with keys taken from Rader.

The convicts and their liberators hastened to a parked touring car on the highway, fired two more shots and departed.

Rotary-Y. Camp Canoe Safer Than War Build

The following statement is from the Rotary Club:

The statement made in Thursday's edition of The Examiner in regard to the war canoe that was used at Balsam Lake being sister boat to the one now at Rotary-Y.M.C.A. Camp was evidently made without a knowledge of the facts.

The two large canoes used at the Rotary-Y Camp are 20-foot Hudson Bay freight models. They are 54 inches wide and 20 inches deep, very flat on the bottom and capable of carrying three thousand pounds on a 12-inch draft. This is only an average load for these canoes, and they will carry as much as two tons. When used at the camp these canoes are seldom called on to carry more than eighteen hundred pounds, which shows the margin of safety that there is. The lines of the canoes must also be considered. The Rotary-Y canoes were especially selected for safety, and are very flat on the bottom. While these boats are called "canoes," their shape and measurements will prove that they are safer and more seaworthy than the average launch or motor boat up to thirty feet in length.

Take Greater Interest In Country's Affairs

OTTAWA, July 23. Canadian Press. — George C. Wright, grandson of Philemon Wright, who founded this city, at a Kiwanis luncheon, where he was guest of honor, said he had lived among French-speaking Canadians for many years, and found little difference between them and their English-speaking brethren. There were some qualities which the English could imitate with advantage. One was the more general interest the French took in public affairs, and the other the raising of large families. The latter, if generally followed, would make it unnecessary to bring in people from other countries.

LAKEFIELD NEWS

LAKEFIELD, July 23.—Mr. William George Preston, who died on Friday last at the age of 60 years, was the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Preston of North Smith. His life was spent in Smith until about fifteen years ago he removed to Lakefield, where he resided since. Mr. Preston was in poor health for years, and during the past winter was very ill indeed and his life was despaired of, but he rallied and was able to be about until a few days before his death. Always cheerful and patient, he bore his sufferings with Christian fortitude.

He is survived by his wife, formerly Miss Margaret Northey of Smith; three daughters, Mrs. Melville Moncrief of Omemee and Misses Electa and Reba of Lakefield; three brothers, Sidney of Manitoba and Edward and Bruce of Smith; and one sister, Miss Nettie Preston of Lakefield. Mr. G. Preston of Lakefield is an uncle of the deceased. The deceased was a life-long member of the Presbyterian Church.

There have been a goodly number of beautiful motor boats passed through the canal here, built in Orillia for Americans. Boats ranging in price from $65,000 to $100,000, on which are the last word in comfort and luxury and are magnificiently equipped.

In mentioning some of the nearest relatives of Mr. and Mrs. David Moncrief of Boulder Creek, Cal., who were formerly from this district and who celebrated their golden wedding in Honolulu, the name of Mrs. Henry Lane of Lakefield was omitted inadvertantly. Mrs. Lane is the only surviving sister of Mr. Moncrief.

RICH CROPS DESERVE DEEPER TRUST IN DIVINE PROVIDENCE

Doubts Engendered By Late Spring Have Vanished as Grains Mature.

FARMER'S COMMENT.

Barn Building in Seymour Township Evidence of Sound Farming.

(Examiner Correspondence).

CAMPBELLFORD, July 23.—"It strikes me we should be ashamed of ourselves for not having more trust in Providence," said Deputy-Reeve Bert Nelson of Percy Township in describing the crops throughout Northern Northumberland, which he considers surprisingly bountiful.

"Everyone has been talking of how late the spring was and how things wouldn't get a chance to grow and ripen as if the Creator had suddenly deserted us. Well, the farmers got their seed in, a little later than usual perhaps, and look at the crops to-day. They may not be a record but they should be mighty satisfactory. Fall wheat was a disappointment and a lot of it was plowed up in the spring. It will go about half the average yield, but the spring grains are all in fine condition. Barley, oats and wheat are maturing fast and all look splendid. Corn was delayed for a long time and the pessimists said we wouldn't have any, but the warm weather lately has been bringing it on too. And the hay crop is heavy, some of the fields showing a production not far from a record."

Mr. Nelson's appraisal is endorsed by others from both the townships and towns, and it applies not only to this section but also to the country to the north beyond Hastings and Norwood. Summer has reached its zenith heavy laden, and all promises to be well with the world. Everywhere one sees fields embossed with haycocks so close in some fields that one might almost jump from one to another. Already farmers are filling their mows, and many a barn should be bulging when this year's clover and timothy and other grasses have been packed into them.

"Oh ye of little faith," Mr. Nelson quoted.

New Barns Built.

Not only are farmers busy on the land, and, according to Arthur Redden, local hardware dealer, their immediately pressing problem is to get help, but they are spending money in practical improvements to their farm plants and many new and enlarged barns are seen throughout the country, some of them building, others finished.

On the Sixth Concession of Seymour Arthur Rutherford, Robert Innis and Phil Sluggett have big new barns under way, and on the Eighth Line Robert Cleugh is replacing the one that was burned last summer. On the English Line additions are being made to their barns by Albert Grills and Clem Russell, and Raymond Free is enlarging his barn. Many other farms are re-roofing or modelling their buildings and homes, and this constructional activity is general in the township. Some of the barns are of steel, but some have only steel roofs.

Of late years it has often been said that farmers are spending their money only in automobiles, that mortgages are more numerous than new roofs, and other permanent improvements, but around through Seymour this year the farmers are certainly investing in their own industrial plants, to borrow a phrase from the vernacular of manufacturing, and apparently are not neglecting their homes. If they are buying new automobiles, and at that they may be, they are also building bigger and better barns, more spacious, better lighted and equipped with labor-saving apparatus. In brief, the farmers seem to have nothing to worry about this summer, and if many of them have lately been drawing on their bank funds to pay for construction work, their accounts will soon be replenished if and when the maturing crops fulfill the expectations of the harvest.

VISCOUNT WILLINGDON EXPRESSES GREAT DESIRE TO HELP DOMINION TO ACHIEVE HER HIGH PURPOSE

Points That Former Political Affiliations Have Not Made Him a Partizan—Received Appointments From Liberal, Labor and Conservative Premiers.

PAYS SINCERE TRIBUTE TO LORD BYNG.

LONDON, July 23 (Canadian Press).—"It will be a privilege during the next five years to help Canada achieve her great purpose. I shall do my utmost to ensure the prosperity and progress of the Dominion."

Viscount Willingdon of Ratton, Canada's new Governor - General, made this statement in the course of an address on his new post, which he made at the dinner in his honor here last evening. The function was attended, among other notables, by the Duke of Connaught, former Governor-General of Canada; Rt. Hon. L. O. Amery, Secretary for the Dominions, and Hon. P. C. Larkin, Canadian High Commissioner in London.

Viscount Willingdon paid a sincere and deep tribute to Lord Byng, whom he succeeds within the next few months, and for those who judged from his early political career that he might be partizan, pointed out that this was the fourth and greatest of his appointments. Two had been effected by Liberal Premiers; one by a Labor Premier, and the latest by Premier Baldwin.

The Duke of Connaught, proposing the health of Viscount Willingdon, declared he was confident that the new Governor-General would like the Dominion more the longer he lived there. This had been his own experience.

Hon. L. O. Amery supported the toast.

Viscount's Reply.

Replying, Viscount Willingdon said: "I must own that when I first received, in China, the telegram from the Prime Minister asking that he might submit my name as Governor-General, I felt some hesitation. I think I felt rather like some old hunter, who had been hunted a good many seasons by different owners, and suddenly found he might be going to a new stable under the ownership of a charming young lady, Miss Canada.

"This old hunter had always heard that Miss Canada was a desperately hard lady to hounds, and he felt some doubt that his forelegs would bear the strain. But after thinking it over, he concluded that with a good deal of 'firing and blistering' he might carry on, determined to do his utmost to carry Miss Canada at the top of the hunt for the next five seasons." He was cheered.

"There was another reason why I felt some doubt as to what I should reply. I felt there might be some persons, both here and in Canada, who would be anxious lest my early political activities would make my views and actions of a rather partizan character.

Not a Partizan.

"Let me endeavor to reassure such." He proceeded to recount that he was made Governor of Bombay by Herbert Asquith; was appointed Governor of Madras by Lloyd George; was created a Viscount in the Premiership of Ramsay MacDonald, and his latest appointment was effected by Premier Baldwin.

"I regret to have to say," Viscount Willingdon continued, "that this record probably shows that I must have been an extremely bad party politician, but at least I hope that I shall be an impartial and fair-minded person undertaking the great duties of this important post." He was again cheered.

Lauds Baron Byng.

Viscount Willingdon paid a tribute to Lord Byng, whom he classed as a great soldier, a great sportsman and a great gentleman, "who in a special degree has secured the confidence, affection and regard of the Canadian people."

The new Governor - General acknowledged that during his public life he had had little chance of learning very much of Canada's activities and interests. But in many different ways he had been enabled to realize the influence of Canada and the Canadians.

Met Dandurand.

In this regard, Viscount Willingdon told of the pride with which he had encountered Senator Raoul Dandurand when the French-Canadian statesman was president of the assembly of the League of Nations. He instanced the great services of the Canadian mission hospital in India; also how Madras had secured forest lumbering engineers for the Dominion. In China he had come across young railway engineers who had gained all their previous experience in Montreal. In China, also, he had learnt the increasing importance of Canada's export trade.

Viscount Willingdon spoke in the happiest strain of his recent journey to Canada. "The general impression of the Dominion can be expressed in two words," he said, "confidence and optimism. It seemed to me wherever I went, that Canada was saying, 'We gave our best during the war but we want no thanks because we were only doing our duty; we have passed through a bad time since but we think we see the light shining through the clouds; we are perfectly confident that we shall get through our difficulties. Above all, we are devotedly loyal to His Majesty the King, and determined more and more to become a pillar of support to the Mother Country and the British Empire.'

"If I am right in this impression, then I am indeed proud that during the next five years I will be privileged to help Canada achieve her great purpose," Viscount Willingdon declared.

Need For Empire.

"When I look around, yes, and travel around the world, and see the unrest, the difficulties, the unsettlement and anxieties, I am more than ever convinced of the necessity for a strong, united empire to continue to use its influence to secure peace and goodwill among the nations of the world.

"The Empire is to all citizens a great trust and a great responsibility," he went on. "Indeed I think it would be outrageous for any one of us to shirk that responsibility, considering the great example we are always receiving from every member of the Royal family. It is in that spirit that I go to Canada, heartened and encouraged by the wishes of friends, hopeful that I shall secure the confidence and friendship of the Canadian people.

"I am determined, so far as it lies in me, to do my utmost to ensure the prosperity and progress of the great Dominion," he concluded.

Viscount Willingdon was again accorded cheers at the conclusion.

ROYAL GARDEN PARTY IS BRILLIANT AFFAIR

Largest Gathering Since the Coronation—13,000 People Were Present.

LONDON, July 23.—(Canadian Press).—King George and Queen Mary yesterday gave a royal party in the gardens of Buckingham Palace, to which 13,000 guests had been invited. The gathering proved to be the largest and most representative of royal parties since the Coronation itself.

As virtually all of the guests invited came, the six-acre gardens of the palace, set off by trees, shrubbery and small lakes, was the scene of one of the most brilliant functions in the history of British royalty.

Although the sun shone only at intervals, women guests wore the latest summer creations and men morning coats. The three-hour party was most informal, the only suggestion of formality being on the appearance of Their Majesties, who greeted the diplomatic corps first and then "held court." Their Majesties shook hands with thousands of their guests, and afterwards strolled through the gardens unattended.

The royal party included the Duke and Duchess of York, Princess Mary, Prince Henry, Duke of Connaught and Prince and Princess Arthur of Connaught, ruling Princes of India, and Salvation Army lassies were among the guests, which were drawn from all classes of society.

POINCARE NEARS END OF LABORS

Endeavors To Come To Agreement With Powerful Leaders To Ensure Support.

POSTS FILLED.

PARIS, July 23 (Canadian Press)—M. Poincare, who has accepted the invitation of President Doumergue to form a Cabinet, spent most of the day in consultation with the various leaders, and last evening was able to say that his consultations were finished and that he had only a few conferences before returning to Elysee Palace this morning with his final answer.

He has accepted the undertaking only in principle, which is taken to mean that his final answer will be in the affirmative only if he is successfull in organizing the kind of ministry he wants and can come to agreement with certain powerful influences to support him.

Conference With Radical

It is deduced from the circumstances that M. Poincare has already recruited his ministers and will give no further consultations on that subject, but that a conference will be necessary with Albert Sarraut, the new Senator from Carcassonne and part owner of the Radical organ, La Depeche de Toulouse, which yesterday morning declared that the Radicals could not accept M. Poincare as head of the government.

M. Sarraut will confer with M. Poincare in the presence of Louis Barthou, and the devolopments today may depend perhaps on the outcome of that interview. It is, therefore, possible that if The Depeche does not indicate a change in policy in its next issue, M. Poincare may say to President Doumergue that he cannot form a ministry.

It is understood that M. Briand has already accepted the post of Foreign Affairs. M. Painleve has agreed in principle to take a portfolio in the new cabinet, while M. Chrameck, one of the Radical leaders, is slated for the Interior Department. M. Poincare will take charge of the Finance Department.

CAMP FIRE GOSSIP.

ROTARY-Y.M.C.A. CAMP, July 23.—Napoleon has been given credit for the assertion that an army moves on its stomach, and truly the comunissiarat at camp is a most important item. No call is more welcome, not even the swimming whistle, than the blast that signifies the readiness of "grub." A rush is made and the grace is scarcely concluded before there is a heavy attack made on the eatables.

Boys have reported on their return home that they didn't get enough to eat, but no scarcity is evident. There are no luxuries, but bread and butter, porridge, potatoes and cocoa are served out freely.

An odd—in fact, an unheard of incident—occurred at dinner time on Monday. A boy refused pie! Rare enough at any boyish gathering, this refusal was doubly astonishing at camp, where the active outdoor life develops appetites which accept many things refused in more sedentary days at home.

The kitchen is under the capable supervision of Mrs. McKinstry and Mrs. Roper. The menu for last week may prove of interest and is as follows:

Monday.

Breakfast—Porridge, bread and butter, jam and coffee.

Dinner—Stewed beef, potatoes, peas, bread and butter, rice pudding and water.

Supper—Bologna, bread and butter, prunes and tea.

Sunday.

Breakfast—Bread and butter, porridge, bacon and cocoa.

Dinner—Roast beef, stewed tomatoes, potatoes and caramel pudding.

Supper — Cold ham, bread and butter, jelly custard and cake.

Athletics.

Baseball, swimming and quoits continue the main sports at camp, with a canoe excursion always a welcome diversion. A trip to Kawartha Park for mail on Monday night had so many volunteers that both large freight canoes were taken. On Tuesday afternoon the camp travelled in masse to Sandy Point for a swim on the beach.

Challenge baseball games occupy much attention. On Tuesday the "New Potatoes" boys, who had arrived in camp since July 10, defeated the "Old Spuds," as the earlier arrivals were known, 18-11. The teams:

New Potatoes—Gillespie, Barnes, Hunter, McBain, Marsh, Price, Shiner, Richardson and Ellison.

Old Spuds—Roper, Stevenson, Goheen, K. Herrick, Ward, Clayton, R. Herrick, Franklin and Sloan.

Y.M.C.A.-ROTARY CAMP, July 23.—Swimming would seem to be the main object of existence for a great many of the boys assembled here, especially on these extra hot days, and an anxious watch is kept on the kitchen clock every morning and afternoon until swimming time comes. Those who are not engaged in the daily baseball game give the leader on camp duty a merry time keeping them out of the water until their mates' return. The threat of no swimming for the rest of the day or for the next day is sufficient to restrain any intending violator of camp rules.

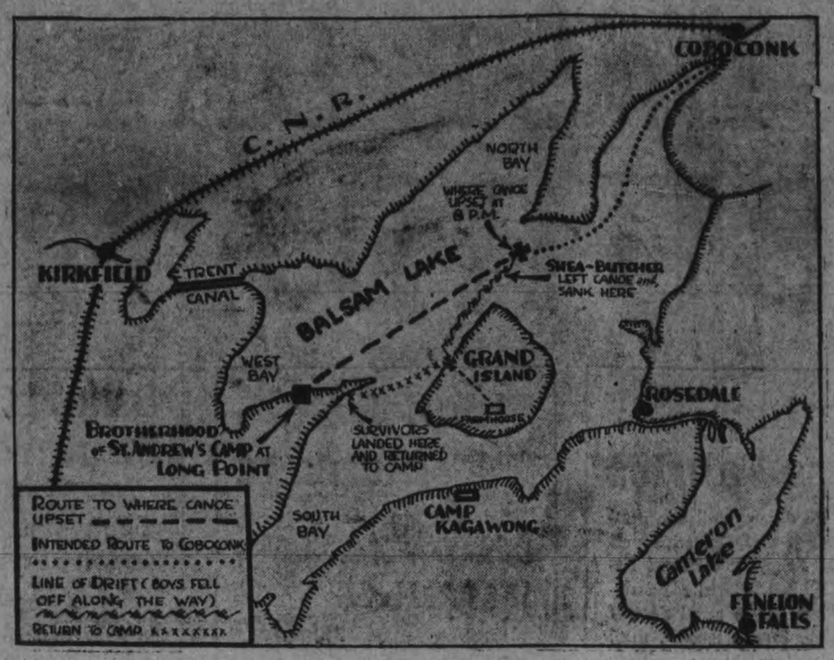
A two-foot springboard, another four feet higher and the twelve-foot platform over the boathouse dock provide amusement for the more capable swimmers. The tyros find a gently sloping bottom between the two docks, and most of them are making rapid progress, gradually venturing out into deeper water.

Safety while swimming is going on is insured by the presence of one or more leaders, one of whom always sits in a high seat on the main dock where he can see everything around.

Camp Improvements.

Repairs and alterations have been proceeding this week, work being done by Mr. Bridgewater, a carpenter from Peterboro, who is given assistance when he needs it by the larger boys. An extension to the boathouse platform and the six-foot springboard are dock improvements, while minor repairs to doors, etc., have been made at the dining hall. A ladder for acrobatics is to be installed.

ROUTE OF ILL-FATED WAR CANOE PARTY.



FOUR SURVIVORS HAVE TERRIFIC STRUGGLE BEFORE REACHING SAFETY

The above map indicates the site of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew camp on Long Point, Balsam Lake, about forty-five miles from Peterboro. The party of fifteen left the camp at 7.30 p.m. Tuesday en route to Coboconk and capsized off Indian Point about half an hour later. For hours they clung to the canoe, one by one dropping off as their strength became exhausted. Finally the four survivors drifted ashore on Grand Island about two o'clock the next morning. After several hours' rest they attempted to reach their camp in the canoe, but were driven back to the island by a heavy wind. Ultimately they made the mainland about three-quarters of a mile from their camp. From there they struggled through the brush to reach their headquarters at 2 p.m. Wednesday. The map also shows the location of the farm house on Grand Island, and the trudge of a mile to it made by one of the famished youths, who went for food.

SHE WAS WEAK, THIN AND NERVOUS

One of the greatest strength givers and producers of good healthy flesh in the world is Cod Liver Extract—it's full of vitamines.

Nothing like the wonderful vitalizing vitamines extracted from the livers of the common codfish to help convalescing people to quickly get strong and well—everybody knows that.

So nowadays medical men who keep up with the times are ordering a tablet containing the vitamines that give to frail folks vigor, strength and weight—a tablet that is known as McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablet—and it surely has proved a blessing to thousands of people who have been sapped off their natural strength after any severe illness.

Skinny men and women take them to speedily put on plenty of good healthy solid flesh and for this purpose they are so extremely good that thin men and women often take on 5 five pounds in 30 days. As a matter of fact your druggist is authorized to return your money if you don't take on five pounds in 30 days.

Great for weak, skinny, backward and run-down children too, and gives them a hearty appetite.

Be sure and ask for McCoy's, the original and genuine Cod Liver Extract Tablet. McDermid and Jury, James Lynch and Bond's Drug Store, and druggists everywhere have a big demand for them, and millions are sold monthly all over North and South America. They are sugar-coated and as easy to take as candy. 60 Tablets—60 cents.

Advt.

The Merchants Guild, a business organization of Denmark, is opposing efforts to encourage Danish people to buy Danish goods that are retailing at one third more than those from other countries.

FOURTH SURVIVOR.

ARTHUR H. LAMBDEN,

9 River Street, Galt, adjutant of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew leadership camp at Balsam Lake, who was one of the four survivors of the tragedy in which eleven lost their lives when their canoe capsized.

TRIED TO KILL RAT

Woman Fractures Leg While Attempting to Hit Rat With Broom.

MONTREAL, Que., July 22 (Canadian Press).—Trying to kill a rat with a broom led to the death of Mrs. Troffie Tessier, 84 years of age. Mrs. Tessier died of complications following upon a fracture of the leg. Her daughter told the coroner's court that her mother had fallen while attempting to hit a rat with a broom.

JAIL BREAKER BRIBES GUARDS

Claims He Also Escaped From Kingston—Twelve Years' Record.

PLOT FAILS.

PHILADELPHIA, July 23 (Canadian Press)—Boasting of his twelve years prison record and apparently proud also of the leading part he played in an attempted jail break recently at Eastern Penitentiary which involved six other convicts and two guards, "Bud" Harding last night recounted how he had bribed the guards and engineered the construction of a tunnel for escape. Harding counted among other jail breaks one at Kingston, Ontario.

"I was first sent to jail for burglary when fourteen," witness said, "and I've never been a free man since. I'm twenty-six now. In eight years I've escaped from every prison they've put me in."

A detailed account was given on the stand of how Harding conceived a plan of bribing the guards to "overlook" his digging of a tunnel from his cell under one of the prison walls and how the work had been carried out almost to completion, when guards became frightened and left the prison causing the plot to fail.

The structures in Manizales Colombia, which have housed the business concerns that were driven from their permanent quarters by a fire last July, were destroyed, recently, in another blaze.

ACCIDENT CAUSED BY GLARING LIGHTS

Port Hope Car Crashes Into Buggy Injuring Occupants.

BAILIEBORO, July 23.—What mgiht have proved a serious accident occurred here on Monday evening about 9 o'clock while Mr. and Mrs. Jeffrey Jewison were driving with a horse and buggy into the village, when a car driven by four Port Hope men crashed into the front end of the buggy, smashing the buggy and throwing the occupants out. Mr. Jewison was thrown upon the hard macadamized road lighting on the back of his head and shoulders, while his wife was thrown between the front wheel of the buggy and the box. The horse frightened by the collision started down the street at a breakneck speed with Mrs. Jewison clinging to the front axle, right behind the horses heels. It continued its flight until it reached the United church where F. and H. Dawson, J. Porter and F. Barnard and G. Harper were arranging the tables and booth for the strawberry festival, which was to take place upon the following evening. The men ran to the rescue hearing the women's frantic yells for help, but the horse was too badly frightened to be stopped. However it turned into the church shed where it had been accustomed to going on Sundays, narrowly missing going over the end of the culvert, and turned into a stall in the shed, and ran in front of a car which was parked there out of the rain. The men who were attempting to stop the frantic animal rushed to the opposite side of the car and cornered the horse with considerable difficulty.

Mrs. Jewison was lifted from the wreck, and Dr. A. L. Russell was called to examine the victims. It was found that Mrs. Jewison had received a bad knock on the top of her head and had also been injured about the body, while Mr. Jewison had his neck and shoulders badly bruised.

The occupants of the car did not attempt a getaway but hurried to the scene to do all they could in assisting to right the accident. They explained that owing to the fact that the street was very dark and it was raining very hard they could not see the buggy for the glare of the headlights of a car they were meeting. The car also contained occupants who lived in Port Hope. As the buggy had no lights attached to it, the driver stated that although neither car was travelling faster than they should have been travelling, still he never know the buggy was there until his car had hit it.

Mr. Jewison's horse was badly cut around the feet from where the blood was gushing when it was captued. The buggy was badly smashed up, but the only harm done to the car was that one tire and rim was knocked off.

The occupants of both cars stayed at the scene until they found out the amount of injury done.

Mr. L. Byers who lived opposite the church got Mr. Jewison to hitch his horse to his buggy, so that he could get home again.

ARTHUR LAMBDON TELLS

whilst across the lower part of his chest was a great red raw weal from the constant chaffing of his naked body across the thwarts of the water-logged canoe. Despite exhaustion, and suffering to an extent relieved by an opiate administered by Mrs. Umphreys, he was unable to sleep, and indeed seemed glad to detail as far as his exhausted condition allowed the incidents of the tragedy through which he had just passed. Adjutant Lambden is a man of 30 summers, a splendid example of physical fitness and very muscular, though only of medium build.

"I will tell you as clearly as I can," he said, "the details of the tragedy. As far as possible I want you to quote my own words and set down the story precisely as I tell it to you.

"At about 7.30 p.m. on Tuesday, July 20, our war canoe with its fifteen occupants left camp and paddled without accident for well over a mile. Everything went well until the canoe entered the narrows, emptying into Balsam Lake, where the Gull River flows into the lake. Here, however, disaster overtook us when our craft, which was in the hands of 15 disciplined young men, with practical leaders well versed in camp craft, was suddenly struck by a wind and heavy wash which arose with startling suddenness. Without warning the war canoe capsized. It rolled right over, finishing gunwale up, but waterlogged to the water's edge. Every member of the crew was conscious of his perilous position. We were three-quarters of a mile from the shore and a strong off-shore wind was blowing.

Made Desperate Struggle.

"Clinging to the boat and in a manner becoming to trained young men, we held a council, and then, on the advice of 'Bob' A. R. Shea-Butcher, our leader, we decided to distribute ourselves, seven on each side of the boat and holding the gunwales with one hand paddle for the shore with the other. It was our only chance of salvation, and we realized it. Shea-Butcher, the only one who could not swim, clung to the stern and calmly directed operations. We knew the chance was a desperate one on account of the cold, the off-shore wind, and the fact that though all except Butcher could swim, we were only fair swimmers.

"A terrible struggle then commenced, but despite our utmost endeavors we made no headway. The off-shore wind more than offset our best efforts.

"It was after half an hour's struggle with the heavy seas that we sustained our first loss. It was Oliver Mardall that went first to meet his maker. During that first terrible half hour his voice had been frequently heard cheering on and encouraging his comrades. Unfortunately his physique was not the equal of his gallant spirit. His numbed hands refused to hold him to the canoe, his only hope of safety. He dropped off and those nearest him brought him back to the boat. Twice he was so returned to the one remaining shred of safety, but his strength was spent and the third time he sank never to rise again. There was no outcry, no plea to the others to save him. Completely exhausted he sank without a word, and I think that at the time only I and Shea-Butcher saw him go.

"The others continued the struggle, shouting words of encouragement to one another. Happily those in front had not observed that Mardall had gone.

Sacrificed Own Life.

"Our leader, Shea-Butcher, felt keenly Mardall's loss. His sense of responsibility, his high standard of duty as camp commander, weighed upon him. In the interest and personal well-being of each boy he had always shown the keenest concern, and I am sure that it was with these things in mind and the knowledge that since he could not swim he was hampering the others that he was prompted to do a sudden act.

"Greater love hath no man than this, that a man should lay down his life for his friends—and this is what Shea-Butcher did.

"Butcher prayed to God that he might save the lads still clinging to the boat and bring them safely to shore. He said to me that he could not swim and that he knew that he was a hindrance to the others, and then without another word he shoved himself off from the stern of the canoe, and vanished, never to be seen by us no more, at least till the waters of Balsam Lake shall give up their dead.

"I knew by Mr. Butcher's look that he was doing this to save the rest of us, because his weight was bearing down the upset boat into the water, and it seemed in danger of doing down with us at any minute. In his look towards me I knew that he meant me to take charge of the party. He looked intently at me for a moment, then at the rest of the party with a significant nod of the head and let go his hold.

"His leaving was certain death. I knew this because two years ago Mr. Butcher had one of his knees so severely injured that he could not swim strongly, and it was impossible for him to make the shore. Both of us knew that as he pushed off, still looking into my eyes.

"Shea-Butcher always tried in life to lighten the burden of others, but never did he try more nobly than when he thrust off to his death from the end of the canoe to lighten the burden of the others struggling to reach the shore.

"Butcher's last verbal instructions to the survivors were to remove shoes, trousers and all superfluous clothing. And this we did, a measure of safety and a last practical tribute to his memory. I believe this measure was responsible for saving such of us as survived the ordeal.

Spirit Never Failed.

"After this the struggle became a nightmare. Chilled to the bone by the wind and icy waters, our bodies water swabbed and our fingers cramped, we desperately tried to gain the land. We saw the sun set and the moon go down. The waves washed over us and still we struggled on in the darkness and the icy water. The boat was bottom up now and it was harder to keep a hand hold. The boys dropped off one by one as their strength failed them. I am proud to say that their spirit never did. They went to their death without a whimper, without a cry of panic and to the last unselfishly trying to help the other fellow. I do not believe that any single one of those young lives was lost without some desperate effort on the part of an exhausted comrade to save it.

"There was another sublime act as the last rays of light were falling and that by a young lad, still in his teens, Ray Allan of Peterboro. Ray saw that there was little chance of the canoe being brought to shore in the way we were attempting it. Three-quarters of a mile from shore he volunteered to try and swim to land to bring help. Leaving the canoe he struck out manfully against the wind and waves. I saw him last about 50 feet from the canoe, and then he passed from sight. I fear that he did not long survive to surmount the obstacles of wind and wave.

"Hours after the moon had gone and it was completely dark some of the survivers still clung to the boat. By this time all were much exhausted with cramps in the limbs and stomach and arms, tired out with trying to propel the canoe. There came a time with each young man when his physique rather than his courage failed him, and despite the fact that each did for the other, everything that was humanly possible, more sank forever.

Reached Shore Exhausted.

"Some time in the darkness, it must have been after midnight, the canoe was caught in the prevailing current that runs off the Narrows around Grand Island, and by this it was carried towards Coboconk.

"Finally the boat was swept along a channel off Grand Island, with four survivors still clinging to her and each trying to help the other. By this time I was in great distress myself. In fact, I think I would have been the next to go. I suffered greatly from cramps and pains in my chest and was unable to drive them away.

"At last we drifted to a point about three furlongs off the land. I do not know which of us made the discovery and suggestion, but we found a paddle wedged under the seats, and one suggested we reverse the canoe and try and paddle the water-logged craft to shore. We managed to crawl out into the water-logged craft and finally, completely exhausted, reached the shore to fall almost senseless and so fatigued that we went at once to sleep on the beach.

"I think the survivors owe their salvation to a physique that was just a trifle more enduring than that of the others.

"On Grand Island, we four survivers (myself) Lambden, Waller, William Wigington and O'Hara, slept till about 9 a.m., when with great difficulty we emptied our water-logged craft and started to paddle across to our camp.

"Half across the Narrows to Long Point, a half mile from our camp, we were caught again in the same winds and water that had caused the tragedy. After another struggle we managed to get the canoe back to Grand Island again and naked and completely exhausted, dragged ourselves upon the beach once more. Here we slept a second time, this period, I should judge, being for five hours. When we woke we were burned and blistered by the sun, which had poured down upon our watersoaked bodies. Somewhat revived, we determined to make a second attempt to reach our camp. This time we succeeded in getting across and landed about three-quarters of a mile below our camp. We managed to reach it after a final struggle through the bush.

"It would be invidious for me to mention more than the few outstanding instances of sublime courage and sacrifice I have mentioned. 'Bob' A. R. Shea-Butcher set the example, and each and every one of the others followed it to the end. There were numerous instances where a boy let go his hold of the canoe to save a drowning comrade and bring him back to the canoe."

Adjutant Arthur H. Lambden was too exhausted to detail further than this his terrific experience.

Went to Farm House.

After the four landed on the island a peculiar turn is given to the tragic affair. Three of the lads were without their trousers, and in this condition of undress, despite the circumstances, the loss of their comrades and superintendent, and their terrible plight, they were not prepared to present themselves before strangers.

One of the four had his clothing on and he was sent to the farmhouse on Grand Island to get food for the little party of survivors. He went to the farmhouse of W. E. Austin, over a mile distant, and met the caretaker, George Booth. The lad asked him for something to eat. He did not tell Booth of the fatality, as his comrades did not wish to be seen without their clothing. He secured food for them and took it back. The lads then ate their food, and once again, their bodies fatigued by the buffeting of the waves, and their minds weighed down by the awful catastrophe, fell asleep from sheer weariness.

Considered Canoe Safe.

On their return journey they passed a short distance out from Camp Kagawong, the camp of the St. Andrew's College boys on Balsame Lake, nder the supervision of A. E. Chapman, physical director of St. Andrew's College.

"We saw them pass and shouted to them," one member of the camp said. "There seemed to be only four of them in the big canoe. We thought they had been fishing. They waved their hands at us and passed along. As far as we could see there was nothing wrong with the party at all."

Sidney J. Manley, secretary-treasurer of the camp, said that he regarded the canoe as a good safe boat.

"With eight others, I came up in the canoe from Chemong," Mr. Manley stated. "Moreover, we all had our baggage with us. We experienced no difficulty in reaching our destination and had a real pleasant journey.

"I regarded the canoe as perfectly satisfactory and seaworthy. We made the trip to Coboconk on Monday, over the same route the unfortunate party started out to take. This party was going for canoes and provisions, and that accounts for the number in the boat. It would not have been so heavily loaded coming back. A number of boys would have come back in the other canoes which they planned to bring back with them. These canoes were to have been delivered at the camp, but, for some reason, were not, and the boys started after them."

A NATIONAL DISH

Roast Pig With Plenty of Dressing is Cuba's Dish.

HAVANA, July 23. — A. P. — Cuba's national dish is roast pig.

The pig, twenty to forty pounds on the hoof, is stuffed with a dressing made with a bread base, to which is added spices to suit the individual taste. It takes the place of honor on "Noche Buena" (Christmas eve) instead of the familiar American turkey on Christmas day.

The most popular dish is chicken and rice. The chicken is stewed and the rice steamed separately. They are combined with few strips of a mild red pepper grown in Cuba, and placed in an earthenware dish and baked. Sometimes eggs or saffron are added to the rice.

THE rich colouring of Peerless Erasmic is like the sunlight filtering through a stained-glass window in some old Cathedral.

It is Nature's tint—obtained from a famous English herb, which is also a skin tonic. It is one of the valuable ingredients which make Peerless Erasmic a balm for delicate skins, and which helps so much in maintaining the softness, smoothness, and clear, healthy texture.

In keeping with the deep purple colour of Peerless Erasmic Soap is its alluring fragrance of dew-drenched violets.

GARDEN PARTY WAS SUCCESSFUL

Large Crowd at Christ Church Affair—Booths Well Patronized.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 22.—The garden party held on the grounds of the Parish Hall on Tuesday evening under the auspices of Christ church was very successful. There was a splendid crowd in attendance, and much interest was manifested in the various booths where a thriving business was done. The weather was ideal and ice cream and soft drinks were the order of the day. The grounds were arranged with rows of overhead lights and the booths were decorated with colored paper and pennants. The band supplied the music for the evening which added greatly to the success.

The arrangements for the serving of suppers of home cooking was well looked after by Miss Bedford, Mrs. A. Linton, Miss Frances Bonnycastle, Mrs. E. Cassan, Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. Pierce. Miss Hilda Bonnycastle and Mrs. E. Runions were busy all evening telling fortunes. Two booths served soft drinks and the assistants, Mrs. Fred Lang, Mrs. Fred Lang, Mrs. R. Dunk, Messrs. N. Hardy, A. McColl, J. M. Bygott and A. Linton were busy people. Many flowers, with Miss Archer as convener, were sold, while Mrs. McColl, Miss Bygott and Miss Martin had charge of the candy booth. Mrs. Lloyd and Mrs. Smith were two of the busiest people on the grounds, serving hot dogs. The fish pond, with Mrs. J. Linton, Mrs. H. Tinney and Mrs. I. Frederick as assistants, was well patronized and all the 'fish' gone before the evening finished.

One booth which attracted much attention was the "wheel of fortune". Mrs. E. Tait and Miss H. Tait were managing the booth and Miss Martin and Mrs. Dickson turned the wheel. One young fellow went away highly elated with his "fortune" and carrying a doll, string of beads and a fan. Miss Bedford, Mrs. N. Lloyd and Mrs. E. Lee had charge of the home cooking booth.

H. Leonard as pianist and C. Searles, violinist, supplied the music for the dancing in the Parish Hall, and many a youth and maiden tripped the light fantastic till late in the evening.

As a whole, the social was a huge sucess and all the members who took part in its success, deserve credit.

CO-WORKERS PAY TRIBUTE TO HERO

Shea-Butcher Was One of Best Boys' Workers in Canada, They Say.

TORONTO, July 23.—(Canadian Press).—"He was one of the best boys' workers in Canada," a prominent Toronto boys' worker said today in paying tribute to Arthur Robert Shea-Butcher, director of junior work for St. Andrew's Brotherhood, who gave up his life in the drowning tragedy at Balsam Lake, so that others could have his place of comparative safety beside the upturned war canoe.

Shea-Butcher, after praying with the boys a few minutes after their canoe capsized, let go his hold on the canoe and started to swim to shore, an attempt he must have known would be unsuccessful, and he was handicapped by injuries to one of his legs. He disappeared under water a few moments later.

Shea-Butcher was of English birth and came to this country as a lad. His parents both died while he was still a child. He was officially adopted by Mr. and Mrs. Jno. W. Shea of Toronto, and adopted their name, while still retaining his own name of Butcher. Shea-Butcher lived for some time in Calgary, where in 1914 he enlisted with the Fort Gary Horse and went overseas.

So great was Japan's purchase of wheat in Melbourne this year that at one time fifteen Japanese vessels were loading the grain at the Mel-

WOMEN'S INSTITUTE ANNUAL PICNIC

Business Session Was Held Under the Trees on Mrs. Armstrong's Grounds.

MILLBROOK, July 23.—The annual picnic, under the auspices of the Women's Institute, was held on Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Will Armstrong kindly giving the use of her house and grounds for the gathering.

The well-shaded lawn was a particularly inviting spot on a hot afternoon, and the regular business session was held under the trees when all the guests had assembled.

The President, Mrs. Chas. Thorndyke, was in the chair, and among other business items, the Secretary, Mrs. Wilbert Thorne, reported the four signboards, decided upon at the last meeting and since ordered, having been erected at the outskirts of the corporation on the main roads leading into the village. A letter from the Town Clerk thanking the institute for this service to the community was read by the Secretary.

The offer of the institute to give financial aid in the erection of a band-stand has not yet been definitely accepted pending word from Ottawa granting use of Government Post Office lot for the purpose.

On motion, it was decided to have a section at the Fall Fair for Women's Institute exhibits, the list to include fancy-work of various kinds, fruit, baking, etc. Prizes for these articles will be donated from the institute funds.

After discussion it was also decided to give two prizes at the annual School Fair, one for the best collection of vegetables, open to boys, and the other for the best collection of flowers, open to girls, each school connected with the South Durham Fair, held at Millbrook, to be allowed one entry under each heading. The prizes will be $2.50 for each winning exhibit.

A pleasant social time followed the business session. For the first contest a picture was passed around and all present had a chance to 'guess the number of dots on grandma's dress," Mrs. John Rowland winning with a hazard of 153, the correct number being 167. Mrs. David Lunn won the big box of bon-bons given as prize for the next contest, her guess coming nearest to the right number when a box of luscious strawberries went the rounds ventured a suggestion as to how many it contained.

The prize for the oldest grandmother present went to Mrs. Johnston, Mrs. J. Rowland's mother, who also had the largest number of grandchildren. A "walking race" for the grandmothers was won by Mrs. J. McComb. Other races were won by Mrs. Macdonald and Mrs. Allie Fallis, in the married women's class, while for the girls under 12 Marian Earle, and over 12, Ruth Thorndyke, were the winners.

In the little tots' race Lazelle Lunn came first, but each child was given a prize. A slow race, in pairs, when a given space must be covered in a certain time, was won by Mrs. S. Pritchard and Mrs. Allie Fallis.

The tea table, laid on the lawn, made an attractive picture with its floral decorations of fragrant pink roses, strawberries and cream being an item of the menu which was particularly popular. Mrs. Armstrong and Mrs. Thorndyke looked after the forty-five guests when all were seated, Mr. Armstrong and Mr. Thorndyke joining the party at the supper hour.

A hearty vote of thanks, on behalf of the institute, was given Mrs. Armstrong for her generous hospitality before the happy gathering finally broke up, and the last car-load of guests had left for home.

STATE OF GERMAN DISARMAMENT REGARDED AS UNSATISFACTORY

Sir Austen Chamberlain Answers Question in British House of Commons.

BERLIN SURPRISED.

Claims Obligations Under Versailles Treaty Being Carried Out.

BERLIN, July 23 (Canadian Press).—Sir Austen Chamberlain's statement in the British House of Commons Wednesday that Germany's position on disarmament was not entirely satisfactory, has caused great astonishment in official circles here which professes to be unable to understand what his complain is.

The German Foreign Office has issued an official statement that the British Foreign Secretary ought to be aware that Germany's disarmament programme, is accordance with the Treaty of Versailles, has actually been carried out long ago. Only a few details remain to be settled, it was stated, and these would have been cleared up some time ago if the Allied authorities had not delayed their decisions for months in many cases.

The Foreign Office statement points out that Sir Austen signed the report, of the League of Nations Commission last March in favor of Germany's admittance to the League. This report said that Germany was carrying out her obligations under the Treaty of Versailles in an entirely satisfactory manner.

Question in House

LONDON, July 23 (Canadian Press).—The statement of Foreign Secretary Chamberlain in the House of Commons with reference to Germany's observance of her disarmament agreements, which has caused surprise in Germany, was in reply to a question from the floor.

The question was whether the situation regarding disarmament in Germany was entirely satisfactory. To this, Sir Austen replied: "I am sorry to say, No."

CHAUTAUQUA ENDS WITH FINE PROGRAM

Solis' Marimba Band Brings Fine Series To a Close.

Last night saw the closing programme of this year's Chautauqua series, and there was a capacity crowd of over seven hundred people in the big tent for an attractive final entertainment provided by Solis' Marimba Band, an organiation of musicians composed of South Americans from Guatemala, who gave a concert of classical and popular numbers on the marimbaphones, supplemented by a big bass viol. Several of the compositions played by this clever sextette, who had a tropical setting for their music, with a crescent moon as an added touch, were ambitious to a degree, as their offerings included two of Listz's Hungarian Rhapsodies, beautifully played, but the majority of the pieces were of a popular order, the request numbers being practically all of this type.

The opening renditions of the evening's programme were "Elizabeth," and "The Dance of the Hours" from "Jaconda," followed by an American composition, "Talking to the Moon," "A Kiss in the Dark," and "The Spanish Shawl," the lovely "Barcarolle" from "The Tales of Hoffman," a Spanish composition with a foreign name, and the little number, "Angry."

The request numbers included "Valencia," "Horses," "Remember," "Then I'll Be Happy," "Sitting on the Top of the World," "Thanks for the Buggy Ride" and "Always," showing, curiously enough, a hundred per cent. leaning toward music of the jazz type, with not one request for older favorites.

Then they played, on their tinkling, dulcimer-like instruments, with the organ tone supplied by low-hung pipes, a number of selections for the juniors, in "Barney Google," "It Aint Goin' to Rain No More," "Yes, We Have No Bananas," and "Yes, Sir, That's My Baby." The children joined lustily in the singing of these pieces, and their elders also took part in "The Little Brown Church in the Wildwood," "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and "Show Me the Way to Go Home," with a final number in "Sleepy Time Gal."

During the progress of the evening programme and the prelude to the afternoon entertainment, provided by the Band, the players received a great deal of applause, they and their director, the genial Mr. G. E. Solis, proving to be one of the most popular attractions of a very interesting series.

Through the kindness of Mr. G. A. Gillespie and other gentlemen, upwards of sixty or seventy children were admitted free to each performance. They were well conducted during the beginning of the series, but proved to be a real nuisance, with their noise and rude behaviour, during the later programmes. A good deal of annoyance was experienced last evening owing to their refusal to be quiet and well behaved.

Yesterday afternoon, Miss Jane Goude gave a popular dramatic programme that was much appreciated, showing herself to be very versatile in her choice of reading, with an especial aptitude for character sketches. Her sketch of an old Nebraska farmer at a fire was greeted with much appeciative applause, as was also her dramatization of "A Scene in a Florist's Shop," in which, without the aid of a stage setting of any type, she re-created, in varying voices, the characters in the florist's shop, giving a fine rendition of the various customers and the proprietor. She also gave one of the small poems of Mr. R. B. Ambrose, the electrical wizard who provided the first night's programme.

Last evening, the superintendent, Mr. B. F. Davies, thanked the people generally for their kindness during his stay in the city, and also spoke of the good work done by the two gentlemen responsible for the Chautauqua entertainment this year, Mr. G. A. Gillespie and Dr. J. J. Craig, who had a corps of energetic lady workers, selling tickets for the series. He also asked for subscriptions to help make up the deficit experienced this year by the guarantors, amounting to between two and three hundred dollars. Mr. R. Gliddon and Mr. Joseph Wearing, both of whom spoke briefly, started the list with five dollars apiece.

Mr. R. E. VanDell, general manager for the circuit that served this city, was present last evening, and gave a brief financial statement. He said that the selling of 500 tickets at $2.50 each, amounting to a total of $1,250, formed the basis on which the local committee and the Chautauqua managers worked. Receipts at the gate, for extra tickets, amounted this year to the sum of $432.60, as follows: 1st day, $18; 2nd day, $64.05; 3rd day, $182.45; 4th day, $49.25; 5th day, $118.85. Of this total, one-fourth went to the local guarantors, to pay for expenses of advertising, lights and hauling, while the remainder, $324.42, was added to the $1,250 going to the Chautauqua managers, making a total of $1,574.42, which he said did not cover the costs of bringing this service to the city.

Mr. G. A. Gillespie informed The Examiner that he was quite sure arrangements would be made to bring back the Chautauqua next year. This year's programmes were of the very highest order and were greeted with large audiences for every performance both afternoon and evening. An increasing interest in this type of summer entertainment was manifested in the Chautauqua series offered here this season.

ACID STOMACH IS DANGEROUS

Sufferers From Indigestion or Stomach Trouble CUT THIS OUT

"Stomach trouble, dyspepsia, indigestion, sourness, gas, heartburn, food fermentation, etc., are caused nine times in ten by chronic acid stomach," says a well known authority.

Burning hydrochloric acid develops in the stomach at an alarming rate. The acid irritates and inflames the delicate stomach lining and often leads to gastritis accompanied by dangerous stomach ulcers. Don't dose an acid stomach with pepsin or artificial digestents that only give temporary relief from pain by driving the sour, fermenting food out of the stomach into the intestines.

Instead, neutralize or sweeten your acid stomach after meals with a little hot water and Bisurated Magnesia and not only will the pain vanish but your meals will digest naturally. There is nothing better than Bisurated Magnesia, to sweeten and settle an acid stomach. It soaks up the harmful excess acid much as a sponge or blotting paper might and your stomach acts and feels fine in just a few minutes. Bisurated Magnesia can be obtained from any reliable druggist in either powder or tablet form. It is safe, reliable, easy and pleasant to use, is not a laxative and is not at all expensive.

Beach Law Violations Increase With Great Heat

CONEY ISLAND July 23. (United News.) — The heat caused a general letting down of formalities, and in some cases, bathing suits, at Cooney Island, with the result that 100 beach law violators faced a judge here.

Caroyl Goodner, aged 20, who said she was an actress, explained that the shoulder straps of her bathing suit were not over her shoulders because the sun had burned them.

The traditional challenge to an inspection in the offending costume by the judge, was accepted for once. A cursory survey convinced the magistrate that the suit was "not enough," even with the straps in place.

But the jails were hot and the judge gallantly suspended Caroyl's sentence.

THEY LIVED THROUGH AWFUL NIGHT.

NO DESIRE TO ENTER INTO CONTROVERSY

American Minister Says He Is In Europe For Family Reasons.

CHERBOURG, France, July 23.—By John O'Brien, United Press Staff Correspondent. — Secretary of the Treasury Mellon is in Europe for personal and family reasons and does not expect to see any European leaders while here, and does not desire to enter into a controversy with Winston Churchill, the British Chancellor of the Exchequer.

These were Mellon's declarations to a United Press correspondent on reaching Europe aboard the White Star liner Majestic to-day. He refused to discuss Churchill's contradiction on Anglo-American debt statements made by him before leaving New York. The British chancellor of the Exchequer had said Mellon was under a "serious misaprehension of the facts of the case," in saying that British war loans from America had been used for commercial purposes.

"I do not desire to enter into any controversy with Mr. Churchill," Mellon said. "My original statement in a form letter, was aimed at clearing up the misunderstandings of the situation. I have not the text of Churchill's speech, therefore I do not desire to comment.' A United Press correspondent handed Mr. Mellon the London Times' report of the speech.

"I'll read it and perhaps made a formal statement later," he said. "But I am here entirely for personal and family reasons. I am going to Rome by automobile to visit my daughter; I do not expect to visit Paris or see any European personages."

Consul Wiley, stationed at Cherbourg, greeted Mellon on his arrival. J. Pierpoint Morgan, also a passenger on the ship, is continuing on to Southampton, the next port of call of the Majestic.

Mellon expressed being interested in the French political situation; he declined to comment on the crisis, however. Those who spoke with the secretary here obtained the impression that if political and financial leaders desire to confer with Mellon the initiative must come from them.

Communist Compares Debts; Certain Similarity He Says

LONDON, July 23.—(United Press.) — Beachcomber, England's most popular Communist, offers the following in the Daily Express, as the last word, editorially speaking, on the Anglo-Americaen debt controversy.

There seems to be a certain similarity between the American debt and my debt to my tailor.

First of all, everything owed my tailor was spent in purchasing his goods."

"Secondly, the prices were fixed by him, not by me."

"Third, all profit goes into his pockets, not mine."

"Fourt, my proposal that I repay him by exchange of goods I owed such as odd bits of furniture, candle sticks, carpets, etc., was promptly rejected by him.

"Fifth, my further proposal that he cancel the debt was also rejected by my tailor, despite the fact that I told him I owed money to several other people."

Boxes of chocolates for the ladies and cigars for the men were also supplied by the hosts, to whom a hearty vote of thanks, in the name of the management and the residents, was tendered by E. F. Mason, a director of the Home.

The air port of Orly, Frane, will soon add a naval aviation group.

MAN LOSES LIFE SAVING TWO WOMEN

Explosion Wrecks Motor Boat Carrying Four People From Dance.

WINNIPEG, July 23 (Canadian Press).—George McBean, aged 20, of Winnipeg, lost his life at Minaki Tuesday evening in a heroic attempt to save two women, according to a story told here by survivors of the explosion that wrecked the launch in which McBean, another young man and two women were returning from a dance.

The explosion came without warning, and the boat caught fire. McBean swam to shore before he noticed the young women in difficulty. He immediately swam back to them and almost succeeded in reaching shore with one woman when he drowned. One of the women reached shore unaided, and the other was helped by persons on the shore.

BRITISH TREASURY DEPARTMENT TAKES ISSUE WITH U. S. MINISTERS

Britain Covered Sterling Requirements of Continental Allies During War.

MAKES NO COMPLAINT.

Recognizes Creditor Nation Is Entitled To Lay Down Conditions.

LONDON, July 23 (Canadian Press).—The British Treasury Department has taken issue with the statements recently made by Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the U. S. Treasury, and Acting Secretary Winston of the Treasury, in which the contention was set forth that Great Britain had negotiated a large part of her loan from the United States for "purely commercial, as distinguished from war purposes."

An elaborate rejoinder was made public yesterday by the British Treasury Department, which concludes as follows:

Great Britain provided sterling and neutral currencies to meet all her own requirements throughout the war, and, in addition, bore the burden of covering the sterling requirements of her continental allies.

"But for the fact that the United States did not feel able on entering the war to relieve her of this additional burden, Great Britain would have been able to meet from the resources she placed at the disposal of her allies, her expenditures in America, and then in all human probability, the British debt to the United States would never have been incurred.

"The British treasury feels it necessary to set forth the foregoing facts because they seem to show that no case for discriminating against Great Britain can be founded upon her use of money borrowed from the United States for the prosecution of the war. No complaint has been treated.

"It is recognized that the creditor is entitled to discriminate between debtors and that a debtor is bound to comply with the demands of the creditor up to the full limit of the obligations. It is only when reasons are assigned for such discrimination which clearly arise from a misconception of the facts that necessary corrections of fact must be made."

NINE PARTIES ARE SEARCHING

fish hooks three or four inches apart. This is being drawn along the bottom in the hope that it may cross one of the bodies. The depth in which the operation is being carried on varies from 30 to 40 feet.

Mr. Lang is in one boat with a local oarsman. While the latter rows the Toronto life-saver fishes over the stern. In another boat Robinson and Sullivan are similarly carrying on.

These fishers for the dead keep jerking their lines slowly up and down as they drift along to see if they have caught anything.

Mr. Lang is tackling an almost impossible task. This is due to the lack of any kind of accurate information as to the exact line on which the drownings occurred. All he has to go by is the local information which at the best is very second-hand.

Demands Guide.

"I must have a couple of the survivors here at once," said Mr. Lang to-day, "at any rate one of them to show me exactly where they were crossing when the canoe overturned. I also want to find out from him which quarter the wind was blowing Tuesday evening. Only from such information as this shall I be able to judge the vast space to operate."

Even with regard to the wind, Mr. Lang is faced with the most conflicting reports, in fact reports given by local people that are flatly contradictory. Men who were fishing in the bay off Long Point about the time of the multiple fatality declare that the prevailing wind at the time was from the south-west, and indeed was blowing so strongly that they had to give up fishing.

On the other hand, people who were off Indian Point at the time say that the wind was blowing from the north-west.

Clergyman in Charge.

Rev. W. F. Wixon, Anglican clergyman of Coboconk, has not only been left in charge of the camp, but will also look after any bodies that are found.

In the meantime, handicapped as he is, Mr. Lang is thoroughly, patiently and conscientiously carrying on in the dark, hoping that the widespread search may result in the finding of some bodies.

It is a very striking thing, this utter absence of anyone with a primary personal interest in the drowned boys. The relatives were here yesterday, and were rightly persuaded to return home, because their wait for the possible recovery of the bodies might be long, pitiful and very trying. But at the moment there is no one present with any authority who has the least official connection with the tragic event. The camp today, cleared of all the effects of the St. Andrew's Brotherhood Boys, living and dead, needs of course no one in charge.

Captain Thomas Sadler, of the government tug, Harwood, which searched yesterday for the dead boys and is again searching to-day, declared that he had not received any instructions from any one what he was to do with the bodies in the event of any being found.

He has heard that the Anglican clergyman at Coboconk is left in charge and is to be communicated with in the event of finding bodies but he personally had not been given any instructions.

Altogether there are nine boats at work to-day, including the Harwood, and those of the Toronto life savers. Included among these searching is Morgan Jellet of Toronto, who has a summer home near Rosedale. He not only visited the beaches of the neighboring islands to make sure that none of the bodies had yet been washed ashore, but he is now out on the lake in his motor boat helping to drag with the others.

Two or three paddles from the war canoe have been found on Delamere Island where they were washed ashore. Delamere Island is between one and a half and two miles from the scene of the accident.

Curious People Carry Away Parts Of Canoe

(Special to the Examiner.)

LINDSAY, July 23. — Toronto life saving guard, under the command of Hillyard Lang and assisted by B. G. Robertson and J. J. Sullivan, commenced work this morning in search of the bodies of the eleven boys who were drowned at Balsam Lake. The guard is being assisted by three experienced men from Rosedale. The crew were out all morning in three row boats, but failed to locate any of the bodies. Commander Lang is reporting to Toronto that it is almost impossible to make any headway towards finding the bodies, because of the fact that he has no information regarding the locality where the drowning occurred. He suggested that one of the survivors be asked to return to Long Point in order to assist in finding the right situation of the catastrophe.

R. Barrows picked up a piece of board this morning which is a portion of the bottom of the ill-fated war canoe. He found it on the north shore near Rosedale. This will confirm the opinion expressed that there is a strong undercurrent flowing toward Rosedale lock. Dawson Delamere of Toronto, who occupied Delamere Island, found two paddles on the shore of the island, which is situated north east of the channel, where the boat capsized. Two other paddles were also found on the same shore by another trapper.

The ill-fated war canoe has been placed under lock and key because over-curious people have been carrying away parts as souvenirs.

AEROPLANE LEAVES

Balsam Lake has very clear water through which visibility from the air should be very good. In addition the deepest parts from reports made yesterday do not exceed 42 feet so that from the air the entire bottom can be scanned.

Seek Other Means

"And if the airplane cannot locate the bodies," said Mr. Miller afterwards, "Then I am going to make application to the Dominion Government to have apparatus which I know of in Halifax sent up to look for them."

He explained that at the maritime port there is dragging apparatus of the latest type which would soon locate the bodies. Mr. Miller is going to the lake on Saturday morning and will stay there until the bodies are all found and all arrangements made for their burial.

Rev. Canon Vernon, Social Service Secretary of the Church of England in Canada, returned to Toronto last night from Balsam Lake, where he had field supervision of the dismal drowning tragedy scene, and today made a blanket statement that he was satisfied that the 30 foot craft would hold a crew of fifteen with reasonable safety.

KIWANIS CLUB WINS NEW CUP

Defeated Belleville Club at Recent Picnic For District Competiton.

AUCTION SALE.

The Kiwanis luncheon today was featured by two exceptionally fine vocal solos from Miss Trucie Pearson, the election of ex-Mayor J. J. Turner to the Grandfather's club, and the presence of two directors of the Chautauqua, J. E. Bendell and B. F. Davis, the speaker for the occasion.

Isaac McNabb presented the baseball cup to the members, which was won by the Peterborough Club at the recent picnic in Belleville. The cup was donated by C. Hanna, ex-M.P. for Hastings, for competition among the various clubs of the district. The Peterborough club has the honor of winning it the first time it was up for competition.

Mark Bredin was booster for the day, and the prize winners were Jack Dewart, Walter Oke and Art Reynolds.

A six pound bag of sugar won by Isaac McNabb and presented by him to the club for auction and won by Ev. Taylor, led to another auction sale today. Charlie Saunders was the highest bidder and obtained the prize packet but immediately donated it back to the club.

Mr. Davis, a director of the Chautauqua, the speaker for the day, expressed his pleasure at being present. It was a privilege, he said, to meet with Kiwanians. He had met them all over the country, from Florida to the north, and he was convinced that men associated in such organizations and coming together had a broadening influence, the effect of which could not be estimated.

Most of the trouble in the world, he said, was brought about by nations, governments or individuals not knowing each other. Clubs such as this, he said, draw men together —they enable men to see the sunny and the shady side of life with the other fellow.

"I am strong for you and yours," he said, "when I see the fine work you are doing. When men lose the ideals of service, they lose the finest things in life.

The thanks of the club to Mr. Davis; Miss Trucie Pearson, the soloist, and Miss Muriel E. Bridge, the accompanist, were expressed in a net manner by Ed. Wood.

The visitors present at the luncheon were R. E. Bendell and B. F. Wavis both of Chautauqua, Rotarians R. A. Brown, G. A. Gillespie and A. Brown; Miss Muriel E. Bridge, Miss Trucie Pearson; J. F. Burnham, St. Petersburg, Florida; George H. King of Windsor.

HAS NO BLAME

conducting of future camps. One central memorial service for the ten young Toronto men of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew's who lost their lives in the Balsam Lake drowning tragedy will be held at St. James' Cathedral after the bodies are found, Canon Plumptre said to-day.

Yesterday and to-day Canon Plumptre has been visiting the parents who are mourning, comforting the mothers and fathers who have lost their sons.

"Every possible arrangement has been made," Canon Plumptre said, "for the proper care of the bodies when they are recovered. Undertakers in the nearby towns have been notified, and the co-operation of the whole countryside, the city and the province will be appreciated by the relatives and friends of the dead men.

"The relatives of the boys need not worry about their effects," Canon Plumptre added. "Everything has been carefully kept and packed and will reach Toronto from Peterborough to-day. The clothes and knapsacks will be taken to the Parish House at St. James' Church, and the parents or relatives will be notified to come and claim whatever is unidentified."

No Blame.

Canon Plumptre indicated that he had no blame or criticism to make. He attributed everything to a tragic and regrettable accident. Offers of help and assistance have been unstinted, he declared. He thought it probable that the use of one of the Ontario flying boats, as suggested by the Premier, would assist in recovering the bodies.

FLOOD DESTROYS SEVEN VILLAGES

Lanube River Overflows Its Banks Causing Great Damage.

BELGRADE, July 23 (Canadian Press)—Seven villages have been destroyed through the bursting of dams in the region of Batchka, due to a flood in the Danube river, which has now lasted for three weeks. Great damage has been done by waters to the crop and property at various places. The ministry of agriculture estimates the loss up to the present at $50,000,000.

Novisael district is flooded. Plains of the Save river and of the Danube near Belgrade are completely flooded.

The situation is aggravated by heavy rainstorms.

It is said that thousands of horses have been destroyed in affected regions and that much cattle and livestock has been drowned. The damage to crops is great, but it is declared to be well offset by the excellent prospects in the other regions of the kingdom.

Shoulder, Arms and a Dip to the Body Are New

THERE is a great deal of smoke and very little fire back of the talk of higher waistlines. With the shortening of the skirt, the waistline has risen a trifle to maintain a certain ratio between the upper and lower part of the frock. But it is in no sense high or even normal. It rests on the hips, undulating at times, drawn up at the front under a Gipsy girdle at others, and now and again cut higher in front in a point or decorative outline. The dip in front and back in the frock illustrated is new and gives quite a fresh look to the long body which also has the shirred shoulder and sleeve seen in so many French frocks.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

JUDY DISCHARGES HERSELF.

"Did-the-other-party-call-you - or - did-you-call-them?" finally said central in that quick monotone of the telephone operator.

Without waiting to be instructed, I hung up and called Joan's number again, for I knew that she would probably call the store, not knowing I was in a public booth.

After a long delay the maid again answered me.

"I was cut off, I was cut off," I said.

"I hardly think so," she answered. "You see Miss Meredith fainted."

"Is she all right now? Has she come to?"

"Yes, miss, but I don't think she can come to the phone."

"Judy, Judy, don't go away!" This time it was Joan's voice instead of the maid. Evidently she had recovered from the fainting spell.

"Is it true that Barry is dead?" she asked in a trembling voice.

"Yes. Are you well enough to come down immediately. You and I must go and see his wife."

"Not Lela! I couldn't see Lela now!"

"Yes, you can and will," I said. "That poor girl is much worse off than you."

After a slight hesitation Joan said, "I'll be there just as soon as I can get into a street dress. Can you get away from the store?

"Dad's awfully fussy about letting people out during hours, you know. Some one would be sure to see us if we met outside of the store, and he would wonder how I came to know you and probably discharge you."

"Never mind me, Joan. Although your father does not yet know, I have discharged myself. I have left his employ."

"Good. Then you can come and live with me. I need a companion."

"That remains to be seen, Joan, dear."

As I left the booth I had a feeling that someone was hovering around, and sure enough when I reached the sidewalk in front of the store I met Jerry.

As I caught a view of his sincere, illuminating smile I drew a long breath. I knew that all men were not wrong. Here was one that was honest and true.

"Judy, will you forgive me?" he said, clasping both my hands in his, for instinctively when I first saw him I held them out to him. "I know that I was a brute last night. I should have known that whatever you did, you were doing what was right. Judy, I love you so much that the very thought of you dining with another man like Robinson makes me see red."

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The ancients believed that envy was the greatest enemy to man's happiness, that his health and fortune could be destroyed by the green-eyed monster in the eyes of others. Therefore, the carnelian, today's talismanic gem, is particularly valuable since it serves as a protection against envy.

Peace is promised by today's natal stone, the agate. It is said to protect those born on an anniversary of this date from all danger, especially from misfortunes attendant on associations with evil companions.

Light blue is today's color; especially should it be used in decoration for weddings and social functions given for the young people.

The white violet is the lucky flower for this day.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

FRIDAY, JULY 23, 1926.

Until late in the day the planetary government is held to be rather meancing, according to astrology.

Mars is in an aspect which should impart confidence in large enterprises and especially in large contracts for construction work.

The influence of the stars should be fairly stimulating and exhilarating, even though weather conditions in certain parts of the country may not be conducive to exertion.

Sudden changes in temperature may be expected and there may be as sudden variations in mood among men and women.

There may be a tendency toward intrigue and deceit under this sway which is not favorable for transactions in which good faith is an asset.

Storms at sea again are foretold and there may be, also, accident on battleships.

Ocean currents are to show strange vagaries that may be accountable for increase of cold weather.

Bathing should be indulged in with caution, for the water will take many victims, it is foretold.

One of the waning virtues, which is to be cultivated assiduously, occultists warn, is truthfulness and this should become fashionable again, if individua progress is to be assured.

Sentimentality will be on the increase at this time to an almost alarming degree, it is prophesied, for men and women will be as fickle as they are emotional, if the aspects are rightly read.

Mars is in an aspect supposed to affect the people generally, causing forcefulness and positive point of view, which bring about reforms.

Much uncovering of political corruption is indicated and there will be unusual bitterness in the autumn campaigns.

Persons whose birthdate it is may have a yaer marked by unexpectable vexations and hindrances, which can be overcome.

Children born on this day may be impulsive and intense in nature. Boys may be inclined to commit rash acts and girls are likely to be headstrong, but able to succeed.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

JOHN ADAMS AND ABIGAIL SMITH.

The letters of Abigail Smith Adams and her husband, John Adams, second president of the United States and father of the sixth president, form a volume of interesting reading and of more than ordinary charm are the letters of Mrs. Adams. And they are the more to be admired when the fact is considered that she never attended school and that her educational opportunities in early years were very limited.

In a letter dated August 29, 1776, from Boston, she thus expresses her creed in life:

". . . I wish for peace and tranquility. All my desire and all my ambition is to be esteemed and loved by my partner, to join him in the education and instruction of our little ones, to sit under our vines in peace liberty and safety.

"Adieu, my dearest friend! Soon, soon return to your most affectionate 'Portia'."

From Philadelphia, on the 22nd of September, in the same year John Adams writes to his wife:

". . . I am at a loss what to write. News we have not. Congress seems to be forgotten by the armies. We are most unfaithfully served in the post-office as well as many other offices, civil and military. Unfaithfullness in public stations is deeply criminal. But there is no encouragement to be faithful. Neither profit, nor honor, nor applause is required by faithfulness. But I know by what. There is too much corruption even in this infant age of our republic. Virtue is not in fashion. Vice is not infamous.

"I, October, 1776.

"Since I wrote the foregoing I have not been able to find time to write you a line. Although I cannot write you as often as I wish you are never out of my thoughts. I am repining at my hard lot in being in town from you much oftener than I ought. I have often mentioned to you the multiplicity of my engagements and have been exposed to the ridicule and censure of the world for mentioning the great importance of the business which lay upon me; and if this letter should ever see the light it would be again imputed to my vanity that I mention to you how busy I am. But I must repeat it by way of apology for not writing to you oftener. From fourt o'clock in the morning until ten at night I have not a single moment which I can call my own. I will not say that I expect to run distracted, to growt melancholy, to drop in apoplexy, or fall into a consumption; but I do say it is little less than a miracle that one or other of those mi fortunes has not befallen me before now.

"Your favors of 15th, 20th and 23rd September are now before me. Every line from you gives me inexpressible pleasure, but it is a grief to me that I cannot write oftener to you . . . ."

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

KATHERINE.

Like Mary, the charming name of Katherine has an almost illimitable history, and its derivations and contractions are endless. It signifies pure, since it was first borne by a maiden martyr, whose name was chosen as the center of an allegory of intellectual religion. Katherine in Greek became Catharina in the Latin tongue. Going further back, it can be found that this martyred Katherine was so-called for another and earlier Katherine, a virgin martyr of Alexandria, whose history is unknown. Some historiaW czdit her with being the daugh er of a King of Egypt, but this contention cannot be substantiated. However it is Katherine's purity and sanctity are unmistakable.

The martyrdom of the original Katherine is recorded in literature and art—the destruction of the wheels that were to have torn her asunder; her martyrdom by the sword, and the translation of her body by angels to Mount Sinai, at whose foot stands a convent bearing her name, where she is adored perpetually, are all familar themes to the master of pen and brush. Passing from the sublime to the practical, the fireworks called Catherine-wheels are an allusion to the instruments of torture which were destroyed by lightning and the tiny brown bird known as the Kitty-wren is so-called from association as her sacred bird.

The Crusaders brought home the story of Katherine's martyrdom and her name spread in fame throughout the West. The Italians had a Santa Caterine, of Sienna, whose influence was potent during the Middle Ages, thus adding another link to the chain of sanctity which surrounds the name of Katherine.

Another famous Katherine was the Countess of Salisbury, heroine of the Garter. John of Gaunt had a daughter, who, as Queen of Castille, made Caterina a favorite in Spain, whence it was returned to England with Katherine of Aragon. Catherine de Valois, Queen of Henry V, brought it to France. Several of the queens of the much-married Henry VIII. bore the name of Catherine.

The "k" in Katherine is the Teutonic rendition and the shrewish Katherine of Germany, as well as the far-famed Russian empress are examples of the bad repute of that spelling, but the faithful Spanish Catalina, as English queen, wrote herself Katherine and so redeemed the name, while the "Shrew" was really Caterina and the Russian Empress was sometimes called Ekaterina.

Kathleen, Kitty, Kate and other derivatives of Katherine will be discussed tomorrow.

Now, whoever heard of a baldheaded skunk? I never did, and all I can say is that one is likely to run into almost anything in nature. The very time we think we have seen all the show is just when some new stunt comes on the screen and we stand at the back of the theatre watching the picture, because we gave up our seats too soon.

Well, the bald headed skunk was a new one on me. I was asked by an old lady one day, "What is the name of that baldheaded bird we see flying about the meadows?"

Well, I was just scratching my old bean for mental pictures of birds, to see which one looks baldheaded, when a wee chap who was with me answered the old lady, much to my astonishment, as follows: "I guess you are thinking of the Skunk Blackbird."

Good night! First we have a baldheaded bird and next thing I know it becomes a baldheaded skunk blackbird! I gave up the job right there and then, and I said to them both, "For the love of Mike tell me what it looks like! this invention of fancy terms is driving me crazy."

The lad had no chance. The old lady started in to tell me about how the bird has a bald head. "You see," said she, "it has hair on top, but all the back of its head is bald."

In a second I knew it was the Bobolink. The lad had called it by a name which I had never heard before, a name which is no very fitting, "Skunk blackbird."

Of course, the Bobolink is a cousin to the blackbirds, but he has a very fine reputation as an insect eater and healper on the farm. During May and June he eats ninety per cent. insect food, and what return do you suppose the farmers give him for this service? They run their mowers over the Bobolink nests just about the time the young are half grown, destroying the whole works. Some day the farmers will grow wiser.

The bobolink song is a whimsical jumble of the sweetest and most scintilating melody possible. Roughly speaking, he is white and black, with a pale yellow bald spot on the back of his head.

Daily Short Story

SOON TO BE MARRIED

A girl and a man leaned over the Matsonia's bow rail and contemplated the curling, swishing green water. It had been some time since either spoke and then it had been the young man who had dropped into an abyss of silence a few words weighted with significance.

"I expect my fiancee will meet me at the dock," he said.

The girl at his side had made no comment at first, but had the man's gray eyes not been fixed on the dim distant shore-line that was California, he might have seen that her lip quivered and her hand gripped the rail tightly.

When she did speak, she was smiling and her eyes drew and held his steadily. "I am soon to be married myself!" she said. "Congratulations!"

But some minutes later, Patty Wayne entered her stateroom, only to fling herself face downward on her berth.

"Cruel — cruel — cruel!" she moaned. Then she sat up resolutely. "Well, it's over," she said. "And it really wasn't his fault. I let myself care but it is only fair to say that he never took any advantage. I just dreamed and let myself think—" in spite of her efforts at self-control the tears came again.

Patty Wayne and Dick Comstock were each r turning from a vacation spent in Hawaii's sunny Paradise. Strangely enough, they had wandered throughout the islands without meeting, only to fall into casual acquaintanceship the very afternoon that the Matsonia left Honolulu. A moonlight night with its witchery of shining heaven and gleaming translucent water had quickly touched their relation with something else than mere acquaintanceship. And as day succeeded day, each seemed to find in the other the perfect means of whiling away the hours.

And to Patty, at least, pretty little brown-eyed kindergarten teacher, the moment when the journey would end was something not to be thought about. Unless—

Patty had not realized how very much she was depending upon that "unless" until that bitter ten minutes at the bow rail. She hadn't once suspected that there had been any other girl in Dick's life. He had spoken of years away at college, of more or less erratic wanderings about the world, but of nothing that hinted at any tie which would hold him to a settled existence.

On the other hand, he had not made love to Patty. And now she thought she must have been mistaken when she saw him seriously looking at her with love and longing in his eyes. Probably, she told herself scornfully, wh n she supposed he was looking at her, he was in reality seeing the face of his absent fiancee.

They said good-by just before the steamer docked, standing beside the gangplank, amidst a great creaking of hawsers about the winches.

Patty let him hold her cold little hand a bit longer than necessary, but surely so much was permitted one whose whole heart ached to feel his arms about her.

"Good-by, Patty," he said quietly. "I—oh, hang it Good-by."

"Good-by, Dick. I hope you'll be very happy!" But the last she saw of him as she turned to go ashore was a pair of miserable gray eyes and a white, set mouth.

She had finished seeing about her baggage and was wondering vaguely just where to find a decent restaurant when someone came quickly up behind her.

"Patty—oh, Patty!"

It was Dick and in his hand was a telegram. He didn't look particularly happy, but his eyes had lost their forlorn expression.

"I did want to tell you the whole story," he was saying. "Even if, under the circumstances, it won't do any good."

He paused, giving Patty a chance to ask somewhat coldly, for all the unreasonable beating of her heart, "Where's your fiancee?"

"That's what I wanted to explain," he said eagerly. "You see when I was a kid in high school, I was sweet on a girl and—well, we got engaged. We kept it up while I was in college and although afterwards I didn't see so much of her, still I always supposed some day we'd be married.

"Then I went to Hawaii—and well, the place sort of got under my skin. The beauty, and all, but I knew I wouldn't want to be there with Flossie—which told me a whole lot. So I wrote her as nicely as I could, hat I, thought we'd both made a mistake, being so young and—well, the day before I left Honolulu I got a telegram, saying that she would hold me to my promise and would meet me when I landed."

"Is—is that it?" Patty indicated the yellow paper.

"This? Oh, no. Wait till I finish. I met you and fell in love. But what could I do, bound to another? So I let you go out of my life. When we docked a messenger boy handed me this."

He held out the paper and Patty read.—

Mr. Richard Comstock:

I had to punish you a little first. But don't worry. I am soon to be married myself.

Florence.

"You see—" said Dick. "And—well, I just had to tell you, even if you are engaged to another."

"Me? Engaged? Oh—" and Patty blushed, remembering. "I just said that in—in self-defense!"

Dick gripped her arm. "Then you're not going to be married soon?"

"No—that is—I mean —" and then they both laughed joyously . . .

YOUR HEALTH

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.,
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

IF DEATH CERTIFICATES TOLD THE TRUTH.

In a London magazine I saw a little skit headed "Truthful Death Certificates." This is worth reading, so I quote it for your benefit:

"Some day we will tell the truth in the death certificates and the reports will be made out like this:

'Died after 30 years of over-eating.'

'Smothered himself to death; worked and slept in unventilated rooms.'

'Poisoned by his wife, who used wrong cooking methods.'

'Burned out; slept only six hours a night.'

'Killed by high living.'

'Good health is a luxury that all of us can enjoy if we are willing to play the game on a long law of averages.'"

You will laugh over this article, but in it is hidden great wisdom. These certificates are true to fact. They tell the story of what happens to a good many men, especially city men.

There are certain simple rules of conduct which must govern every life, or disaster is on the way. In the first place there must be abundant sleep.

I know a man who goes to bed at midnight and gets up at four o'clock in the morning to play golf. He has an idea that exercise in the open air is all he needs to be well and happy.

No one can question that exercise in the open air is desirable for everybody, but it cannot take the place of sleep. Sleep restores the nervous system and gives the tired muscles time to recover their vigor.

But it is not enough to sleep a lot. This sleep must be had in a well ventilated room. Otherwise, as is suggested in the newspaper article, the victim finds himself smothered to death.

Over-eating or eating poorly-cooked foods is one of the most common of vices. There can be no health or long life by one who indulges in such practices.

By high living we mean late hours, badly ventilated rooms, rich and unneeded food, mental excitement and wicked indulgence of every sort. One has but to watch the career of those who indulge in high living to realize how fatal it is. Not only is it fatal so far as life is concerned, but it is fatal to the usefulness and effectiveness of every career.

Read and ponder this article. It is worth while.

New Zealand has an auto-buying spree and the people continue to acquire cars in spite of warnings by the Government and banks.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite Shawnee Okla

Charles W. Barton, publisher of The Sheridan (Wyoming) Post-Enterprise says:

THAT there was a time when the religious press preached religion in one column and an advertising fraud in another.

WHEN—it was considered good business to advertise goods worth 5.00 at a bargain—marked down from 25.00.

WHEN—it was ethical for an advertiser to claim that his product would work miracles when in reality it was a fake.

Times have changed. Today the Vigilance Committee of the Associated Advertising Clubs of the World furnishes all newspapers information regarding fraudulent advertising. Hundreds of thousands of dollars are spent annually by this organization to investigate frauds FOR YOUR PROTECTION.

Today the crook does not dare to advertise because he knows he will be sent to jail.

The public is educated to believe that only honest merchandise is advertised. The public is suspicious of firms which do not advertise. The people say, "If he is afraid to tell the world about his product there must be something wrong with it."

Frankness disarms suspicion. People are only afraid of those things which they do not understand. If you have an honest product the more you can tell the public about the honest way in which it is manufactured the better the product will sell. If you try to make the consumer take a substitute for an advertised product he becomes suspicious and quits your store.

Advertising cuts down the selling cost by making it unnecessary for the salesman to explain the merits of a product concerning which the people are already fully informed and which they already secretly desire.

Doctors may think it unethical to advertise, yet they do not fail to hang out their shingles. Advertising today is one of the greatest blessings which has come to mankind because it enables rich and poor alike to share in the benefits of modern civilization. The wise merchant realizes that with the progress of events he must continue to put a certain amount of each year's profits into advertising if he wishes his business to grow.

The moral is plain—if you believe in your product don't be afraid to tell the world about it.

The Woggely Tooth

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS

FEAR of possible physical discomfiture isn't by any means limited to children. We waste a terrific amount of energy dreading things which, when actually met, aren't half bad—having our teeth fixed, for instance. If we can reach a child to walk right up, mentally, and meet fear and the-things-which-have-to-be-anyway, we have taught him to spare himself much unpleasantness and waste of energy

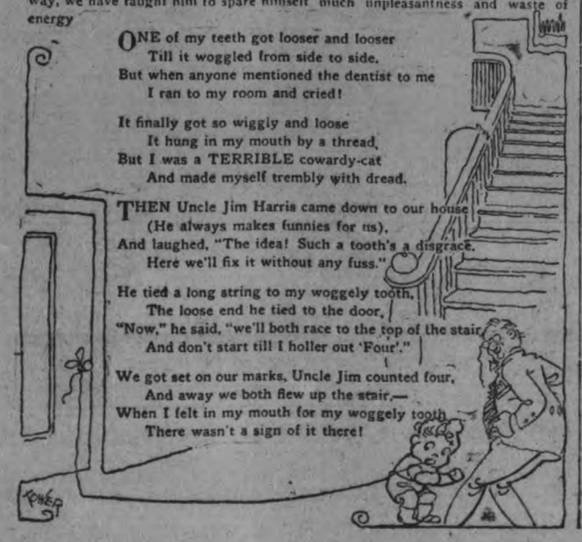
ONE of my teeth got looser and looser
Till it woggled from side to side.
But when anyone mentioned the dentist to me
I ran to my room and cried!

It finally got so wiggly and loose
It hung in my mouth by a thread,
But I was a TERRIBLE cowardy-cat
And made myself trembly with dread.

THEN Uncle Jim Harris came down to our house
(He always makes funnies for us),
And laughed, "The idea! Such a tooth's a disgrace.
Here we'll fix it without any fuss."

He tied a long string to my woggely tooth,
The loose end he tied to the door,
"Now," he said, "we'll both race to the top of the stair
And don't start till I holler out 'Four'."

We got set on our marks, Uncle Jim counted four,
And away we both flew up the stair.—
When I felt in my mouth for my woggely tooth
There wasn't a sign of it there!



UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S RADIO.

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

One afternoon, when Nurse Jane had her day out and Mrs. Longears had gone visiting and the rabbit children were playing hide the roller skates, Uncle Wiggily fell asleep on the back porch.

The rabbit gentleman did not fall very far, so he did not get hurt. In fact, he only fell into dreamland. He thought, as he dreamed, that he had a new radio with about sixteen forty 'leven tubes, so he could tune in the North Pole and hear Santa Claus talking to a reindeer.

"My! That was a jolly dream!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily, rubbing his eyes as he awakened. "I wonder if it really happened. Maybe there is a new radio in my hollow stump bungalow!"

So real did the dreams seem that, all excited, the rabbit gentleman hopped up and went inside. But, no, there was his old five-tube set, just the same as before he had fallen asleep.

"My old radio is pretty good, though" said Mr. Longears to himself. "And, now that my wife is away, so she won't tease me to tune in about how to make a new dress out of an old bed quilt, and since Nurse Jane is out and can't ask to listen to directions for making noodle soup out of rice cakes, and with the children all away, so they won't tease for the bedtime story, I'll just tune in my radio to suit myself."

So Uncle Wiggily sat himself down in front of the dials and began to turn them this way and that way, listening to the queen sounds that came through the receivers on his ears.

"This is Oshkosh!" said a voice out of the air, and Uncle Wiggily listened to a concert from that nice place.

"And, this is Walla Walla," said another voice, and music came from the city with the double name.

"Now you will hear the Squsnkum Silver Cornet Band," spoke a third voice and then music began to play like distant mosquitos humming, and Uncle Wiggily was much pleased.

"It's fun to have the radio all to yourself," said Mr. Longears with a laugh as he turned back to Oshkosh. And, he was just hearing a talk on how to make apple trees grow cabbages when, all of a sudden, there was a noise at the door and a voice growled:

"What are you doing?"

"Listening to the radio, my dear," said Uncle Wiggily, thinking it was his wife. Then he was sorry he had been so polite, for it was the Woozie Wolf who stood there in the open door, glaring at the rabbit gentleman.

"Listening to the radio, eh?" snarled the bad chap.

"Yes," answered the rabbit, wondering what he could do to keep from being nibbled. "Wouldn't you like to hear a bedtime story?"

"No, I wouldn't!" growled the Wolf. "It's too early to go to bed, and, besides, I don't care for that sort of stuff! I want some nibbles, I do!" and he glared hungrily at the rabbit's ears.

"Oh, just listen to this, would you!" cried Uncle Wiggily, pretending to be much amused, though really he was too nervous to hear what was going on over the air.

Before the Wolf could stop him, Uncle Wiggily clapped the receivers over the bad chap's ears and then, reaching down to where the big, strong, storage battery stood, the bunny took off two of the electric wires and brought their points toward the wolf's tail.

"Do you hear anything?" asked the rabbit.

"No, not a thing," growled the bad chap. "You'll have to make it stronger for me. But, don't think, just because you let me listen to your radio, that I won't nibble you. For I shall—all the more. But make it stronger."

"All right—I'll make it stronger!" cried the rabbit, and then he touched the wires from the storage battery to the Wolf's tail.

There was a big, sizzling spark, a flash of fire and that Wolf leaped up in the air with a howl crying:

"What happened? What happened? Who shot me?"

"Nobody shot you!" laughed Uncle Wiggily as the bad chap tore the phones from his ears and ran out of the bungalow. "You said to make it stronger and I did. I gave you a strong electric shock from my storage battery. Now will you be good?"

"I guess I'll have to!" howled the bad chap. "Oh, wowzie!"

And, if the pepper box doesn't put salt in the sugar bowl to tease the teapot, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's acorn pudding.

SAVE YOUR TEETH

SCHOOL DENTAL SERVICES.

Reading, 'riting and 'rithmetic—all very fine and quite necessary in the development of the growing child to his full mental stature, and it is quite right, too, that the emphasis should be placed here, conforming to Pope's aphorism, "the mind's the measure of the man." But would you house a first-rate engine in a second-rate or leaky craft? Not consistently so! Yet this is what you do when due regard is not had for bodily fitness concomitant with the mental efficiency that you are eager to develop in the school age child.

What are the facts?

In the examination of school children of various districts throughout the country, from seventy to ninety per cent of the pupils examined were found to have dental disease. Little craft of beauty and promise, yet being launched out on the sea of life unsound!

Now it is patent that a large proportion of the children of even well-to-do parents do not receive regular dental treatment; while as for the children of the poor, they are only taken to the dentist on the compulsion of pain, and, in many cases, even that is avoided if at all possible, the child being permitted to suffer until such time as the offending tooth becomes quiescent.

We have instituted the school nurse in many of our progressive school districts. But only a very negligible proportion of those children found under this system of physical examination to need dental treatment ever receive such, either through the failure of the parents to carry out the recommendations of the nurse or through economic disabilities.

Thus, this examination, without the follow-up of treatment, as is provided through dental school services, falls far short of its goal. It ranks among the tragedies of the 'not-quite-enoughs.'

Hence it comes that the employment of school dental services is being increasingly recognized among the more progressive centres as a paramount need, and is proving a potent factor in the establishment and maintenance of community health.

Children, ever naturally afraid to go to the dentist alone or with their parents, will more readily go along with their little class-mates, in groups as part of school routine, and receiving treatment at this early age with a minimum of discomfort and pain, there is not created in the young and impressionable minds, the dread of successive visits as with older children or adults with whom the disease processes have reached that stage, as a rule, where pain is a necessary concomitant of the required treatment.

From an economic point of view, it is entirely practical that this service be made part of the school system, in that it may be carried out without interference with the course of study or with any disarrangement of the class. Nor does it add a great financial burden to the school district.

The valuation of such a service, when there are considered the manifold benefits in health and efficiency of body and mind to the school age child, is far beyond computation.

LARGE FOREST FIRES ARE UNDER CONTROL

Fire Has Swept Approximately 600,000 Acres of Bush Land.

MISSOULA, Montana, July 23. —(Canadian Press.)— Forest and bush fires in Northwestern States and Southwestern Canada are generally reported under control after sweeping approximately 600,000 acres.

With more than 10,000 men on the fire lines, trenches have been thrown about the largest blazes in Montana, Washington, Idaho and California. The fires under control are expected to burn for a week.

Although one serious blaze still harrassed three hundred and fifty fire fighters along a seven mile front in Tahoe national forest in California, the situation was reported as greatly improved in Western Washington, Oregon and in the Canadian provinces. Tahoe fire has burned over 12,000 acres while one uncontrolled fire in Canada was burning in timbered areas around Revelstoke, B.C.

A large fire was reported out of control north of Boise, Idaho.

Despite Fifth Inning Rally Chicago Falls to Yanks.

CLEVELAND MOVE UP

NEW YORK, July 23.—(Canadian Press).—The Yankees, the wielders of willows, the league leading lambastors, etc., hammered out 17 hits yesterday for a total of 23 bases to defeat the Chicago White Sox, 13 to 10. Gehrig hit a homer with two on in the first and Ruth cleaned the bases with a triple in the second. Chicago staged a five run rally in the fifth when Barrett, a pinch hitter, tripled, scoring three ahead of him, but New York gradually drew away, a steal home by Ruth featuring a four run volley in the sixth.

Jacobson nailed five out of six chances for three singles and two doubles, at Boston yesterday, as the home team forced the St. Louis Browns to extend themselves.

The Browns did, and obtained the necessary margin, 5-4.

At Philadelphia the Athletics lost their sixth straight when Cleveland, moving into second place, won 4-2. George Burns registered his forty-first double of the season.

The Senators went on a batting rampage in yesterday's heat at the Capitol, and downed Detroit 13-9. The heat affected the pitchers of both teams, who allowed twenty-seven safeties.

Twombley kept the Rochester hits scattered and the Bears, who weer visiting, won 8-3. Buffalo won its game by scoring four runs in the five innings while Reading was goose-egged.

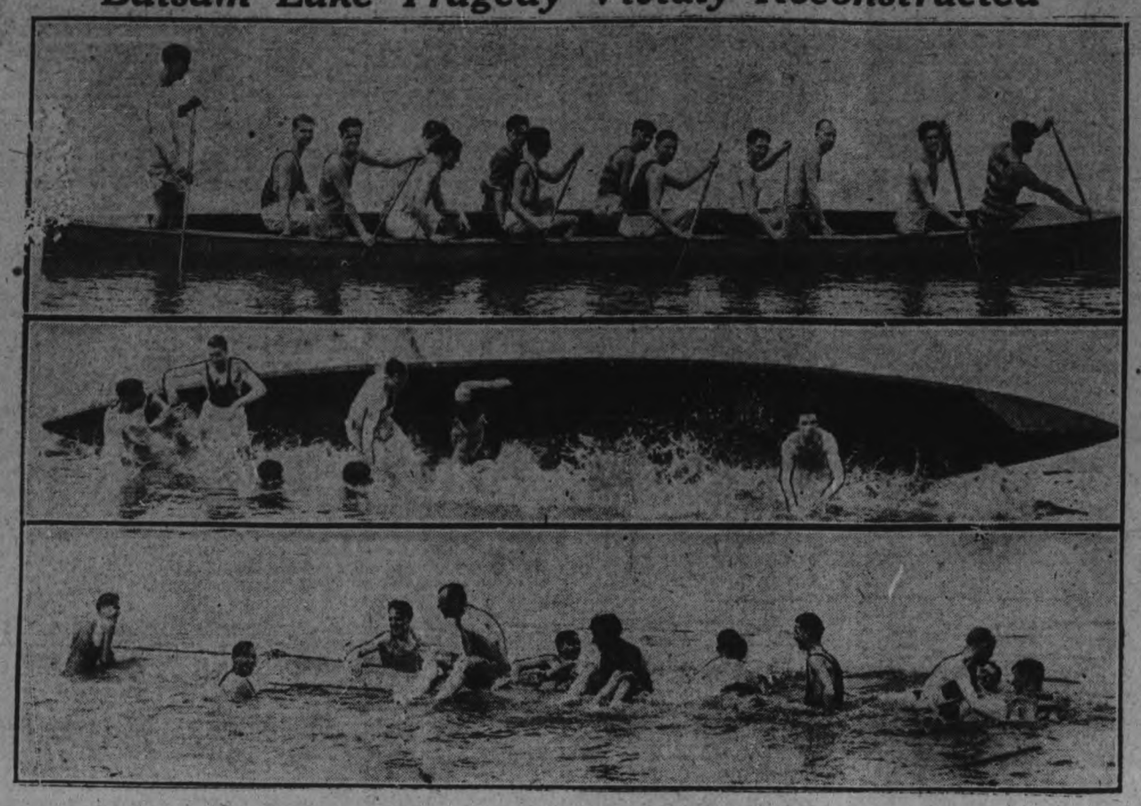
Balsam Lake Tragedy Vividly Reconstructed



THREE VIEWS OF HOW EL EVEN BOYS MET DEATH

In the upper picture is shown a war canoe of the same type as that from which eleven boys, one of whom was from Peterborough, were drowned. The men shown are sitting in the position occupied for paddling. The second view shows the canoe upsetting, vividly illustrating the manner in which the occupants are mixed together and projected underneath the craft as it upsets. In the third picture the paddlers are endeavoring to cling to the canoe, which constantly sinks with their weight. The bottom of this type of canoe is painted with graphite and in exceedingly slippery in order to reduce skin resistance in war canoe races. When completely turned over there is no handgrip. There is no keel—nothing to hang to except the gunwales which are about 12 inches under water. If much weight is thrown on the gunwales the canoe tips again, and as the frantic swimmers try to retain a firm grip it turns over and over again. Alex. McMurrich, boat steward at the Toronto Canoe Club, says that the boat probably capsized because the boys were not evenly distributed as to weight in the first instance, because one side paddled stronger than the other in the second instance. This would bring the canoe broadside to the squall and overturn it. A long time in trying to cling to the shifty craft after it had capsized would exhaust the boys and some of them would become victims of cramps. Mr. McMurrich stated that the canoe shown in the pictures is of the same type as the one the boys used, according to a description from Fenelon Falls.

A NIGHT OF HORROR ON BALSAM LAKE

The stories of the survivors of the grim tragedy of Balsam Lake, pieced together, record the events of Tuesday and Wednesday as follows:

7 p.m. Tuesday.—Volunteers called to take war canoe to Coboconk for supplies and extra canoes.

7.30 p.m.—Canoe starts from camp with full complement of fifteen boys.

8.30 p.m.—Squall encountered as canoe leaves calm shelter of Long Point, and pushes into narrows.

8.45 p.m.—After once or twice righting itself, canoe upsets, plunging all its occupants into the water.

9 p.m.—Some boys begin to weaken. Edwards loses his grip on the canoe, and sinks.

9.10 p.m.—Lambdon swims around canoe encouraging remaining boys to hang on.

9.15 p.m.—Raymond Allan, Peterborough, sees hopelessness of drifting and says he will try to bring help. He swims out into darkness.

12 midnight.—Boys have dropped off one by one until only five remain.

2 a.m. Wednesday.—Canoe drifts ashore on Grand Island with four survivors.

6.30 a.m.—Lambden obtains food from George Booth, a farmer.

8 a.m.—Survivors start to paddle back to camp, using sole remaining paddle and a board.

8.30 a.m.—Wind drives them back and they make for mainland.

12.30 p.m.—They reach shore and start tramp through dense bush.

1.30 p.m.—Survivors reach camp, more than half naked, sunburned and mosquito bitten, and tell their story of disaster.

SECRETS OF STARS INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to Billy Evans

TY COBB.
World's Greatest Ball Player.

A matter of a few inches on the getaway is often the difference between out and safe in attempting to steal a base.

Get as big a lead as possible is a point I want to stress as a very necessary asset to the successful base runner. This holds good whether the runner is about to steal, merely figure in a hit and run play, or to be advanced through the medium of the sacrifice.

A working knowledge of the opposing pitcher's methods is invaluable in aiding the runner to get the much needed big lead.

When sitting on the bench, at the bat as or a base runner, keep your eye on the opposing pitcher. Knowing his secrets, his style, his mannerisms, gives the player a big edge when he gets on the bases.

It has been my experience that every pitcher I have ever batted against, or tried to run bases on, affects a different style when he intends to pitch to the batter or threw to first.

It may be a slight movement of the head, a different gripping of the ball, a shift of the position of his feet on the rubber or any number of other things that will enable the man on first to differentiate between a pitch to the batsman and a throw to first.

Some pitchers are easier to steal on than others, simply because their tactics are more open. Their style on the rubber makes known their intentions.

For instance, there is a certain southpaw in the American League who makes the base runners stay close. For a time this pitcher troubled me. By close study I learned that a certain foot movement was advance information that he would throw to first.

Once I learned this secret I paid no attention to any act of the pitcher other than the foot movement. When reaching first I glued both eyes on his feet. Now when I do this he never troubles me, but should I watch his head and shoulder movements, he is as troublesome as ever.

Study pitchers and their styles is lesson No. 1 in base running.

ANOTHER GAME LADIES' SOFTBALL

Leaders of the Manufacturing Section of Toronto League To Be Here.

A change has been made in the team to represent Toronto in the Ladies' Softball Game against Peterborough on Wednesday next, July 28th.

As announced in yesterday's paper the Canadian Ladies were to have come to Peterborough for the game, but as they are scheduled for that evening in a competition, the proceeds of which are for the Fresh Air Fund in Toronto, the Gooderham and Worts team, which are leaders of the Manufacturing section of the League, will take their place.

The Gooderham and Worts team, are a high class team in every respect, and defeated the Kodaks in Toronto last fall, who put the Peterborough team away at the championship games at the Exhibition.

Husband Lays Charge Against ;Wife For Her Relationishp With Grange.

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 23.—(Canadian Press).—Mrs. Chas. Taylor, whose wealthy oil-well-supply-dealer-husband has charged her with tackling Harold ("Red") Grange in a kissing scene and otherwise being more than ordinarily familiar with the football-playing, ice-peddling, screen-acting star, last night, through her attorneys, categorically denied all charges in her spouse's divorce cross-complaint.

Mrs. Taylor went considerably farther and promised "real fireworks" in answer to her husband's bill which her attorneys now are busy preparing.

Taylor, although he charged that his wife used one of Grange's knees instead of an adjacent chair, rumpled the hair, patted the cheeks and kissed the lips of the line-busting football player, made it plain that he did not blame "Red."

"'Red' is a wonderful boy," Mrs. Taylor is quoted as having said.

The beginner should never go near a golf course until he has learned some idea of how to hit a ball.

Getting the proper swing before approaching golf grounds will save a lot. Beginners should remember that first-class players hate to waste time playing with a duffer who only retards their progress. Learning the game while playing in a match is no way to get any headway. You are spoiling your own game and that of the good players.

There is another angle to the game, too. Beginners do congest a golf course. They can't play the game fast enough to hold their place and a great many of them do not know enough about golf etiquet to invite those behind to come through. As a result the course is held up.

Try and remember that you must keep close behind those ahead of you. The general rule in regard to this is to play when the players in front of you have had their second shot. If this is not enough one must wait until they are well out of range.

"You said you were half a block away a little while ago. Do you call that six yards?" "I didn't say half a block," indignantly replied the girl, "I said about half a block."

TWO SOCCER GAMES TO-MORROW AFTERNOON

De Laval Vs. Omemee and Masseys Vs. Thistle in League Matches.

Two very important soccer league games are scheduled for Saturday (to-morrow) afternoon. Both matches are timed to be kicked off at 3.15 prompt.

Up on Nicholls' Oval Park, De Laval will have the fast-moving aggregation from Omemee in a League match.

If the Tannery boys win they will go up into second position in the League standing, while if DeLaval bring off another sensational win, the two points will make them even with the Quaker Oats.

Down on King Edward Park, the Masseys have the League leaders as their guests for the afternoon. In all probability the Phelan Cup holders will field a strong eleven so as to stop the progress of the "jags" any further. The Thistles are trying hard to muster a team for this encounter because their players have been idle for some weeks and feel the lack of a game but they anticipate a real good game to-morrow.

All Thistle players are requested to be present on King Edward Park, no later than three o'clock.

STAYED IN CAMP.

HAVE LOST THEIR PALS.

While the crew of the ill-fated war canoe from the Brotherhood of St. Andrew camp struggled for hours to reach shore, those in the camp were utterly unconscious of the terrible scene in progress almost within call. Sidney Manley, ABOVE, was in charge during Mr. Shea-Butcher's absence and took over the direction of affairs after the accident. John Mardall, CENTRE, is the youngest brother of Oliver Mardall, who deliberately left the canoe in order to lighten its burden. Kirk Stinson, BELOW, had been one of the previous day's crew, who was ordered back to land for fear of an accident. His first action on reaching Toronto was to visit the mother of his dead chum, Walter Burgess, in an effort to console her.

DETROIT, Michigan, July 23. — United Press. — Fourteen pounds lighter than when she began her fast, 12 days ago, Mrs. Catherine Scott, wife of Russell Scott, announces that she will not accede to the request of her husband that she abandon her attempt to raise money for his release. Scott, the Canadian who is under sentence of death in Chicago, for the murder of Joseph Maurer two years ago, wrote his wife that he would accept no further financial aid from her.

"Of course I have no intention of stopping my fast," Mrs. Scott replied.

Scott's letter to his wife was smuggled out of the Chicago jail, he admitted. He requested her to destroy it as soon as read.

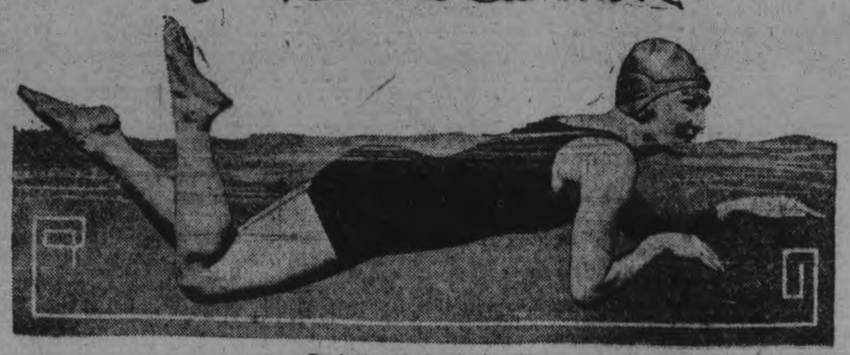
HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon



Beginning of the dog paddle.

Down in the Chesapeake Bay every beginner, almost, learns the dog-paddle first.

The stroke is as natural as walking on the hands and knees and hardly requires teaching, because every beginner goes into it naturally.

The beginner takes off easily, merely letting the body fall forward with the arms stretched forward.

The kick will give the first propulsion and then the hands alternately go straight forward and are brought downward and backward to the side.

The plane in which the hands move is parallel to the body. When the hands go forward they skim the top of the water with a minimum of resistance.

At first a kick will come at every other stroke, but when one becomes proficient a kick will come as each hand comes back.

TWO SOCCER GAMES TO-MORROW AFTERNOON

De Laval Vs. Omemee and Masseys Vs. Thistle in League Matches.

Two very important soccer league games are scheduled for Saturday (to-morrow) afternoon. Both matches are timed to be kicked off at 3.15 prompt.

Up on Nicholls' Oval Park, De Laval will have the fast-moving aggregation from Omemee in a League match.

If the Tannery boys win they will go up into second position in the League standing, while if DeLaval bring off another sensational win, the two points will make them even with the Quaker Oats.

Down on King Edward Park, the Masseys have the League leaders as their guests for the afternoon. In all probability the Phelan Cup holders will field a strong eleven so as to stop the progress of the "jags" any further. The Thistles are trying hard to muster a team for this encounter because their players have been idle for some weeks and feel the lack of a game but they anticipate a real good game to-morrow.

All Thistle players are requested to be present on King Edward Park, no later than three o'clock.

HOW TO SWIM
by Lillian Cannon

Beginning of the dog paddle.

Down in the Chesapeake Bay every beginner, almost, learns the dog-paddle first.

The stroke is as natural as walking on the hands and knees and hardly requires teaching, because every beginner goes into it naturally.

The beginner takes off easily, merely letting the body fall forward with the arms stretched forward.

The kick will give the first propulsion and then the hands alternately go straight forward and are brought downward and backward to the side.

The plane in which the hands move is parallel to the body. When the hands go forward they skim the top of the water with a minimum of resistance.

At first a kick will come at every other stroke, but when one becomes proficient a kick will come as each hand comes back.

STAYED IN CAMP.

HAVE LOST THEIR PALS.

While the crew of the ill-fated war canoe from the Brotherhood of St. Andrew camp struggled for hours to reach shore, those in the camp were utterly unconscious of the terrible scene in progress almost within call. Sidney Manley, ABOVE, was in charge during Mr. Shea-Butcher's absence and took over the direction of affairs after the accident. John Mardall, CENTRE, is the youngest brother of Oliver Mardall, who deliberately left the canoe in order to lighten its burden. Kirk Stinson, BELOW, had been one of the previous day's crew, who was ordered back to land for fear of an accident. His first action on reaching Toronto was to visit the mother of his dead chum, Walter Burgess, in an effort to console her.

He has been 25 years in charge of the D.D.G.M.'s and has been a member of Grand Lodge for 46 years.

A telegram of sympathy was sent to Hon. W. D. McPherson, K.C., M.P., Past Grand Master, his absence from Grand Lodge being caused by his wife's serious illness.

A committee, to be appointed by the Grand Master, will arrange some suitable form of appropriately commemorating the seventy-fifth anniversary of Grand Lodge, which will take place in 1930.

WIFE OF SCOTT CONTINUES FAST

In Twelve Day Fast Mrs. Scott Loses Fourteen Pounds.

SCOTT WRITES WIFE.

DETROIT, Michigan, July 23. — United Press. — Fourteen pounds lighter than when she began her fast, 12 days ago, Mrs. Catherine Scott, wife of Russell Scott, announces that she will not accede to the request of her husband that she abandon her attempt to raise money for his release. Scott, the Canadian who is under sentence of death in Chicago, for the murder of Joseph Maurer two years ago, wrote his wife that he would accept no further financial aid from her.

"Of course I have no intention of stopping my fast," Mrs. Scott replied.

Scott's letter to his wife was smuggled out of the Chicago jail, he admitted. He requested her to destroy it as soon as read.

DUNCAN PLANS WIDER PROBE

Hon. H. H. Stevens Discusses Customs Affairs—Announcement Expected.

START SEPTEMBER.

OTTAWA, July 23—Strenuous efforts are being put forth by the new Government to complete its plan of reorganization of the Department of Customs and Excise within the next few days before those responsible for this work leave for their constituencies. Conferences were held yesterday, it is understood, between Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Customs and Excise, who has returned to his hotel from the hospital; Hon. James D. Chaplin, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. Dr. W. J. Roche, Chairman of the Civil Serivce Commission, on the best means of carrying out the instructions of Parliament regarding the retirement of certain department officials and the discharge of others. It is expected that in a short time Hon. Mr. Stevens will announce the extent to which he will adjust the machinery of collecting the countrys customs revenue.

Preparations are proceeding, too, for the next investigation into the administration of the department by Sir Francois Lemieux, Chief Justice of the Superior Court of Quebec, who, it is understood, will have as his counsel, Robert L. Calder, K.C., of Montreal. Inspector Walter Duncan; W. L. Hicklin, Chief Clerk of the Preventive Service in Montreal, and James E. Knox, Customs and Excise Officer in Montreal, are now at work in the department preparing a precis of further cases to be explored by the Royal Commission. It is not anticipated that the latter will commence to function before September.

THEATRE
AT THE REGENT

CIRCUS SIDE SHOW, ANIMALS, FREAKS, IN "SIMON THE JESTER"

Old and Young Alike will Enjoy Thrilling Features of this Picture.

A complete circus, with its wild animals, performing horses and dogs, and a dozen clowns, many side show freaks, such as the thin man, fat woman, giant, midget and wire haired beauty, as well as "Sultan," the screen's most marvellous trained horse, appear in "Simon the Jester," which will be shown at the Regent Theatre for two days, beginning today.

The story deals with a man of wealth, culture, a member of Parliament and socially and politically prominent. He is given but a few weeks to live, because of an ailment which will not permit of an operation.

He becomes enmeshed in a love net which holds captive his best friend—a net spread by a beautiful circus woman—and when he seeks to extricate himself from her clutches, finds himself deeply in love. Many thrilling scenes are brought about by the development of the story.

Eugene O'Brien and Lillian Rich portray the leading roles and they are capably supported by Edmund Burns, Henry B. Walthall and William Platt. Charles G. Clarke, cinematographer, photographed the production and secured some beautiful scenes.

DESCRIBES CHANGES.

MONTREAL, July 23 (Canadian Press).—Some of the changes in the social life of Budapest and other cities of Hungary, noted before the war for their brilliance and gayety, were described by Countess Seherr-Thoss, when interviewed. The Countess is paying her first visit to Canada in company with her son, Count Seherr-Thoss. Asked whether the feeling for music is still as strong, the Countess replied: "People dance, many of them, but not people of our sort, who lead very quiet lives. At the restaurants, the casinos and the coffee-houses there are the tziganes, always playing, but those who seek amusement are of a different type than before the war."

Many Hungarians, particularly those of the agricultural classes, would like to emigrate, Countess Seherr-Thoss declared, but are prevented by the United States quota laws. Many have come to Canada, she commented, and many more would like to come, as conditions in their own land are often difficult. The Countess said she expected to travel through Canada, but her plans are not definitely settled.

PICTURES PRESENTED.

Casts of Historic Pictures Presented To Provincial Museum.

VICTORIA, B.C., July 23 (Canadian Press).—Casts of a number of historic petroglyphs or Indian pictures on the rocks near Bella Coola, British Columbia, have been presented to the provincial museum here by the Victoria Memorial Museum at Ottawa and they now adorn the Anthropological room.

The origin of these petroglyphs is still a matter of uncertainty, although several authorities have come forward with their theories. It is the general belief that the petroglyphs were the forerunners of the wooden totem poles, which were built to record the history of the various Indian families on the west coast of British Columbia. The petroglyphs have been carved in walls of solid rock and have withstood the weather of centuries.

Within the past few months, large numbers of totem poles have been removed from their original setting in Indian villages and sent to various museums. At one time, totem poles stood in most of the Indian villages along the coast of British Columbia, more particularly the northern coast and Queen Charlotte Islands in the vicinity of Masset, Skidegate and other villages. Several of the totems have been transferred to the grounds of the lieutenant-governor's residence in Victoria.

SNAP DIVISION IN BRITISH HOUSE

Opposition Tries To Catch Government Members Napping, But Failed.

MOTION REJECTED.

LONDON, July 23 (Canadian Press) — Numerous government supporters have been notoriously slack lately in attending the Friday sessions of the House of Commons and there was a flurry this morning when the Opposition taking advantage of a slim attendance tried to catch the Government napping by staging the first snap division of the present parliament.

When the mining re-organization bill came up, Captain Wedgwood Benn, Liberal, moved its recommittal and Sir Laming Worthington Evans, secretary of state for war, stepped into the breach for the Government and spoke until the Conservative whips were able to get all Government supporters within reach and Opposition members shouted "You're safe." The Liberal motion was rejected by 155 to 81.

WAVE OF HATRED SWEEPING EUROPE

Fascisti Paper Strikes Out at Americans and Their Principles.

ROME, July 23. — (Canadian Press.)—A terrible wave of mortal hatred of the United States is sweeping over old and exhausted Europe, but Americans do not perceive it, says Il Trevere, organ of the extremae Fascists.

"Americans have their eyes full of figures," the paper continues, "their ears are absorbed with the clicking of adding machines. They have a knife up their sleeves, namely their most powerful dollar, which can crush twenty Europeans. They live in a state of superb obliviousness which is astonishing and offensive.

"No, things cannot go on thus. Americans are sowing to right and left hatred and desire for vengeance. The right to enslave the whole continent is not to be secured even on the battlefield with the risk of life. They must think it can be acquired behind the teller's window of the bank, manipulating loans at so much per cent.

"We cannot forsee the future, but we can read in the hearts of men of this old Europe, written in letters of blood, condemnation of that certain slavery which has the dollar as its symbol."

Prime Minister's Procedure Menaces Canadian Autonomy--Mackenzie King

Ex-Premier Raises Constitutional Issue And Demands Pursuance of Customs Probe In Speech Opening Liberal Party Campaign

Delivers Strong Attack On Meighen and Declared the Conservative Leader Usurped Power and Insulted Parliament By Summarily Closing Its Doors and Instituting One Man Government in Canada For Two Weeks.

SAYS ACTION IS UNPARALLELLED IN BRITISH HISTORY SINCE DAYS OF ABSOLUTISM OF CHARLES THE FIRST

Points To Reductions in Taxation and in National Debt and Reintroduction of Penny Postage Benefitting Entire Dominion As Evidence That With Continuation of Liberal Policies Prosperity Comes To Stay.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 24.— Canadian Press).—Right Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King chose the constitutional issue for his battle-ground in opening the Liberal party campaign here last night.

Linked with the constitutional controversy, Mr. King demanded the pursuance of the Customs probe, preferably by a Royal Commission of three judges. He denounced "an underground whispering campaign of vilest kind being carried on with an ingenuity which surpasses belief. The Liberal chief recounted the work of his administration pointing particularly to the Robb budget which, he claimed, had directly benefitted every individual in the Dominon by reduction of taxation.

Mr. Meighen had "usurped power"; he had "insulted Parliament by summarily closing its doors," for two weeks Mr. Meighen alone had been the Government of Canada. "If that is not anarchy and absolutism in government I should like to know what category political philosophy would assign government carried on under such conditions." Mr. King continued: "I know of nothing in British history comparable to this since days of Charles the First. It may be all very dramatic, very daring, but there is not a vestige of constitutional right which it does not undermine."

Mr. Meighen says there is no constitutional issue," declared the former Premier. "Let me tell the Prime Minister he will find before the present campaign is over there is a constitutional issue greater than any that has been raised in Canada since the founding of Dominion. It is a constitutional issue not raised by the Governor General but by Mr. Meighen himself, and Mr. Meighen has only himself to thank that it overshadows everything else."

The Liberal leader defended his action in advising His Excellency to dissolve Parliament. The Governor General had felt that Mr. Meighen should be given "a chance to govern" before resorting to another election. I took the position that Mr. Meighen's chances to govern had all along been quite as good as my own and that the House had declined to give him its confidence, said Mr. King.

Constitution Barrier to Separation.

The constitution, he said, was "counter magnet to tendencies to separation from Great Britain or annexation to other lands." It was the same constitution for which the Liberal party stood today. "It is in name of all freedom, liberty and loyalty which the British constitution serves to inspire, that I now ask my fellow Canadians in the name alike of King and country to vindicate its might and majesty at the polls."

Impartial Tribunal.

On investigation into the customs department, Mr. King said the guilt or innocence of individuals, whether they were cabinet ministers, citizens or civil servants, should be established by an impartial tribunal before the probe was concluded. If the widespread rumors of unpublishable material in the Duncan report were true, it was the duty of the committee which had the whole matter before it to have intimated what these things were. The Duncan report with all exhibits was tabled in the House of Commons yet the report of the commitee was silent upon matters so much discussed in whispers. Speaking of the votes in the House on the report of the customs committee, he pointed out that the unanimous findings did not contain the clauses of censure of the Government, which Mr. Stevens had endeavored to insert later by means of an amendment. "The late Government was never defeated by the people—it was never defeated in the House, and it was never censured by representatives of the nation," said Mr. King.

Intrigue, manipulation and uncertainty during the week of June 20 to 25 created circumstances under which Government could not be carried on in a manner befitting the honor and dignity of Parliament. Dissolution Mr. King felt, was desirable at an early date in public interest. The last session of Parliament if all measures passed had become law, would have gone down to history as one unequalled in legislation of prime importance. Fortunately, most of the tax reductions and benefits of the Robb budget, had been "saved from the wreck" thorugh royal assent which was given on June 15.

Lapointe Speaks.

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, spoke on the same platform with the Liberal leader. The constitution of the coutry of the country had been violated and the whole structure of Canadian autonomy within the empire was menaced in consequence. Speaking of Mr. King he said: "I earnestly trust that he will get the support of the electors of this province as he will get the solid support of the province for which I have the privilege to speak."

King Stresses the Supremacy of Parliament.

Mr. King began his speech by stressing the supremacy of Parliament and necessity for recognizing its right to express the will of the people by a majority vote. At the end of 1925 no party in parliament had a majority over all. Liberals, with only nominal majority in the House had received the support of House for four years, and he felt that the Liberal administration had a right to call Parliament and ask for an expression of its will in the peculiar situation.

Meighen's Claims.

"It has been said", he continued, "that Mr. Meighen, being the leader of the largest homogeneous group in the House should have been given a chance to govern. My answer to this is that from the very outset Mr. Meighen was given every chance; that his chances, in fact were a thousand-fold better than my own since, when Parliament met not only did he lead the largest single group in Commons but he was in his seat in the House at head of his party, and I was not at the time a member.

"The House decided on the first vote of session that it would not give its confidence to Mr. Meighen. That it was unwilling to allow the Conservative party to control the Government of the country, and then and not till then did I seek re-election as a member of the House of Commons.

Obstructionist Tactics.

"Through the acting leader of House, I asked for an adjournment to enable the ministry to be reconstructed, and the sessional program to be further developed. Though Parliament had spoken, the then leader of opposition and his following did all in their power to frustrate the orderly procedure of public business. Instead of accepting the situation and enabling the country's business to be proceeded with they obstructed and obstructed till finally the closure had to be resorted to. When the closure was applied, Liberals, Progressives, Labor, Indeen and his following see that their course in obstructing business of Parliament was not approved."

Proceedings Misrepresented.

The proceedings of the recent session, said Mr. King, had been misrepresented and consequently misunderstood. An agreement between parties or groups to cooperate was absolutely essential since no party possessed majority. Such cooperation had to take one of two forms; open and above board or secret and underhand. Liberal policies as outlined in the Speech from the Throne were before all groups and before the country. To this programme the Liberal Government invited the support of the House and obtained the support of all parties and individuals except the Conservatives. Mr. Meighen had had every opportunity to place his programme before the House. "The support given to the Liberal party by Progressives and other members was not a matter of bargain and barter, as opponents of the administration all too eagerly sought to have the

POLICE THEORY.

Another Lies in the Hospital in a Critical Conditon.

HAMILTON, July 24 (Canadian Press).—Deaths believed due to alcoholic poisoning in this district within the past three days reached ten this morning, with reports of three deaths in Oakville and two in Hamilton. Three men were previously reported to have succumbed through drinking poisoned liquor at Allanburg, near St. Catharines, yesterday. A man and a woman lie in the local hospital in a critical condition. In connection with the poisonings, Bert Dangelo of Hamilton is held on a charge of vagrancy.

The deaths reported last night and to-day are as follows: Geo. Gill, James Johnston and Tom Lyon, all of Oakville; Mary Dushere, Hamilton, and Paul Finka, Hamilton. Patrick Lyon and Mrs. K. Foreman, both of Hamilton, are those in hospital.

Coroner Dr. W. M. Wilkinson empanelled a jury at Oakville to-day and held a preliminary inquest on the bodies of Thomas Lyon, James Johnson and Geo. Gill.

Jack Lyon, brother of Tom and Patrick, died yesterday at Oakville, but no inquest will be held into his death as it is believed he died of natural causes.

Two more deaths were reported this afternoon.

There are more than 15,000 moving picture theatres in the United States. England has 4,000.

Further Complications In the McPherson Case

LOS ANGELES, Calif., July 24—A request was made today of the police department at Pittsburg, Pa., to conduct a search for the writer of a letter received by the district attorney's office here in which tha author claimed he had picked up Aimee Semple McPherson on the beach at Ocean Parkt he day she disappeared and conveyed her to the Mexican shack in which she claimed she was held prisoner. The missive was mailed from Pittsburg last week and was received at the district attorney's office.

FIRE CLIMBS UP TO HIGH LEVELS

Travels Along Timber Line To Elevation of 6,000 Feet.

RAIN PROBABLE.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 24. — (Canadian Press).—Shouldering on both sides of the Green and Soo Rivers, 75 miles north of Vancouver, on the Pacific Great Eastern Railway, a forest fire has worked its way along the timber line to an elevation of six thousand feet, according to reports received here yesterday.

Fire lines are being constructed to enclose the new outbreaks in the valley and so far this has been successful. At Brew, B.C., spot fires are burning in mountain tops.

Fanned by a strong wind, the fire near Powell River, which had been practically extinguished, again became menacing Thursday night, but the 140 men fighting the blaze have held it in check.

Rain is promised, which is urgently needed to prevent a renewed outbreak of last week's serious fire situation.

SEARCHERS WERE A MILE AWAY FROM PLACE WHERE BOYS SANK BUT ARE NOW ON RIGHT TRAIL

Crew on Night of Tragedy Mistook Direction Across Lake.

DRAGGING PROCEEDS.

Waller and Wiggington Locate Scene of Accident at Dawn To-day.

(Special to The Examiner.)

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 24.—Capt. Hilliard Lang, chief of Toronto Life Savers, is now dragging Balsam Lake on the personal directions given him by George Waller and Bill Wiggington, two of the four survivors of the war canoe tragedy. An entirely new aspect of the tragedy was revealed when the two boys directed the motor boat on the course the war canoe had taken from St. Andrew's camp. Dragging operations yesterday were carried on a mile away from where the boys state that most of the bodies most likely lie.

It is now beyond any doubt that those in charge of the canoe mistook the direction to Coboconk, and instead of heading almost due east from the camp for Gull river, steered north-east, fair across the full width of Balsam Lake for an arm that is called the North Bay. Those who have been trying to reconstruct the tragedy to facilitate the recovery of the bodies did not get far enough out into the lake. If the right course to Coboconk had been taken the canoe, instead of being a third of a mile from Long Pbint, which was the nearest land, might have been only a couple of hundred yards out.

The spot finally located by George Waller and Bill Wiggington as the nearest they could estimate to the place where the canoe upset and in the immediate neighborhood of which most of the boys perished in the two vain efforts to shove the canoe against the white caps to Long Point, is about one-third of a mile north of Long Point, three-quarters of a mile from the camp, and about a mile and a half in a straight line from the spot on Grand Island, where the four survivors were beached by the wind. Captain Lang, who on what directions were available, has been dragging points a mile and a half away from this location studied out by the boys, began immediately by placing a wooden buoy and will drag the thirty foot depth there, studying out from the boys' stories the probable path followed by the drifting canoe from which the boys perished on a vague path a mile and a half long.

At dawn this morning these two brave lads whom Captain Lang had asked for set forth in a motor boat to see in smiling sunlight the dread scene of last Tuesday night's disaster. At their own request, they made the first survey of the scene unaccompanied by any of the official

Airplane Sights Body of Boy And Dragnet Brings it Ashore; Inquest Planned Immediately

Further Results Expected Th is Evening — Second Body Seen During Early Morn ing Flight—Coroner From Lindsay Already Ru shing to the Scene.

AIRPLANE OBSERVATI ONS AND REPORTS AGREE AS TO SPOT WHERE CANOE UPSET

(By Examiner Special Correspondent)

BALSAM LAKE, July 24—One body, believed to be that of Gordon Heale, Toronto, was recovered from the depths of Balsam Lake this afternoon.

Provincial Constable Hayston Storey of Lindsay telephoned to Dr. Logan, Victoria County coroner, and he is now on his way to Long Point, It is expected that the inquest will be held immediately, probably in Lindsay.

The body was sighted by the observer in the aeroplane and brought to the surface by the crew of the Harwood, the Peterborough boat that is operating in the search.

This report is confirmed by Rev. J. D. Paterson of All Saints' Church, who is awaiting at Long Point the recovery of the body of Raymond Allan. Mr. Paterson telephoned at 2.15.

Earlier despatches said:

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 24 (Special to The Examiner) —There is decided ground for hope that before very long, possibly before today is passed, some of the eleven bodies in Balsam Lake may be found and brought to the surface.

For from the flying boat, making another flight today, something that looked like a body was clearly seen by all three persons on board about where the two survivors, young Wiggington and George Waller, brought up to help in the search, declared the war canoe had capsized.

The spot, located in this double way is considerably south of the area in which the dragging has been going on during the past three days. From now on Hillard Lang and his Toronto lifesavers will concentrate here with hopes of success.

Major G. A. Thompson, pilot, and Pat Reid, air engineer, who came over with the government ship from Sudbury were up at dawn. They expected the lake to be at its calmest at daybreak, rendering the best kind of visibility. But unfortunately a slight north wind was enough to cause a swell that broke the surface sufficiently to make a piercing of the waters depths from the air difficult.

Started at Seven

However, they stood by. The wind kept dropping and although the lake was still rippled, its surface condition gradually improved. Absolute smoothness did not arrive but it was sufficiently calm to make a flight. Promptly at seven o'clock standard time the machine headed in to the wind and took off. Capt. W. R. Maxwell, director of the Provin-

CHEMONG ROAD IS GREATLY IMPROVED

Work Already Started Has Done Wonders in Smoothing Road.

Those who travel the Chemong Road daily and have been complaining of the bad road between Peterborough and Bridgenorth, are now very enthusiastic over the results that have already been obtained since the Suburban Road Commission has started working on this highway.

The young man with the tractor, who has been working about half way between here and Chemong, towards the far end of the road, is making a fine job of his part of the work already.

The promptness with which the Commission has taken up the matter since their attention was drawn to it is pleasing all of the cottagers, and they are really expecting the work will be so continued that there will be no reason at all for complaint as to the condition of the road.

There are several large stones at different points in the middle of the road, which no doubt will be lifted out, and the road levelled at these places.

Some of the cottagers say how surprisingly good the road is with the effort already put on it, and they do not hesitate to make known their appreciation of what the Suburban Commission is now doing.

CARTOON FOLLIES OF 1926—By RUBE GOLDBERG

IT'S DIFFERENT WHEN IT HAPPENS TO YOU

"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

EX-PREMIER RAISES

public believe", Mr. King asserted.

Speaking of the work of the recent session, Mr. King said, despite what was lost in other directions, at no session of the Parliament of Canada and in no single Parliament has as much been done to relieve all classes of the burden of taxation as was effected by the Robb budget.

Tax Reductions.

"Is there a man or woman in the Dominion who has not directly benefited by reductions in taxation effected under Robb budget?"

"Take first of all reductions in tariff, reductions in duties on automobiles, motor trucks and motor cycles of all kinds which, without working injury to single industrial establishment have reduced price of motors to every class in community.

"Take next the reductions in the income tax, not alone tax, not alone substantial reductions in the rate of taxation on incomes up to a very large amount but increased exemptions from payment of any income tax whatever. When before did taxpayers in Canada have returned to them in form of a government cheque a portion of the taxes they had paid into public treasury?

"Then there was the tax on receipts, abolished together and reductions in sales tax and excise taxes.

"Finally, there is the reduction in postage—the return to penny postage.

Reduction of Debt.

"Add to all this a reduction in the national public debt and a balancing of the national budget over a series of years, together with an expansion of trade and a favorable balance of exports over imports unparallelled in peace time history of Dominion and you have a record which has not been equalled by an government in Canada.

"This is part of record on which we make appeal for support of electors of Canada. We need not promise reductions in taxation. We have already given reductions; we need not promise prosperity—everyone knows that prosperity has returned and that, with a continuation of Liberal policies, prosperity has come to stay."

"You were told by our Conservative opponents at the last general elections that Canada was being ruined under Liberal administration; that our industries were going to the wall and our people in increasing numbers were going to the United States; that only an all-round increase in the protective tariff could save the situation. Every representation of the kind has been proved false. Look where you will, be it the returns of our railways, the deposits in our banks, the increase in the numbers and amounts of insurance policies and building permits, the increase in employment, the increase in immigration, the rapidly-growing statistics of industry and trade—on every side are evidences of the increased prosperity which has come to Canada during our years of office.

"Another important measure which was saved from destruction through having received the Royal assent on June 15 was the reciprocal trade treaty between Canada and the British West Indies, Bermuda, British Guiana and British Honduras."

Measures Thrown Out by Senate.

"Of measures which passed the Commons but which were thrown out by the Senate, I might mention the Old-Age Pensions Bill. There were also rejected by the Senate certain amendments to the Criminal Code and the immigration laws doing away with powers of summary deportation of British citizens and other extreme enactments, passed at a time of excitement during the wa., and which the House of Commons on repeated occasions since has sought to repeal.

"The Prime Minister would have the country believe that for the most part the legislation of the session which failed to be signed by the Governor-General is in all important features being put into effect. Of measures which had passed both Houses, or were in the last stages of amendment, and to which, with dissolution in view, arrangements for the Royal assent might easily have been made had Parliament been properly prorogued as it should have been, the most important were a bill for the purpose of establishing in Canada a system of long-term mortgage credit for farmers, known popularly as the 'Rural Credits' Bill; a bill amending the Grain Act in an important particular; the bill to provide for the revoluation of soldiers' settlement lands; a bill to provide a loan to the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal, and a bill to amend a loan to the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal, and a bill to amend the Civil Servite Superannuation Act. To these bills should be added the appropriation of moneys necessary to carry on the public business and public works of the country, including the Hudson Bay Railway, and other projects, many of which had been fully discussed in the Commons, and to all of which both the Conservative and Liberal parties in Parliament may be assumed to have at least tentatively agreed, through the acceptance by Mr. Meighen's Administration of the estimates as presented to Parliament as prepared by the preceding Administration.

.... Tariff Advisory Board ....

"At this point I should perhaps make mention of the appointment during the session of the Advisory Board on Tariff and Taxation, and of the Royal Commission to inquire into the problems of the Maritime Provinces. Each of these important bodies was established in fulfilment of undertakings during the last general elections. While from members of the official Opposition mild criticism was directed against features of the Tariff Board and the Maritime Rights Commission, no formal exception was taken by the Opposition either to the personnel or to the duties and responsibilities of these two bodies. If public opinion as voiced by the press of the country is agauge at all, it may be said that the Government's action as respects both the Tariff Advisory Board and the Maritime Commission met with hearty commendation.

"Such was the legislative program, all but complete, as the session approached its close. I venture to say that, despite the time wasted in bitter controversy and obstruction, and the defeat or jettisoning of the particular measures to which I have referred, if you search the records from the days of Confederation down to to-day it will be found that by way of legislative achievements the recent session will bear favorable comparison with any session in the history of our Parliament; that at no session of Parliament was there granted to the people of Canada relief from taxation comparable to that afforded in so many directions by the Robb Budget; that no session disclosed a like expansion in Canada's domestic and foreign trade, or gave promise of more in the way of national prosperity and unity. Had all the measures which passed the House of Commons become law, I do not hesitate to say that the session of 1926 would have gone down in history as one unequalled in legislation of prime importance, not to specially favored interests, but to the people of Canada at large. So much for the possibilties of honorable co-operation between parties and groups working together for the larger interests they cherish in common.

Dissolution of Parliament.

"I come now to the concluding days of the session, and to the dissolution of Parliament.

"Mr. Meighen and the members of his party would have the public believe that the reason I sought dissolution at the time I did was in order to avoid 'a vote of censure' being passed upon the Administration because of certain facts disclosed before a special committee of the House of Commons with respect to the administration of the Department of Customs, which committee was appointed in the opening days of the session, and brought in its report as the session was drawing its proceedings to a close. To this I give the most emphatic denial.

"First of all may I be permitted to point out that the word of 'censure,' or its equivalent in Parliamentary terminology, neither appears in the Stevens amendment nor in the report of the special committee which it sought to amend, nor in any amendment or in any report. The Stevens amendment uses the words 'wholly indefensible' in reference to the alleged failure of myself and the Government 'to take prompt and effective remedial action' with respect to certain matters in the Customs, and the words 'utterly unjustifiable' in reference to one particular act of Mr. Boivin. These words have become enlarged upon and their meaning exaggerated in party controversy and public discussion into a 'censure of the Government,' 'a censure of the entire Administration,' involving its resignation. Mr. Meighen, sounding the keynote of his campaign, deliberately misquoted these words and misrepresented their meaning. He said that 'the House of Commons had declared' that the Prime Minister's refusal to remedy the evil was 'absolutely incapable of defense.' Those words will not be found anywhere, except as coming from Mr. Meighen's lips. That 'the House of Commons'— I again quote his words—'censured not only the past Minister of Customs, but the then Minister of Customs and the entire Government for malfeasance of office.' With respect to these words as well, I repeat, they are to be found only in Mr. Meighen's own vocabulary.

Advised Dissolution

"At the time I advised his Excellency that a dssolution of Parliament was, in my opinion, necessary and inevitable, I had the best reasons for believing that if I were to continue to lead the House the portion of the Stevens amendment which contained the words I have quoted would not be carried.

"Before Parliament adjourned on the night of Friday, June 25, or rather, in the early morning of June 26, I personally showed several members of the Progressive party a proposed amendment to Mr. Steven's motion. My object was to ascertain in advance of having the amendment presented, whether or not, if moved it would be acceptable to them. That proposed amendment eliminated from the Stevens amendment the clause which contained the words 'wholly indefensible' and 'utterly unjustifiable.' and substituted in their stead a proposal to appoint a Royal Commission of three Judges one to be appointed by the Prime Minister, one by the Leader of the Opposition; and one by the Leader of the Progressive party, which Commission was to continue the investigation into the administration of the Customs Department and alleged smuggling operations, and to bring before it for examination all Ministers of Customs and all persons directly or indirectly reflected upon in the report of the Special Committee, the Commission to report its findings and recommendation to Parliament at the next session. I received the most explicit assurances that such an amendment would be acceptable, and would be supported, and it was after having received this assurance that I subsequently went into the House of Comomns and agreed on behalf of the Government to accept the amendment to the Stevens amendment then before the House, which acceptance was followed my an adjournment of the House.

Change of Front by Progressives

"Of those who on Friday night indicated their willingness and intention to support the amendment eliminating the words referred to, a sufficient number on the Tuesday following voted aaginst this very amendment when moved by Mr. Rinfret thereby causing its defeat, and enabling the Stevens amendment to be carried.

"The reason of the change in attitude of certain members of the Progressive group is not far to seek: it is easily explained. Members of the Progressive party, and, for that matter, members of other parties as well, did not expect nor did they wish a dissolution of Parliament. Had I not resigned as Prime Minister, sufficient of their number were prepared to assist me to carry on through the session. When I resigned and Mr. Meighen accepted the office of Prime Minister, sufficient of their number were equally prepared, so far as the measures referred to were concerned, to give him their support. It was a matter of getting through with the session and securing the enactment of the balance of the legislation and of avoiding, if possible, another early general election. It will be recalled that such was the tenor of a resolution which was carried at a caucus of the Progressives held on the morning of Tuesday, June 29, and which was placed in Mr. Forke's hands for his guidance in the interview which his Excellency the Governor-General had with Mr. Forke at noon that day.

"Precisely the same kind of situation and attitude presented itself on June 30 with respect to the resolution moved by myself as Leader of the Opposition in amendment to the motion to go into supply and which was moved immediately after the Stevens amendment and the report of the Customs Committee had been disposed of. That amendment was as follows:

"'That the Speaker do not now leave the chair, but that it be resolved that in the opinion of this House the fiscal policy of the Government as enunciated by the present Prime Minister when Leader of his Majesty's Opposition would prove detrimental to the country's continued prosperity and prejudicial to national unity.'

Defeat of Meighen Government.

"That amendment, which was of the very essence of the difference between Mr. Meighen and all whose views on fiscal policy differed from his own, was opposed by enough of the Progressive members from the Province of Alberta to cause it to be defeated by a majority of 7. In the debate on the Budget every one of these gentlemen supported Mr. Robb's budget resolutions and voted down the milk and water amendment moved from Mr. Meighen's side of the House and which resulted in the Liberal Government being sustained on its fiscal policies by a majority of 13 in a division which was the largest, the most important and the most significant of the session. Does anyone suppose that conviction or principal on fiscal policy explains the vote cast on this amendment, or that the vote constituted an expression of confidence in Mr. Meighen's 'temporary' government, as its members would have us believe? Certainly not. Some of those who voted against the amendment, contrary to their own beliefs and convictions on fiscal matters, did not hesitate to declare that they did so becarse they believed that to have supported the amendment would have meant the defeat of Mr. Meighen's temporary administration which, in the circumstances, they conceived it their duty to support as a means of getting through what remained of the legislation of the session.

"In making mention of these facts I am not seeking to pass judgment in any way, least of all to criticize adversely. I wish to make no comment whatever. I am seeking only to explain what may appear a very strange proceeding and to show that the votes as recorded in the concluding days of the session were, in the case of some at least, not expressive of any conviction upon the motions to which they were related, but were influenced by considerations wholly apart from the subject matter of the resolutions. What in this regard is true of the amendment with respect to fiscal policy is equally true of the Stevens and other amendments moved after Mr. Meighen's 'temporary' government came into office.

Sees Connivance in Senate.

"Why, then, it may be asked, if I were sure of support to the close of the session, did I not seek to carry on? The answer is that throughout the week of June 20-25 I had witnessed what appeared to me to be no end of intrigue with respect both to the Stevens amendment and the amendment to the Grain Bill which was that week before the Senate. It was apparent that the Tories in both Houses were working together to embarrass the Administration, that the Tory majority in the Senate was so manipulating procedure with respect to the Grain Bill as to influence the action of certain members in the House of Commons. It was equally apparent that certain members of the Progressive party who, at the outset of the session, had agreed to an honorable co-operation with the Government on its legislative program, but who, throughout the session, because of their previous Tory predilections and affiliations, had given but a grudging support even to their own group, had decided to end that co-operation, and to do so in a manner which would occasion most embarrassment to the Administration. In the circumstances, I felt that matters had come to a pass where there was far too much of intrigue and uncertainty to permit of Government being carried on in a manner befitting the honor and dignity of Parliament, and that only a declaration that an appeal to the people would follow the conclusion of the session would enable its proceedings to be brought satisfactorily to a close. I felt that if, with the support which had been accorded my Administration throughout the session, matters had reached a stage where I was unable to carry on with the regard which was due to the responsibilities of a Prime Minister for the proceedings of Parliament, no one else could be found who to that end could form an Administration, and that dissolution at an early date was not only in the public interest, but inevitable, and I so advised His Excellency."

Customs Probe Preceded Charges

Reviewing the Customs probe itself, Mr. King pointed out that the investigation of the conduct of Customs business in the Port of Montreal was initiated by the Minister of Customs in the King Government, Hon. G. H. Boivin, before the Stevens charges were made. The information used by Mr. Stevens, he said, to substantiate his charges against the department was obtained through detectives employed by the King Government collaborating with the Commercial Protective Association. The former Inspector of the port, J. E. A. Bisaillon, was dismissed from Government service before the Customs probe began, he added.

Coming to more recent history, Mr. King asserted that the unanimous report of the Parliamentary Committee which investigated the conduct of the Customs Department did not contain the particular clauses censuring the Government which Hon. H. H. Stevens afterward attempted to insert by means of an amendment to the report on the floor of the House.

"In the absence in the report of a single line of censure from a single member of the committee, what becomes of 'the verdict' of the committee which Mr. Meighen asks his hearers to read?" asked Mr. King.

"Assume for a moment that out of this audience a committee were selected to investigate some charges of fraud in connection with officials of this auditorium, and that the committee, after months of careful inquiry, brought in a report containing certain findings, but not a line of which reflected upon the management as a whole or one of its present members. Does any one believe that a majority of those assembled would thereupon, without a knowledge of the evidence as intimate as that of the committee itself, be in a position to pass, or be justified in passing, censure on any one not mentioned in that report, let alone censuring the management as a whole, and this just because one part of this audience may be Liberal in its sympathies, another part Tory and another part Progressive, Labor or Independent?

Quotes From Opponent's Speech

"That is exactly what Mr. Stevens sought to have it appear that the House of Commons had done. That is what the present Prime Minister would have you believe was done. Only he goes much farther. Listen to his words: 'The late Ministers of Mr. Mackenzie King, and Mr. King himself, defeated by the people, defeated by the House of Commons, censured by the representatives of the nation, these men surely have no title to be restored to office now.' The verdict of the House of Commons will be the verdict of the nation.' To show how wide of the truth this striking peroration is, the late Government never was defeated by the people; it assumed office in December, 1921, and was continuously in office till June 28, 1926; it was never defeated in the House of Commons, and it was never censured by the representatives of the nation. It may be true that the 'verdict' of the House of Commons will be the verdict of the nation,' but that will be the verdict passed by the House of Commons on Mr. Meighen's Government, not any verdict passed on mine."

Attempts were made last year, went on Mr. King, to defeat the Liberal Government, "not on the issues which were before the electorate, but by an underground whispering campaign of the vilest kind, conducted systematically, and with an industry and an ingenuity which surpass belief." Prejudices of race, religion and war, he added, were revived, but, still more, innuendo was employed to damage personal reputations. "Especially was this true of the whispering campaign carried on among the women of our country," he added, "who, being for the most part newly enfranchised, and less suspicious of such vile motives and methods," were, perhaps, more susceptible.

"A Whispering Campaign."

"It is already apparent," he went on, "that this kind of underground whispering campaign is to be again carried on, and that the Duncan report and the investigation of the committee are to be made the basis of it. It is being suggested that there are things in the Duncan report which could never be published. If such were true, it was the business of the committee of the House of Commons which had the Duncan report and all exhibits before it to have said so, to have intimated what these things were, what were their source, and upon whom they reflected. The Duncan report appears in full in the evidence, and was tabled with all exhibits in the House of Commons. That the report is silent on the matters that are so much discussed in whispering and by way of suggestion is prima facie proof that, in the opinion of the members of the committee, who had everything before them, findings upon them were not justified by the evidence."

The guilt or innocence of individuals, whether they be Cabinet Ministers, civil servants or the humblest citizen, he urged, should be investigated by an impartial tribunal. He was willing that the Customs probe should be continued by an impartial, judicial tribunal. He would prefer that such a judicial tribunal comprise not one Judge, however distinguished, but a Royal Commission of three Judges. In saying this he had "no defence to offer of any person who has been guilty of any wrongdoing. I have no desire to shield any person, or to hide the slightest wrong."

The "Constitutional Question."

Discussing the constitutional question more particularly, Mr. King said:

"The first question I should like to ask is: Was I right or was I wrong in the advice I tendered His Excellency—in saying that dissolution was necessary and inevitable? If on Monday I was wrong in advising dissolution as the only solution of the existing situation, why was the same advice considered sound when coming from Mr. Meighen on Friday of the same week?

"The second question I should like to ask is: Was I right or wrong in stating to His Excellency that if, as Prime Minister, I could not carry on in a manner befitting the honor and dignity of Parliament under conditions as they existed in the House of Commons, neither Mr. Meighen nor any other member of the House could? If I was wrong, why did Mr. Meighen's Government not last longer than two days and a half, and why did Mr. Meighen end the session in such a summary fashion, not even waiting to arrange for a formal prorogation?

"I think I do full justice to His Excellency when I say that he conceived it to be his duty in the circumstances of the late Parliament to act a a sort of umpire between the political parties in Canada. Indeed, I think I use His Excellency's own words when I say that he held the view that I had had a chance to govern and that Mr. Meighen had not been given a chance of trying to govern or saying that he could not do so, and that all reasonable expedients should be tried before resorting to another election. Holding this view and believing the prerogative of dissolution was his to exercase, His Excellency was unwilling at the time to grant a dissolution.

"I took the position, which I have mentioned here to-night, that Mr. Meighen's chances to govern had all along been quite as good as my own; that throughout the session the House of Commons had consistently declined to give him its confidence, and I did not see how it could now be expected to give its confidence to any Ministry he might attempt to form; that as to which political party had the right to govern, that was a matter which, as I had pointed out after the last general election, it was for Parliament to decide, if Parliament were in a position so to do; that when Parliament ceased to be in a position to make a satisfactory decision as to which party should govern, it was then for the people to decide.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

MEANING OF THE PASS-OVER

Text: Exod. 12:1, 2, 21-28.

And the Lord spake unto Moses and Aaron in the land of Egypt, saying,

This month shall be unto you the beginning of months it shall be the first month of the year to you.

Then Moses called for all the elders of Israel, and said unto them, Draw out and take you a lamb according to your families, and kill the passover.

And ye shall take a bunch of hyssop, and dip it in the blood that is in the bason, and strike the lintel and the two side posts with the blood that is in the bason: and none of you shall go out at the door of his house until the morning.

For the Lord will pass through to smite the Egyptians: and when he seeth the blood upon the lintel, and on the two side posts, the Lord will pass over the door, and will not suffer the destroyer to come in unto your houses to smite you.

And ye shall observe this thing for an ordinance to thee and to thy sons forever.

And it shall come to pass, when ye be come to the land which the Lord will give you, according as he hath promised, that ye shall keep this service.

And it shall come to pass when your children shall say unto you. What mean ye by this service?

That ye shall say, It is the sacrifice of the Lord's passover, who passed over the houses of the children of Israel in Egypt, when he smote the Egyptians, and delivered our houses. And the people bowed the head, and worshiped.

And the children of Israel went away, and did as the Lord had commanded Moses and Aaron, so did they.

MEANING OF THE PASSOVER.

BY WM. E. GILROY, D.D.
Editor of The Congregationalist.

Our lesson deals with one of the most important ritual observances in the history of mankind. One need only think of the part that the Jewish people have played in history, and of the central place in the life of that people of the Feast of the Passover, to realize that this is true.

The establishment of the passover and the deep place that it came to have in the life of the people would seem to be the strongest evidence of the historic backgrounds of our lesson. There had been in the life of the Jewish people a great tragedy and a great deliverance.

Tradition and Fact.

All except those who take an entirely credulous and uncritical attitude toward all things historical and religious will realize that in the records of the early life and history of every people there is a place where tradition blends with fact.

It is so in the life of every people and nation today, not excepting our own country, the newest and largest of modern developments. American historians today are constantly producing evidence of the extent to which in our own national life tradition blends with fact.

There is no reason why we should assume that any ancient people was an exception in this regard. The records of Israel's national life that have come down to us were apparently written, in many instances, long after the events recorded.

I emphasize this fact of the blending of tradition and fact in the early records of a people because it seems to me important in its suggestion that the interest and the great spiritual teachings of Scripture depend not upon a multiplicity of detail but upon the essence of the narrative—the great important facts concerning spiritual life and development.

Those of us especially who have not been brought up under Jewish teaching and tradition will find it difficult to appreciate the teachings to be derived from the story of the Passover if we approach it in any other way.

It is especially necessary that we should interpret the inner meaning of the Passover in the light of Christian ideas. We need only read the records concerning the Passover in the New Testament, and especially the story of the closing events in the life of our Lord, to realize the deep significance of the Passover in relation to Christianity.

What was this significance? It was the effort to express in form and ceremony the worship of the people that related to the sense of God's care and Providence. As such there can be no doubt that the Passover became to some merely a form or a national rite while to others it was a worshipful consecration to God as the upholder and deliverer of his people.

The Passover emphasized a sacrificial element in the life of Israel. It helped to bring into life the dominance of great ideals and supreme emotions. No one could contemplate all that the Passover involved without inevitably having his selfishness rebuked and without being quickened into an intensity of patriotic zeal and religious fervor.

It is well when in the life of every individual and in the life of every nation there is such a worshipful and sincere response to a sublime event and to a sublime ideal. That nation is surely spiritually poverty stricken that has not established great shrines in its national life.

Realising Calvary.

The greatness of Christianity is that it has established in life the supreme shrine. No human life can ever be the same when Calvary has been realized, Christ our Passover is sacrificed for us.

In the death of Christ we find the new supreme fact of the deliverance of the world from bondage. Here also we see manifested the love of God.

We must not think of Christianity and the New Testament as abolishing the spirit of the Passover as an institution of Judaism.

We must think of Christianity rather as giving all that was connected with that institution richer and more universal expression. In this as in all else that was great in the Old Testament, Jesus came not to destroy but to fulfill.

NEVER EATS MEAT.

LONDON, July 24.—George Bernard Shaw will be seventy years old on July 26, but he will not overload his stomach on an elaborate birthday dinner.

In fact, the eccentric dramatist never eats a heavy dinner. That is the reason he says he is in good health and is able to work steadily without exhaustion. He rarely accepts an invitation to dine out, and if he does he eats only simple food. Vegetables and fruit make up his diet. He never eats meat.

THE OTHER SIDE OF THE STORY.

The letter of Mr. T. J. Wallace, which appears elsewhere in this issue, is proof of the old saying that there are two sides to every story.

Mr. Wallace is one of the Rice Lake property owners who have been accused of annoying American visitors by trying to prevent them from fishing in front of their property.

When complaints were made to The Examiner the seriousness of any such conduct as reported in its effect upon tourist traffic was recognized, and condemnation was expressed.

However, Mr. Wallace, who is widely known in this district, throws an entirely different light on the incident, and it is but fair to him that he should be given an opportunity to tell his side of the case, and that The Examiner should call attention to his version of what happened in the case of these American visitors who were central figures in the episode, a version that is verified by Mr. J. H. Cruikshank.

His letter declares that it was not a desire to chase away fishermen, but a protest against the annoyance of a noisy motor boat that precipitated the dispute and accuses the visitors of very unseemly conduct.

THE CANOE.

The tragedy at Balsam Lake has naturally brought out much discussion as to the safety or otherwise of canoes, and some people have gone so far as to suggest a campaign against the use of this type of water-craft.

The Examiner, as its readers know, has frequently referred to the necessity of being careful as to the handling of canoes, and such warnings cannot be too frequently or too emphatically given, yet to talk of abolishing canoes altogether is nonsense.

In the hands of those who know how to handle it and who recognize its limitations, the canoe is a delightful craft for use on rivers and inland lakes.

It is not a boat for novices; it requires expert handling and necessitates care on the part of its occupants, but where these requirements are met the canoe has its place and it admirers, and an attempt to legislate against its use would be hotly resented by thousands of Ontario people who like paddling.

What must be done in regard to the canoe is to educate the public to the need of care; too many people are using the craft who obviously are ignorant of the first principles of paddling.

A BAD COMBINATION.

The combination of glaring headlights and a horse-drawn vehicle carrying no light at all was responsible for an accident at Bailieboro this week when a motor car, its driver blinded by the lights of another car, smashed into a buggy.

This combination has caused numerous collisions of a similar nature, and will continue to do so until the conditions are changed.

There are regulations against glaring headlights, but the nuisance continues.

There is no legislation in regard to lights for horse-drawn vehicles, because rural sentiment as a whole is strongly opposed to a precaution from which farmers would greatly benefit.

When two cars are approaching each other and drivers are bothered by the glare of the headlights, an unilluminated vehicle that happens to be there at the same time usually suffers.

In the Bailieboro case the motorist knew nothing of the presence of the buggy until his car crashed into it; a light on the buggy would have prevented the accident.

Sooner or later the wisdom of such a protective measure will be recognized in quarters where it is strongly opposed now, and then the politicians will hasten to put the measure on the statute books.

REASONABLE SAFETY.

Without any desire on the part of The Examiner to attempt to fix the responsibility for what happened at Balsam Lake on Tuesday night, the tragedy should cause everybody who has occasion to go on the water to be careful about the loading and balancing of their boats.

Of the ill-fated war canoe from which eleven were drowned, it is said that it would hold a crew of fifteen with "reasonable safety."

Undoubtedly it would seat fifteen comfortably, and in the hands of fifteen expert paddlers experienced in war canoe work would be reasonably safe.

But the lesson that the accident should teach those responsible for the safety of boy campers is that circumstances may easily arise under which loading a boat to its full passenger limit with a crew in which there are inexperienced paddlers would be disastrous.

A racing shell will carry eight trained oarsmen with reasonable safety.

Send the same shell out on a cruise with eight men who are not experts, and the odds in favour of an accident are very great.

For camp purposes a boat that will seat fifteen should not be called upon to carry more than nine or ten at the outside.

Over that limit every additional paddler and every additional amount of weight contributes to the chance of an accident.

ANOTHER DANIEL COME TO JUDGMENT.

Major Walter Elliot, British Under-Secretary for Health, holds that the women of England who wear silk stockings, sleeveless blouses and knee-length skirts to an excessive extent, do so because, as he argues, there are two million more women than men in the British Isles, and the women try to advertise themselves in order to get married. This is just another Daniel come to judgment. Because, on this continent, where there are just as many men as women, the girls probably go to more excessive lengths than they do in England in the way of silk stockings and short skirts.

This sort of wisdom reminds us of an address which was once delivered in Ottawa by Mr. W. J. Bryan at the time when he was arguing that mankind was being "crucified upon a cross of gold." His view was that the commercial stagnation and distress which was prevalent in the United States at that time was due to unlimited coinage of silver, which was driving gold out of circulation; and he argued that a value should be fixed by law for silver at the rate of 16 to 1 as compared with gold. This was expected to stimulate the use of gold.

Statistics at the time showed the amount of gold in the United States in currency averaged about $6 per head. So Mr. Bryan told his Canadian audience it was this comparatively small average of gold in circulation in proportion to silver that was causing the trouble over there.

At the moment he made this statement, Canada was comparatively prosperous—and the Canadian financial statistics showed that at the time there was practically no gold currency in Canada at all!

In other words, the Canadian facts showed Mr. Bryan's gospel to be foolish, as he would have discovered if he had been trying to fit theories to facts, instead of facts to theories. And Major Walter Elliot in England is doing the same sort of thing about the girls.—Ottawa Journal.

RUDYARD KIPLING'S PLACE.

The re-appearance in public of Rudyard Kipling, after an extended period of sickness and seclusion, has been universally welcomed as an event of first importance, signifying not only the restoration to health of England's most popular poet, but, as many hope, the return to literary activity of one of the world's great men of letters, whose prolonged silence has been a loss to literature.

Had there been a British Academy of Letters, Kipling would have been "crowned" long ago, for among living writers there are few whose claims to a place among the immortals are more widely accepted than his. To some extent, this fact was acknowledged a few years ago in the award of the Nobel prize to the poet whose ardent Imperialism was not regarded as a disqualification for an honor reserved for the apostles of peace; and now it has obtained further recognition, this time at the hands of his own countrymen, by the bestowal upon him of a distinction, not less highly prized, in the shape of the Royal Society's gold medal, a reward "for services to literature" that was first conferred a century ago upon Sir Walter Scott.

In acknowledging the honor, Kipling seemed to regard the occasion as one for taking stock of his art and its claims to a share of that future state which men call immortality. He appeared to realize that with the lengthening of the shadows, the time had come when some definite attempt should be made to appraise the value and significance of his contributions to literature and to measure the part that might, as he put it, be "carried forward to the general account" of posterity. It was a challenge to the critics to pass impartial judgment upon a writer whose art and attitude to modern life have aroused more contention, perhaps, than those of any other contemporary author.

There are those—and perhaps they comprise the majority of his admirers—to whom Kipling represents the poet-laureate of the barrack-room, the troubadour of Tommy Atkins, and the composer par excellence of stirring jingo ditties. Mention of his name in any circle of readers is almost sure to evoke a chorus of appreciation that finds expression in the recital of "Mandalay," "Soldier and Sailor Too" and others of what he once termed his "brassiest' lays.

Another aspect of Kipling that appeals to many, while it repels others, is its assertive Imperialism, the significance of which has necessarily to be estimated from a political, rather than a literary point of view. If a dozen of his admirers were asked wherein they thought his importance lay, a majority would probably reply that it was to be found in his service to the Empire, in his genius to interpret and express the patriotic sentiment of his race, in his influence as a propagandist alive to the need of closer relations between the Dominions and the motherland.

In these directions Kipling has undoubtedly rendered service that is in itself a remarkable tribute to the power of his pen, but while it has added immeasurably to his popularity, it has also subjected him to the criticism that in the artist there is merged more than is desirable of the politician.

To still another class, Rudyard Kipling's appeal is essentially that of a writer with a healthy and wholesome philosophy of life. As distinct from Hardy, Shaw, Wells, Galsworthy, Bennett and other contemporaries, he has the optimistic faith of one who is not blind to the evil in the world, but who prefers to contemplate the good, the beautiful and the heroic. His characters are human, and have their littlenesses and flaws; yet they are never without redeeming features that serve as a beacon of light among the shadows, and inspire admiration where others would evoke sympathy. To him the essence of character is the degree of perfection or efficiency to which it can be moulded, and in this phase of his art he is all but supreme.

But if we mistake not the meaning of his speech before the Royal Society, none knows better than Kipling himself the secret of his power and popularity, and the nature of his challenge to posterity. It is not as a poet, or as an Imperialist with a message that he awaits with becoming modesty the final verdict, but as a writer of fiction and a master of his craft whose words, to quote from a former deliverance, "become alive and walk up and down in the hearts of the hearers" and readers. That gift is Kipling's chief contribution to literature, and it is enough to ensure for him the reward he humbly hopes for, "that there may survive of his work a fraction good enough to be drawn up later to uphold or embellish some ancient truth re-stated, or some old delight re-born."—Ottawa Journal.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Among other things that show sand these days is the strawberry.

Ontario's drowning total is rapidly mounting this summer. Be careful always, should be the watchword at every resort.

The difference between President Coolidge and Premier Ferguson is that the former refuses to talk about anything, while the latter will discuss everything except the date of the by-elections.

One of the stirring romances of the summer season is the love of The Toronto Telegram for The Mail and Empire and The Ottawa Journal.

Both sides are talking about smoke screens which the intelligent reader should not mistake for the fumes of campaign cigars.

That sea monster story from British Columbia suggests a spectacular kick in the popular brews out on the coast.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

SOME PREFERABLE FORMS OF WORDS.

The following examples of preferable forms of words and phrases, with the reasons given, are taken from "Principles of Rhetoric," by Professor A. S. Hill:

"By consequence" or "in consequence," in the sense of "consequently," is preferable to "of consequence;" since the latter means also "important;" "admittance," as in "No admittance except on business," is preferable to "admission," since the latter also means "confession" or "acknowledgement;" "insurance" to "assurance" policy, since "assurance" means also "confidence." International "exhibition" is preferable to international "exposition," since "exposition" has long been used in another meaning, as in "an exposition of doctrine;" "afterwards," as an adverb, is preferable to "after," since the latter is also used as a preposition. "Relative," in the sense of "member of a family," is preferable to "relation."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

ABOUT CANOES

To the Editor of The Examiner,

Sir,—In the old days boys were taught to right their canoes when upset in a squall and how to get into them again. It was practically impossible to drown then. In big canoes one got in at a time and backing made room for another.

Away back in the 80's I attended an American Canoe Association meet at Lake George in the stormy Adirondacks. In the open sailing race over a 12 mile course a furious gale came down from the mountains and upset all competitors including a Canadian competitor in an open Peterborough canoe 3 miles from help. He half-emptied his canoe by rocking it and got in again over the end, and again the gale blew him over and 2 miles further out of his course but he got into his righted canoe again and when a large steam yacht was sent out to pick up the survivors they gave him a great cheer when he shouted from the roaring waters, "You can't drawn a Canadian." No power on earth could have saved him as he told me if he had not understood how to right his canoe. It was six hours before aid could get to him but he did not need it.

Can a war canoe not be righted and bailed out as each climbs in when his turn comes?

Is it a lost art?

Keene, Ont.,
July 10th, 1926.

To the Editor of Examiner:

The other side of the story of an article that appeared in a recent issue of The Peterboro Examiner complaining of discourtesies toward American fishermen in this vicinity. Please let me tell the other side of the story.

Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] of Chicago were spending three weeks at their cottage here and were entertaining five American guests from Kane, Penn. People occupying Mr. Garman's tent on The Point considered it a great joke to patrol in their noisy outburst motor boat the shore close in to Mr. [illegible] cottage from early morning till late at night under the pretext of fishing. Seldom, if ever, are fish caught at this place. Sleep or rest was beyond the question, and because one of his guests was a lady in delicate health, and because up to this time occupants of The Point camp were always gentlemanly and reasonable and fraternized with us freely, Mr. [illegible] courteously asked the noise-makers if they would give him and his American guests a little respect.

In answer to his plea he received abuse and language no gentleman would use, and the nuisance became greater, if possible.

Shortly after this I came to my cottage, and preparatory to taking out my motor boat I went out in a canoe and set up two stakes to mark the channel through the weed-bed to the lake. They probably mistook me for Mr. [illegible], accused me of placing wires to catch their boat's propeller. The stakes were about ten feet apart, and they swooped down on them and pulled them up, and hurled vile epithets at me. I replaced the stakes.

The next evening I was trolling in the open lake in a canoe, when they again overtook me, and again made some very unlady-like remarks. I paid no attention to them. They followed me right into my boat-house.

I took out my motor boat for the first time and tuned it up, never going more than two hundred yards from the boat-house, and at no time interfered with their fishing, and made no remarks of any kind. They left of their own accord, and when I returned the motor boat to the boat-house they returned to make some more nasty remarks. One of the American visitors suggested that we go out and see what was the matter with them, but I advised to entirely ignore them.

They were back next morning at daylight, and tauntingly shouted that "We will wake them up anyway."

I have been on the lake for 30 years, have entertained hundreds of Americans, have extended little courtesies with many more, and have never before seen or heard of such unseemly and unsportsmanlike conduct.

Mr. Garman, who furnishes the camp for his employees, is a very fine gentleman and greatly liked by all who were favored by meeting him. Former occupants of the camp have been good fellows, and no decent minded Americans will for a moment uphold the conduct of those who cloak themselves under the title of Americans and then consider themselves free to act as they like.

Mr. Carson's comments are untimely and uncalled for. He has known me for years, and in his official capacity it was his duty to investigate the facts before allowing his censure to appear in print.

The visit of seven American visitors was made unpleasant by the actions of the three complainants.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, July 24 (Canadian Press).—The foreign trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market yesterday was dull and featureless. The trade in cash grain in the domestic market was also very slow but the tone was steady.

The exports and local trade in spring and winter wheat grades of flour was quiet, but prices ruled steady.

The millfeed market was fairly active and firm. The market for standard grades of rolled oats continued inactive but the undertone was steady.

The movement of baled hay to Great Britain and the United States continues good, but the local business was dull.

A moderate amount of business was worked in eggs and the feeling was firm. The receipts were 1,491 cases.

A stronger feeling developed in the butter market and prices were markd up 1-2 cent per pound. The receipts were 7,082 packages.

Considerable export business was transacted in cheese and prices on spot were steady. The receipts were 16,033 boxes.

The volume of business transacted in beans was small with car lots of choice white hand-picked quoted at $2.25 per bushel, and smaller quantities at $2.35 to $2.45 per bushel.

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO, July 24 (Canadian Press).—Rapidly enlarging stocks of domestic wheat with receipts assuming record proportions turned the wheat market here downward yesterday after an early advance. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy at 1-4 to 1 1-8 net decline with corn unchanged to 3-8 higher; oats 1-8 to 1-2 up, and provisions varying from 12 setback to a rise of 10 cents.

Piling up of stocks of wheat in the southwest attracted particular interest, Kansas City having received 5,700,000 bushels in the last five days. Primary arrivals as a whole have reached an aggregate of nearly 18,000,000 bushels so far this week, one of the largest totals ever known for any similar period. Under such circumstances, cash wheat prices, both here and at Kansas City showed a tendency to sag and on some transactions were 1 cent a bushel down. Reports of a congestion of wheat at Montreal tended also to weaken values, especially as export demand for all North American wheat continued light.

Dry weather in the Canadian Northwest together with unexpected firmness of Liverpool quotations was largely responsible for temporary bulges witnessed in the wheat market. On the other hand, rains fell in parts of Minnesota as well as the Dakotas, and the buying power here waned when traders who had been among the early purchasers tried to unload. Aggressive selling which developed at this stage was was given further impetus by assertions that Oklahoma has raised the largest crop in the history of the State. Some estimates which were circulated put the Oklahoma yield as high as 89,000,000 bushels.

Corn owed its strength to numerous dry weather complaints from the main portion of the corn belt. Copious rains were said to be needed in many sections. Oats were affected by reports that yields as a rule promise to be light.

For the most part provisions were firm influenced by the action of hog values, and of corn.

STERLING EXCHANGE

MONTREAL, July 24 (Canadian Press). — Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand $4.85 1-8.
Sterling cables $4.85 5-8.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

THINGS TO LAST.

When I was young I wanted new
Adventures, places, even friends:
But now I'm old, and, as life ends,
Only the old things now will do.
Youth must have change, but age must own
The things that age has always known,
And men debate, both loud and long,
But neither youth nor age is wrong.

And so I say to youth, desire
The new, while new things may be had,
Yet choose the things to make you glad
That makes life happy to your sire.
To youth the world is all a quest,
So seek the new, but seek the best,
Not for the moment, hour or day,
But for the years that stretch away.

Seek gold, but know the worth of gold,
The curse of fools, the wise man's friend:
The gold we save, not gold we spend,
Brings quiet comfort to the old.
Go seek some undiscovered land,
But build on rock and not on sand:
Go seek new loves, but seek the true,
The only loves that soon will do.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

DOLLS FOR JAPAN.

By Dr. Frank Crane.

A movement is on foot to have the children of America send to Japan dolls for the Japanese children to be used at their annual doll festival.

The Japanese people have a beautiful family custom called the Hina Matsuri, or festival of dolls, which comes every year on the third of March. On that day each family brings out of its ancestral treasure house the dolls of preceding generations to get acquainted with the new ones. They are exhibited in comparison with the dolls of the present day.

Little girls and older girls dress in gala costumes and enjoy their ancestral dolls and those of the present day.

It is intended that the children of this country shall contribute dolls for the Japanese children. It is proposed that they send many thousand dolls to join the doll families of Japan as an expression of good will and friendship.

A committee on world friendship is instituted by the Federal Council of Churches and its proposal for doll messengers is approved and recommended by the children of America.

When so much is being done to arouse suspicion and distrust toward Japan among Americans it is refreshing to see this gesture of good will and kindness on the part of the children. In spite of the efforts of politicians and others, it is the feelings of the common people that has its way at last.

We cannot begin too early to instill good will, friendship and understanding among the children of the various races. The Japanese children should be the friends and not the enemies of the American children.

The child is a born internationalist. It makes no difference to him with whom he plays, so long as it is a human being. A white child will just as soon play with a negro baby as with a white baby. It is only in later life that we learn to make racial distinctions.

The desire to play with dolls is a universal instinct. It is present in all girl children. Little girls like to play with dolls because their mothers for countless ages have been nursing children. To the end of time probably the doll will be the favorite plaything of the girl.

The movement, therefore, for the American children to send dolls to this Japanese festival is to be commended.

The instructions are that the dolls should be from thirteen to fifteen inches high and should look like an American. They should be carefully dressed and be provided with extra dresses. So that the dolls should be as much alike as possible in size and quality they should cost between two and a half and four dollars. They should be ready by the 20th of December, 1926.

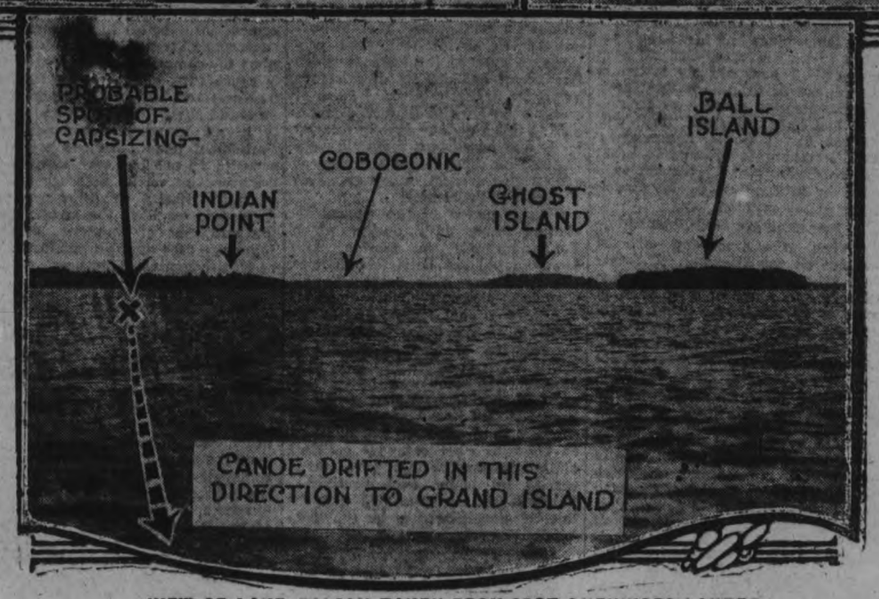
Scenes on Grand Island Where Four Survivors Landed and Obtained Food



VIEW OF LAKE BALSAM TAKEN FROM SPOT SURVIVORS LANDED.

When the four survivors of the ill-fated war canoe, Leonard O'Hara, George H. Waller, William Wigington and Arthur H. Lambden, drifted with their water-logged craft to the shore of Grand Island, after almost six hours in the waters of Balsam Lake, they lay down on the beach and almost immediately dropped off to sleep, overcome by exhaustion. On awakening, hours later, they felt the pangs of hunger, and one of the party tramped a mile inland to the farm-house of Mr. and Mrs. George Booth, where he procured food. TOP LEFT shows Mr. and Mrs. Booth with their family. CENTRE, the Booth farm-house, and BELOW, a view of Balsam Lake taken from the approximate spot on the shore of Grand Island where the young men landed.

"What kind of birds are those, Mother?" I heard a little girl ask in the movie theatre the other night, as a ship came in with the heroine acting as Captain and the wicked crew all chained to the mast.

"Oh, don't bother me! I don't know what they are," said the lady, 'ook at the hero, isn't he nice?—yes, yes, I see the birds, dearie, but maybe they are only pigeons: they play such tricks in pictures, just to make them pretty. Maybe they are Gulls."

"What's a Gull, Mother?" came the natural question, but mamma did not know and couldn't tell, but the little girl had noticed that the gulls were not all the same colour or shape. I was surprised and started in to tell the little one something about them. I started to tell the little one, I said, but "Maw" listened in on it and before I knew where I was, I was talking to her instead of to her daughter, for she was deeply interested, once she found that it was worth listening to.

"You see that lovely one flying back and forth? the one with the pure white body and grey wings with black tips?" I asked, "well, that is an adult gull. It is either a herring gull or a ring-billed gull but that is of no account, they both look alike and nobody can tell them apart unless they come over and ask you to have a look at their feet and bills, which they are not in the habit of doing. You cannot tell in the picture, as these are not colored movies, but if they were, you would notice that the bigger sized one has pale pink feet, and that is the Herring Gull. The smaller one, the Ringbilled one, has feet of a dirty or greenish yellow. But take a tip from me don't worry as to which is which, for they are so much alike.

The mottled ones app, to be the most numerous of all the birds there. These are gulls also, but they are young ones, and the young take a couple of years to change from various mottled browns to the lovely adult plumage. Yes, the muddled up brown ones are juveniles."

"The stories with ships and the sea and such are much nicer when a person knows about the gulls, aren't they?" said "Maw."

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S ACORN PUDDING.

Once upon a time Uncle Wiggily read in a book a story about an old dog who went camping in the woods.

"And for supper at night we had raisin pudding," said the old dog in the story book.

"Ah, how I wish I had a raisin pudding," said Uncle Wiggily to himself as he sat reading the book. "It makes me hungry just to see about it in print. I'm going to make for me a raisin pudding."

As it happened, Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy wasn't out in the kitchen of the hollow stump bungalow, so the rabbit gentleman thoughe he might dare venture out.

He knew a ittle about cooking, having watched Nurse Jane so many times and also having helped his wife when she was busy looking after the forty-eleven little rabbits.

"It is easy to make what I want," thought Uncle Wiggily. "I just need to mix up some rice and milk and sugar, with an egg or two, put in a lot of raisins and bake it in the oven. Then I'll have the same thing the old camp dog had."

So far, so good. Uncle Wiggily mixed up in a tin pan the sugar, milk, rice, eggs and other things, and then he got a package of raisins out of the pantry. He was just going to put the raisins in the pudding when he heard a voice calling:

"Whoo-oo! Come on out!"

"I wonder if that means me?" said the bunny gentleman -o himself, laying the raisins down on the kitchen table, the bunny hopped to the front door, thinking no harm.

On the bungalow steps was Jackie and Peetie Bow Wow, Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, Sammie Li tletail and a number of other animal boys.

"Where are Tooter and Scooter, Uncle Wiggily?" barked Jackie, the dog, while Johnnie and Billie Bushytail, the squirrels, chased each other around to the back kitchen door.

"Oh, Tooter and Scooter have gone swimming," said Uncle Wiggily, remembering to have seen these two of his little rabbit boys hopping across the lots a short time beford.

"Well, we came to get them to play ball," said Bully No Tail, the frog. "But we'll find them at the swimming hole. Thank you, Uncle Wiggily."

Uncle Wiggily mixed up the pudding.

"You are welcome," answered the bunny gentleman as he hopped back into the kitchen to finish making the pudding. He picked up what he thought were raisins off the table and tossed them into the batter. Then he popped the pudding into the oven to bake.

Meanwhile Johnnie and Billy Bushytail, scurrying with the other animal boys to the swimming hole, began pulling raisins out of their pockets.

"Where'd you get 'em?" barked Jackie Bow Wow.

"On Uncle Wiggily's table in the kitchen," answered Johnnie as he passed the raisins among his friends.

"Maybe you didn't ought to have tooken them; should you of?" asked Peetie, forgetting all about grammar, now that there was no school.

"Oh, we left a lot of acorns in place of the raisins," said Billie, the other squirrel. "Uncle Wiggily won't care, I guess. He's near-sighted, anyhow. And I guess maybe he was going to give us the raisins."

And so it happened that when the pudding was taken out of the oven it had baked acorns in and not raisins.

When Mr. Longears asked his wife to taste the pudding he had made, the rabbit lady took one mouthful and cried:

"Oh, what funny raisins!"

"Why, they're acorns!" squeaked Nurse Jane, who also took a taste.

"Oh, what a funny mistake!" laughed Mrs. Longears. "The pudding is no good!"

"Yes! It's good for something!" suddenly cried Uncle Wiggily. "The acorns in it are good to throw at the bad Bob Cat!" and just then that sly creature tried to slip in to nibble someone. But the Bunny gentleman threw the hard acorns out of the pudding at the Bob Cat, hitting him on the nose and making him yowl, and run away.

So Johnnie and Bilie were forgiven for leaving acorns in place of raisins, and if the umbrella doesn't put on roller skates to go to the movies with the rain coat, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's drum sticks.

Daily Short Story

JACK AND THE BEAN POT

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS

Jack Webster had been in the American Embassy in London for two and a half years and there was no denying the fact that, while he was rising financially in the world and most happy in his post, yet—well, home was home and he was more than a bit homesick for his own land and his own country folk.

Jack had succeeded in surrounding himself with a half dozen or so good scouts from the homeland and had his own chafing-dish and coffee percolator so that when too overcome with the monotony of roast beef and cabbage and fruit tarts he could prepare something that suited his palate and that of his pals.

It was perhaps in one of his homesick moments that his eye caught sight of the column in his morning paper headed, "Choice American Concoctions" and signed—not at all.

Jack read through the whole mouthwatering list of recipes which included Clam Chowder, Corn Pone, Chicken Maryland, Baked Beans and, last but by no means least, Mince Pie.

By the time Jack had finished the column he was so hungry and so frightfully homesick that he felt like booking on the next steamer sailing homeward.

Instead, in a rash moment, he decided to try to get in touch with the person who knew so much about American cooking and see if he could make arrangements to have a dinner served in his rooms.

"The fellows will eat themselves into boaconstrictors if I surprise them with some of these things," he mused while seeking the editorial office.

"The young lady who writes that column is a friend of our woman's page editor," he was told. "If you write a letter we will address it to her. That is the best we can do for you."

So Jack wrote a letter then and there. He intended to let no grass grow under his feet.

In a surprisingly short time he got a reply signed merely "Anne" which was the name under which the editor of the woman's page wrote. There were questions in it as to whether he had a kitchen and housekeeper or whether the dinner would have to be prepared and brought in. Also should she use her own discretion as to what to prepare or did Mr. Webster wish to select his own dishes?

Jack wrote back that she could give them anything she liked so long as Boston baked beans were on the menu. Also there was a kitchen and housekeeper, both at the disposal of Anne.

And upon receipt of Jack's letter two very charming heads drew closer together to discuss things. Anne, the woman's editor, was highly amused at the whole affair while Nancy Patterson, her friend in secrecy, was happier than she had been for three years.

"The last time," she confided with a soft blush, "that Jack proposed to me was out in Iowa. It was three years ago and I told him I could not possibly marry a man who had no fixed ambition and who was simply living on his inheritance. I didn't know he had come to London and was making good at the Embassy. You see, Anne, I—I loved him very much, and when I finally refused to marry him I was so unhappy that I've just been roaming about the world, writing stories. He doesn't even know where I am."

It was not an easy thing to arrange a dinner in a strange bachelor's flat without coming in personal contact with said bachelor until the very night of the dinner but that is what Nancy and her ally Anne were trying to do. They wanted a most complete surprise for Jack as well as his friends.

However, the housekeeper who took such excellent care of Jack was a ready third to the scheme and helped scout about London for cornmeal and other necessities difficult to obtain.

There was sno lightest doubt that Anne and Nancy had prepared a dinner fit for the gods and what's more they were about the daintiest two maids that ever carried a tray.

Six hungry men were sitting about Jack's hospitable table when Anne entered with steaming dishes of clam chowder.

Jack opened wide his eyes at sight of the lovely serving maid. His dinner was being served in royal style. The fellows all opened admiring eyes and when a second maid arrived to help, Jack jumped up with a spring that almost upset the entire table.

"Jack," cried Nancy, "you almost upset me and the tray—don't be silly," she added a second later when each and every soul in the room had turned surprised eyes on the remarkable picture that Jack and the maid were making.

There was no doubt that an essential and missing part of Jack's life had suddenly returned. Also there was little fear that she would ever be missing again. Jack was seeing to that.

"Jack! Please," cried Nancy looking shyly at all her audience, "there's chicken Maryland, corn pone, baked beans and mince pie and ——"

"But nothing in the world counts but you, Nancy," Jack told her.

"Oh yes it does," said Nancy, "Anne and I have spent lots of time on this dinner, so you wall sit right don and eat it."

Afnd ater a moment Jack came to his senses and obeyed.

MOSQUITO HUM TO BE BROADCAST

Song of Nightingale Was Caught By Microphone in Woods.

LONDON, July 23.—The hum of the mosquito is to be broadcast throughout England.

The song of the nightingale, caught by the microphone in woods thirty miles from London some time ago, proved such a success that now the buzz of insects is to be given a trial.

Prof. Moore Hogarth, of the College of Pestology, announces that he has in training a family of mosquitoes which, when proficient, will broadcast the high-pitched metallic ping so familiar to human beings wherever these insects abound.

EX-PREMIER RAISES

The Prime Minister and the Crown.

"In neither case, I maintained, was it a duty or a responsibility of the Governor-General to make the decision, I stated that, in my humble opinion, it was not for the Crown or its representative to be concerned with the differences of political parties, and that the prerogative of dissolution, like other prerogatives of the Crown, had come under British practice to be exercised by the Sovereign on the advice of his Prime Minister. It was for the Crown's adviser to say whether or not dissolution was necessary and for the Crown's adviser to take the responsibility of the advice tendered. Once a dissolution was granted, the people would soon say whether in the circumstances the advice tendered was or was not in accord with their wishes. In a word, the position I took was that in Canada the relation of Prime Minister to Governor-General is the same as that of Prime Minster to the King in Great Britain.

"That, may I say, is the position for which I now stand, and for which the Liberal party in Canada stands. It need not involve his Excellency in any particular.

Says Meighen Raised the Issue.

"Mr. Meighen says there is no constitutional issue. Let me tell the present Prime Minister that he will find before the present campaign is over that there is a constitutional issue greater than any that has been raised in Canada since the founding of this Dominion. It is a constitutional issue not raised by his Excellency the Governor-General, but by Mr. Meighen himself, and Mr. Meighen has only himself to thank that the issue has been raised, and that it overshadows everything else.

"If this Customs matter were the all-important matter which Mr. Meighen would like the people to believe it is, and he desired to make it the issue in a campaign, why, when sent for, did he not advise his Excellency the Governor-General that he was unable to form a Government, and therefore for his Excellency to send again for me and let me have a dissolution? That was all he needed to do; that was the constitutional course for him to pursue, and if he had been half as chivalrous with his Excellency as his Excellency sought to be with him that is the advice he would have tendered, and not made the Crown a party to a series of unconstitutional acts such as have not been paralleled, I believe, in the history of British Parliamentary institutions.

"An Insult to Parliament"

"Serious as is the issue which has been raised with respect to the relations of Prime Minister to Governor-General, it pales into relative insignificance when compared with the issue of the relations of Prime Minister to Parliament raised by the actions of Mr. Meighen himself. To have become Prime Minister by accepting full responsibility for his Excellency's refusal to grant dissolution, knowing at the time, as Mr. Meighen full well did, that he could not hope constitutionally to carry on, and that, as he himself later admitted, dissolution was necessary and inevitable, was bad enough. It is as nothing, however, in comparison with his unconstitutional behavior as a Prime Minister from the moment he assumed office under the Crown and proceeded to advise His Excellency, in daring as he did to ignore, defy and insult the entire membership of both Houses of Parliament when Parliament itself was actually in session. From this point on the issue ceases to be one chiefly of the constitutionality of the relations of Governor-General and Prime Minister; it becomes one of the constitutionality of the relations of the Prime Minister and Parliament. In other words, it becomes in a yet larger way the all-important issue of the source from which all power of government is derived—the issue, when Parliament exists, of the supremacy of Parliament itself. The rights, the dignities, the existence of Parliament, have been challenged by the present Prime Minister in a manner that surpasses all belief.

"What are the salient and undeniable facts? The first is that Mr. Meighen, when he accepted the office of Prime Minister, undertook, notwithstanding Parliament was in session at the time, to carry on the government of Canada by a Ministry that in no sense of the word was a responsible Ministry, and by his advice, knowingly, made the Crown, through its representative, a party to this unconstitutional course of procedure. Is there any possible denial of this statement? Lest any such should be attempted, listen to the admissions of Mr. Meighen and his so-called Acting Ministers.

"Take first of all the statement issued by Mr. Meighen and read in the House of Commons by Sir Henry Drayton. It declares that the Government as formed is 'only a temporary Government.' Since when has it become permissible to distinguish between a 'temporary' and a 'permanent' Government for Canada, to have one Government that is to carry on while Parliament is in session, and another Government that is to carry on under the same Prime Minister after Parliament has been prorogued or dissolved? Neither the Constitution of Canada nor that of any other part of the British Empire admits of any such arbitrary and absurd arrangement. There have been 'provisional' Governments in British history, but that was when the constitution was overthrown, when there was no regularly constituted Parliaments, not when a Parliament duly elected and accredited and so recognized by the people was actually in session.

When Is a Government?

"Listen to the next admission: 'My right honorable friend says that we have not a Government yet. In one sense he is perfectly right, and in another sense he is perfectly wrong. And a little later on: The regular Government to be formed has not yet been appointed.' And from this the Treasury benches in the House of Commons and from the House leader of the so-called Ministry. When, pray, under British constitutional usage and practice, were the entire domestic, inter-imperial and international affairs of Great Britain or any of the self-governing Dominions of the British Empire entrusted to a Government which in any sense of the word was 'not a Government,' or 'a Government to be formed'—'a Government that has not yet been appointed'? What becomes of the validity of the transactions of such a Government once they are questioned? Can it be held that it suits the purpose of such a Ministry with respect to a particular transaction that at one time they are a Government in one sense of the word, and if it does not suit the purpose that they are not a Government, 'a Government not yet appointed,' a 'Government to be formed'? The courts of this or any other country will not be prepared to construe the contractual obligations of the Crown in any such fashion. And remember, it is in the name of the Crown, not in Mr. Meighen's name, though upon his advice to its representative, that all the contractual obligations of his so-called Administration have been incurred.

"Listen to other admissions from members of this so-called Ministry: 'None of us are Ministers'; 'we are not King's Ministers'; 'we are not Ministers of the Crown.' And this from gentlemen actually sitting on the Treasury benches while the House of Commons is in session, and asking Parliament to appropriate supplies wherewith they may be enabled to control the entire business of the country!

"A Travesty, a Burlesque."

"I make my appeal to government as it is carried on in Britain—to British Parliamentary usage, practice and law. Do you imagine that anything of the kind would be attempted, let alone tolerated, in the British Parliament? Imagine Mr. Baldwin accepting office as Prime Minister while Parliament was in session in England, and advising his Majesty the King of his determination to appoint a temporary Ministry not one member of which would be sworn to office; imagine him proceeding in this reckless fashion, to constitute such a Ministry and to send its members into the House of Commons when that august assemblage was in session and the so-called Ministers undertaking to secure from Parliament supplies for the several departments they were administering. Imagine their Leader in the House publicly declaring they were only a temporary Government, that it was true that in one sense of the word they were not a Government at all, that they were a Government not yet formed, a Government yet to be appointed; imagine the Ministers themselves declaring they were not King's Ministers, not Ministers of the Crown, that not one of their number had taken an oath of office. How long, do you imagine, would the British House of Commons tolerate a travesty, a burlesque, of that kind? How long do you think, would the people of the British Isles stand for their constitutional rights and liberties which it has taken centuries of struggle to secure being thus ruthlessly violated and wholly ignored? You simply cannot imagine Mr. Baldwin attempting, let alone doing, anything of the kind; nor can you imagine Mr. Asquith, or Mr. Lloyd George, or Mr. Ramsay MacDonald, nor any Prime Minister from the days of Walpole, the first Prime Minister, doing anything of the kind. And yet that is precisely what Mr. Meighen has done, and what he is now asking the people of Canada to endorse.

Indifference to Rights of Parliament.

"But that is far from being all. If Mr. Meighen's utter indifference to the authority and rights of Parliament was disclosed in the arbitrary way in which he sought to force an irresponsible Ministry upon the House of Commons, it was made manifest in a yet more arrogant fashion by the contempt with which he treated the verdict of the Commons upon his Ministry and himself.

"I need not recall the incidents; they are still clear in the public mind I tendered my resignation as Prime Minister at noon on Monday, June 28. On the same day Mr. Meighen accepted office as Prime Minister and undertook to form a Ministry. On Tuesday he formed his ministry, and called it a 'temporary government.' This so-called temporary government was permitted to make its pronouncement to the House of Commons, and its members, other than the Prime Minister, to take the place which they immediately claimed on the Treasury benches to the right of the Speaker. On Wednesday, when these gentlemen began to ask the Commons to vote supplies, the Commons, availing itself of the time honored privilege of having its authority acknowledged before voting public moneys, asked by what right Mr. Meighen's so-called Acting Ministers were occupying seats in the Commons, having accepted offices of power and trust under the Crown, when parliamentary practice and law alike require that any member of Parliament acepting an office to which emolument attaches must immediately vacate his seat in parliament. We have already heard the defence that that was made: 'We are only a temporary Government.' In one sense we are not a government at all.' 'We are not Ministers of the Crown.' Such was the position when the House of Commons adjourned on Wednesday night.

Defeated in Commons.

"On Thursday the Hon. Mr. Lapointe rose to a question of privilege. He asserted that the action of the so-called Ministers in occupying seats in the House of Commons, and in attempting to control departments of Government without having followed the constitutional practice of resigning their seats and going back to the people for re-election constituted an infringement of the privileges of members of the House, and should be declared illegal. Later in the day a formal motion to this effect was moved in the House by the Hon. Mr. Robb, and was carried. This meant that the government of Mr. Meighen had been defeated no the floor of Parliament, and not only defeated, but declared by the Commons to have been without any right to exist. It mas more than a censure of a defeat — it was the strongest kind of condemnation which could be passed upon a Ministry. It was the first time in the history of the Canadian Parliament that a Ministry was defeated in Parliament itself.

"One would have thought that in circumstances of the kind, Mr. Meighen would not have been able to find time short enough within which to tender his resignation as Prime Minister and that of his Ministry.

"But apparently nothing so remote as the propriety of any act of his ever entered Mr. Meighen's mind; it is unfortunately true that he was equally oblivious to any sense or right or ly oblivious to any sense of right or signing, as was obviously his duty, he ignored completely the verdict of the Commons and continued to presume advise His Edcellency and to keep in power a Ministry which Parliament had declared never had any right to exist.

Procedure Is Contrastéd

"I pause here to remind the country of my advice to his Excellency after the last general election with respect to the constitutional means of determining who was entitled to carry on the government of the country. It was all summed up in the words, 'Let Parliament decide'; let the House of Commons express the will and wish of its members, Until the House did decide, and I know definitely that the majority of the members were prepared to support my Administration, I refrained from advising his Excellency with respect to any course of action other than such as was of a purely routine character.

"Heres again I make my appeal to British Parliamentary practice and law. Is it conceivable that any Prime Minister in Great Britain, told by the House of Commons that the actions of his Ministers were illegal, that they constituted an infringement of the privlieges of its members, would presume to continue to advise the Crown? That he would not in such circumstances immediately resign? Above all, can it be imagined that he would advise the Crown to pay no heed to the House of Commons; to ignore altogether the voice of the people's representatives in Parliament? Such a thing, I say, is wholly unbelievable. The British nation would be horrified at presemption of the kind. Not a paper in the British Isles would venture to defend in the name of constitutional government any such procedure. And yet that is precisely the conduct of which Mr. Meighen, as Prime Minister, has been guilty, and which he now asks the people of Canada to endorse.

"But even yet that is not all. Having usurped power by undertaking to form a Government which he knew would never and could never command the confidence of the House of Commons, having had his Administration defeated and condemned, he then proceeds, not merely to ignore and to defy, but to insult members of both Houses of Parliament, by summarily terminating the proceedings of Parliament itself, instead of so much as permitting his Excellency the Governor-General to come in person to prorogue Parliament prior to a dissolution.

"Afraid to Face Parliament"

"And why did Mr. Meighen advise that arbitrary course? It was because he was afraid to have his discredited Ministry again face Parliament. That much he admitted in conversation with the Progressive Leader, Mr. Forke, who told him very plainly what he thought of his courage.

"May I remind the people of Canada that when I resigned office as Prime Minister, the announcement of my resignation was made on the floor of Parliament, and was communicated to their representatives in the House of Commons before it was made public from any source?

"Speaking in this hall on Tuesday, Mr. Meighen said: "There are some who say that the legislative efforts of the last session have been wasted: that we should not have dissolved so suddenly. My answer is simple and short. First of all, dissolution took place just exactly as it would have taken place had Mr. King's request to the Governor-General been granted.' I have already stated in the House of Commons that, once his Excellency's consent to dissolution had been obtained my colleagues and I would immediateliy have set about to arrange to bring the proceedings of Parliament to a close by prorogation by his Excellency in the regular way.

Procedure He Had Planned

"When, after a meeting of the Cabinet on the afternoon of Saturday, June 26, I first saw His Excellency and spoke of dissolution of the late Parliament as being in my opinion in the public interest and inevitable, since I was sure, were my advice concerning dissolution not accepted, no one else could be found who could carry on, there was no thought on the part of my colleagues or myself of not having dissolution preceded by a formal prorogation at which His Excellency should meet in person both Houses and at which the Royal assent would be given to such legislation as could be arranged for prior thereto. The details of how the session was to be concluded were something which of necssity depended upon the decision in the first instance for or against dissolution. As a matter of fact, not only did the Cabinet have prepared a formal order for prorogation with the date left blank, which I had with me when I discussed dissolution with His Excellency and explained the procedure in reference thereto, but the question of what should be set forth in the Speech from the Throne at prorogation, was also considered. Pending the decision on dissolution itself, final determination of these matters was left over for further consideration. Until within an hour or two of the reassembling of Parliament on Monday, and His Excellency had finally refused to accept my advice, I did not present to His Excellency in a formal manner any order with respect to dissolution, and I did so then only that the matter might be of formal record with my resignation, which was also then for the first time formally tendered.

Order-in-Council Prepared

"I hold in my hand the draft Order-in-Council providing for prorogration, which was prepared in the office of the Privy Council and which bears the number P.C. 1042, which will be found to be the number of the Order-in-Council under which Mr. Meighen himself was appointed Prime Minister, Secretary of State for External Affairs and President of the Privy Council. It reads as follows:

"'P.C. 1042—Privy Council, Canada:

"'The Committee of the Privy Council having had under consideration the advisability of proroguing Parliament, advise that a proclamation do issue proroguing Parliament to the day of—and that for the purposes of such prorogation His Excellency the Governor-General be respectfully asked to attend in the Senate Chamber and to assent to such bills as have passed both Houses of Parliament.'

"I happen to have the draft order still in my possesion as it was in my pocket along with the order respecting dissolution when I interviewed His Excellency. It became of no value once my advice respecting dissolution was refused.

"Violent Breach of Constitution."

"Again may I make my appeal to British Parliamentary practice and law. There is not an authority on the British Constitution who does not say that when both Houses of Parliament are in session, their proceedings can only be brought to a close by an act of prorogation formally performed by the King in person or by Commissioners specially appointed for the purpose. That is true whether or not dissolution is to follow prorogation. Bourinot, who is the recognized constitutional authority on Canadian Parliamentary procedure, says that in Canada our procedure with respect to prorogation and dissolution of Parliament is in all essentials similar to the British, and so it has been continuously recognized and observed from the days of Confederation to the violent breach of the Constitution in that regard under the advice tendered His Excellency by Mr. Meighen.

"Do the people of Canada wish their Constitution, with its time-honored precedents, inherited from the Mother of Parliaments, treated as a scrap of paper, to be torn to shreds by a self-appointed dictator, or do they desire that the institution of Parliament, with its traditions and customs, shall be observed in this part of His Majesty's Dominions with the same veneration and regard as is accorded the British Constitution, after which it is fashioned and modelled and which stands as the greatest safeguard to a people's liberties known in the world to-day?

Knows No Parallel.

"Having ignored Parliament by assuming office without being in the least entitled to its confidence, having defied Parliament by seeking to impose upon its members the subterfuge of a phantom Ministry and continuing to govern with a Ministry declared by the Commons to be infringing the privileges of its members, having insulted Parliament by summarily closing its doors in the face of honorable members of both Houses, having made the representative of the Crown in Canada a party to all these illegal, invalid and unconstitutional acts, the self-appointed Prime Minister then proceeds to enlarge the Cabinet which Parliament had put out of existence before its untimely birth. I know of nothing in British history comparable to this since the days of Charles I. It may be all very dramatic, very daring, but there is not a vestige of constitutional right or power which it does not undermine.

"For a period of two weeks, including three days during which Parliament was in session, Mr. Meighen did not hesitate to advise His Excellency with respect to all Canada's domestic, inter-Imperial and international affairs, and to administer all the departments of the Government of Canada without a single Minister sworn to office, save himself. He alone was the Government of Canada over that period of time. If that is not anarchy or absolutism in government I should like to know to what category political philosophy would assign government carried on under such conditions. Surely it will not be termed responsible self-government under the British Parliamentary system.

Issue of Empire-Wide Effect

"Here again may I make an appeal to British Parliamentary usage, practice and law. What Prime Minister, what individual in Great Britain, however exalted, or however arrogant, would venture to constitute himself the sole adviser of the Crown, the sole Government of the country, for a single day, let alone for a period of two weeks? And yet if there be equality of status between the Governments of Britain and the self-governing Dominions, there is not one of the nations that go to make up the British Commonwealth which is not equally being subjected to all the dangers inherent in such a precedent, should the Canadian people place, as Mr. Meighen is asking them to place, their sanction upon conduct of the kind. That is why in the present contest the constitutional issue surpasses all others in its significance and importance; why it constitutes an issue such as had not been raised in a British country since the days of the Petition of Right and the Bill of Rights.

"We are the custodians of the honor of the British Crown and of the sanctity of the British Constitution not for Canada alone, but for Australia, for New Zealand, for Africa, for Newfoundland, for the Irish Free State, for India—yes, and for the British Isles themselves. The violation of its usages, its practices, its law in one part of the Empire cannot fail to have far-reaching reactions in every other part. Free representative institutions cannot be threatened in Canada without their being everywhere threatened. If Mr. Meighen's unconstitutional course is permitted to go unchallenged by the people of this country, then may the question be raised on behalf of all self-governing British communities whether the British Constitution may not become a phantom to delude to destruction, instead of being, as we believe it is, the day star of our dearest liberities.

"I have now come to the conclusion of what I have to say.

Strictly Constitutional Course

"When, after the last general elections, I advised His Excellency to let Parliament decide between Mr. Meighen and myself as to who should head the Administration to carry on the Government of Canada, I was neither trying to retain office at any price, nor to escape from office under circumstances of Government that were bound to be uncertain, arduous and difficult. I was endeavoring to follow a strictly constitutional course in a manner which would help to preserve the high and noble traditions of Parliament, and, above all, to maintain its supremacy. When I saw those traditions threatened, when I found the course becoming too difficult for any Prime Minister, and so advised his Excellency, and thereupon sought a dissolution of Parliament, I was again not seeking to retain office at any price, or to escape from office under embarrassing circumstances.

"I was endeavoring to follow the constitutional course of appealing from Parliament to the people in a manner which would give to the people the right, which is theirs at all times, of saying now they shall be represented in Parliament, and by whom they shall be governed.

"On each occasion I was upholding the Constitution of our country, a Constitution which, in part, we have worked out ourselves, but the fundamental principles of which we have inherited from Great Britain, a Constitution which I believe to be at the very foundation of the British Empire. The present Prime Minister, I contend, has proved that, for the sake of office, he is prepared to tear that Constitution into shreds.

Real Link of Empire.

"What is the real link of Empire, the most enduring of all that underlies British institutions in all quarter of the globe? What is the secret of loyalty to the British Crown and to the British flag? What, if it is not the liberty and the freedom ensured to us under British Parliamentary institutions and all that is bound up in what we know and reverence as the British constitution.

"It is a strange, mystical sort of thing, this British Constitution that we love. It is partly unwritten; it is partly written; it finds its beginnings in the lore of the past; it comes into being in the form of customs and traditions; it is founded upon the common law; it is made up of precedents, of Magna Chartas, of petitions and bills of rights; it is to be found partly in statutes and partly in the usages and practices of Parliament itself. No one has ever seen it; no one has ever adequately described it; yet its presence is felt whenever liberty or right are endangered, for it is the creation of the struggles of centuries, and it represents the highest achievement of British genius at its best.

Anchor to Britain.

"It is the principles of liberty and freedom embedded in the British Constitution, and secured to those who live within its guarantees, that have made men of many races and many climes a great brotherhood in name and in heart. In the community of British nations which comprise the Dominions beyond the seas, it is the anchor which holds all true to the little isles in the northern sea. In Canada, in Australia, in New Zealand, in South Africa, in Newfoundland, in Ireland, it is the sustaining and enduring element of loyalty alike to the Crown and to the flag. It is the counter-magnet to all tendencies to separation from Britain or to annexation to other lands. This is the Constitution by which the Liberal party in Canada stands, and for which it is prepared to fight to-day. It is in the name of all of freedom, liberty and loyalty which the British Constitution serves to inspire that I now ask my fellow-Canadians in the name alike of King and country to vindicate its might and majesty at the polls."

(By Canadian Press)

Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, speaking last night from the same platform as Mr. Mackenzie King, joined with his leader in thrusting to the forefront of the Liberal party campaign the constitutional issues arising out of the formation of the Conservative government and the dissolution of the Fifteenth parliament. Practically all of Mr. Lapointe's speech dealt with this matter.

Constitution Violated

"Speaking as a humble citizen of Canada," he declared, "I desire to state in the most emphatic manner that the constitution of my country has been violated. The rights of self-government of Canada and her equality of nationhood with the United Kingdom is at stake in this election and the verdict of the people on that great question transcends all other temporary and evanescent issues."

Mr. Lapointe denied that the Liberal party was "dragging the crown into the political arena." Mr. Meighen was doing it. "He is ingloriously sheltering behind the crown. It is Mr. Meighen we are attacking and nobody else. . . . Mr. Meighen and his friends need not worry," added Mr. Lapointe, "we are loyal to the crown."

Seven Grave Errors

The former Minister of Justice enumerated at some length "seven grave errors which have been made and which we, Canadians, are bound to repudiate at the polls."

1.—The refusal to accept the advice of the Prime Minister to dissolve Parliament on June 28.

2.—The summoning of Mr. Meighen and his being given the task of forming a government.

3.—The creation of a "shadow cabinet" of acting ministers, none of whom had taken the oath of office.

4.—The administration of departments by acting ministers contrary to law.

5.—The interview between Mr. Forke and His Excellency on June 28. For this Mr. Meighen was responsible.

6.—The granting of dissolution to a non-existing Government.

7.—The dissolution of parliament in contempt of the rights of the pepole.

Loyalty to British Flag

It was said that the campaign was to be one of flag waving. "It is behind the British flag and under its glorious protection that we will wage this fight for Canadian autonomy and self-government," said Mr. Lapointe.

Concluding hs address, the former minister said, "The cheap futile and miserable arguments used today against Mr. King were used by the same men against Sir Wilfrid Laurier. Under the leadership of Mackenzie King the work of Laurier is being finished, a work of peace, union, reasoned reform—a work of national construction."

SAVE THE CHILDREN

In Summer When Childhood Ailments Are Most Dangerous.

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets relieve these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed by a government analyst to be absolutely harmless even to the new-born babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Wiliams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CONVICTS ESCAPED.

Honor System Fails With Philippine Convicts at San Ramon.

MANILA, P.I., July 24.—A policy of confining the worst Moro criminals from Mindanao and Sulu in Bilibid prison in Manila instead of at the San Ramon Penal Colony at Zamboanga, has been inaugurated. A dozen of the most desperate convicts have been brought here.

At the San Ramon colony the prisoners are placed on their honor to a large extent, with the result that many of them have escaped and formed outlaw bands which have terrorized the Moro country.

MARINE IS 87.

PHILADELPHIA, July 24. — One of the disti guished visitors to the Sesquicentennial Exposition here is Sergeant Henry B. Hallowell, the oldest living marine. He is a guard here. Hallowell was stationed at the White House as an orderly during the presidency of Thomas Buchanan. He has been retired for years, but spends much of his time at marine barracks. He served in the civil war.

Draperies Float and Fall and Spread Their Winglike Petals

SUMMER afternoons and evenings merge into one another without change of frock when an informal dance or dinner follows a wedding or garden party. The same type of dress answers for both—sleeveless, semi-décolleté and of a cut that looks intricate but which on examination resolves itself into a one-piece frock and semi-detached handkerchief draperies. Dresses of this kind are self-trimmed and self-finished with their picot edges and bindings. Georgette in peach, lemon and the hyacinth blues, in ashes of roses, vert d'eau and willow green, makes very exquisite frocks. Lace is lovely dyed in the new colors. The printed Georgettes and crêpes de Chine are equally decorative and less elaborate.

The Examiner does not sell these patterns.

Evening Examiner "IDEAL Fashions" by Jean Betty Hamilton

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

KATHLEEN, KITTY AND KATE.

Kathleen, Kitty and Kate are names of individual charm, yet they spring from Katherine and are really only translations, diminutives, and contractions of that most popular of feminine names. No name is more universal than Katherine and her various derivatives, partly from beauty of sound and partly from association.

The graceful Kathleen originated in Ireland, after Katherine had become established in England. It is an adaptation of the old Ossianic Cathlin, meaning the "beam of the wave" and the name given to one of the stars.

Kitty and Kate are old English names, which stand on their own merits as individual names and are frequently given baptism. Katie is the Scotch adaptation. Catherine, belonging absolutely to England, has even produced a masculine counterpart: Catherin. Catherin Davita, the famous historian, was so-called since he was unfortunate enough to have Catherine de Medici for his grandmother.

In Italy, Santa Caterina is a term of derision for an old maid. Many hills have been named after Catherine, the Votaress of Sienna, and Ekatrinenburg was so-called in honor of the Russian empress.

In France the name is Catherine, Catherina, Caton and Trinette. In Spain, we have Cataline. Caterina is Italian and Katherine, Kathchen, Kathe and Trina are Teutonic. Katinka is Russian and Katrina and Koline are Swedish. The Slovak adaptation is Katrina.

The talismanic gem assigned to Katherine and her derivatives is the moss agate which promises a bold heart and freedom from danger to its wearer. It is an excellent amulet to be worn by travelers and signifies a journey when it is the subject of a dream. Tuesday is Katherine's lucky day and a her lucky number.

Waller's charming poem "Kitty Neil" is familiar to everyone:

"Sweet Kate! who could view your bright eyes of blue,
Beaming humidly through their dark lashes so mildly—
Your fair-turned arm, heaving breast, rounded form—
Nor feel his heart warm, and his pulses throb wildly?"

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

PITY IS AKIN TO LOVE.

Jerry said this almost in a breath as he stood on the public street holding my hands.

I looked up into his face, and a warm contented feeling came over me as I looked at him with admiration. "This upstanding person is my man," I said to myself. "He loves me. He wants to marry me."

I think, if I had not promised to meet Joan, I would have gone with Jerry Hathaway to luncheon. But such was my feeling at the time that I knew I would have told him that I would marry him as soon as he wished me to. Sometimes I have wondered what would have happened if I did.

As it was, I caught a sight of Mr. Robinson coming down the street, and I was so afraid that he would see me with Jerry or Joan that I rushed back into the drug store where I had been telephoning and out on a side street.

I never said good-bye to Jerry at all. In fact, all the way in the taxi, which I fortunately found standing vacant at the door, I kept asking myself if I had done the right thing.

I was sure Jerry saw Mr. Robinson. He would put two and two together and jump at the right conclusion, which was that I was trying to avoid him.

I knew that, notwithstanding the fact that Jerry said he would trust me, there was still a little doubt lingering in his mind. For some reason he was jealous of Mr. Robinson.

I told myself that I would never be jealous of anyone, as it was a sure sign of an inferiority complex.

Smilingly, I went into the Hotel lobby. I saw Joan immediately and I forgot everything but her and the wife of Barry Cornwall.

Poor Joan's face was so white and drawn that I pitied her from the bottom of my heart, but before I had time to tell her she came forward with tears rolling down her cheeks.

"Judy, is it true?"

"Yes, dear, and you should be forever grateful."

"But, Judy," she whispered, "I loved him."

"Surely not after the way he treated you," I said.

"Yes, I did. One cannot tell why one loves or why one does not love. Barry could have made a splendid man if the fates had not been against him. You know he went to France when he was seventeen years old and was gassed. When he came back he couldn't do any hard work and he didn't have much education. There was one thing he could do. He could dance."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

BEETHOVEN AND AMALIE SEBALD.

Ludwig Van Beethoven, who may be considered one of the greatest composers of all time, was an ungainly man and almost ugly. His temper was hasty, his temperament uncongenial and added to his other troubles he became deaf at the height of his fame and career. There is nothing quite so tragic as a deaf composer, a man unable to hear the masterworks he produces, and this worked so upon him that at middle age he was practically a hermit in his Vienna home, constantly at war with his servants, scolding, complaining, impatient and making himself intensely miserable.

Under the circumstances reciprocative love was hardly possible for Beethoven. He surely loved; the full secrets of his heart are not revealed. But whether he was actually loved in return is problematical, in spite of romantic stories to the contrary.

Love letters from Beethoven are extremely scarce, though he was a prolific letter writer. As a matter of fact amiable letters of any sort from him were scarce. There is, however, a small collection of letters written to Amalie Sebald, a Viennese beauty, which indicates that she was one who possessed the sealed heart of the great genius. Amalie was twenty-five and Beethoven forty-two when he became enamored of her. She later married a Councillor.

The following is one of the Amalie letters:

"September, 1812.

"Dear good Amalie. Since I left you yesterday I have become worse, and since yesterday evening up to now I have not been able to leave my bed. I wanted to let you have the news today and then I thought that I should make myself appear too important, and so did nothing. What are you thinking about in saying that you can be nothing to me? We will talk over that, dear Amalie, when we are together. I have always wished that my presence might give you rest and peace, and that you would show yourself trustful towards me. I hope to be better tomorrow and that there will still be a few hours for us to spend and enjoy together amid the beauties of nature . . . Goodnight, dear Amalie; many thanks for the proof of your kind intentions for your friend.

Beethoven."

The following passage from a letter Beethoven wrote to his pupil, Ferdinand Ries, is explanatory of this episode:

"All kind messages to your wife; unfortunately, I have none; I found one who will probably never be mine; nevertheless I am not on that account a woman hater."

NEW USE FOR TAFFETA.

The taffeta tailleur is one of this season's most attractive offerings. It is often made very feminine and attractive by narrow pleatings used to outline the coat and the hemline.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

SATURDAY.

The agate, today's talismanic stone, brings great good fortune to those who travel on this date, protecting them from danger and assuring them of reaching a safe destination and attaining success on their errand. The ancients believed that it was especially potent in protecting its wearers from lightning.

The natal stone for today, the sapphire, was believed to be especially potent in healing those who suffered from poor eyesight, and in protecting them from all diseases.

Today's color is pale blue, symbol of peace and serenity.

The red geranium is today's flower; symbolic of thoughtfulness, the geranium is said to bring good judgment to those who wear it.

(Copyright, 1926, by McClure Syndicate, Inc.)

SUNDAY.

Today's talismanic gem, the amethyst, is likely to make its wearers headstrong and move them to make rash promises. This tendency is somewhat discounted by its power to endow them with keen intelligence and unusual ability in business.

The beryl is today's natal stone, and is said to bring success in all legal encounters, with the exception of divorce cases, to those whose birthstone it is.

Yellow is the color decreed for wear on this day by those who desire to benefit from legacy or other generosity.

Today's significant flower is the narcissus, which brings good cheer to the home which it adorns.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

Astologers read this as rather an unimportant day in planetary direction. The evening may be unfavorable to many plans.

Jupiter is in a fairly favorable sway, making for success in construction business enterprises as well as in emergency projects.

The seers prophesy unexpected events which will bring much trouble in Europe.

Again immense fortunes are to be made by lucky persons who reap where others have sown.

All the signs appear to presage power for a few leaders whom the people trust in a time of political anxiety.

The trend toward democracy is to be marked by an opposite influence making for the rise of new dictators in Europe and Asia.

Bankers, brokers and physicians are to have extraordinary work and responsibility in the next few months.

While all the arts and those who present them are subject to the best influences at this time, profit is to come through new needs for distraction from serious thoughts, it is prognosticated.

Many young geniuses are to receive recognition and aid, this year, when it will be recognized that a new Super race is developing.

Many cases of blood-poisoning may develop under this season's planetary government and it is well to be careful in cases of cuts or other injuries.

Women are to have a new method of beautifying themselves, which will bring about remarkable results, the seers prophesy.

Women should be exceedingly careful in writing letters, for there is a sinister sign for love missives.

Persons whose birthdate it is should resist all temptation to speculate in the coming year. Risks in romance may be unfavorable.

Children born on this day probably will be extraordinarily industrious and very fortunate. They may have great mechanical ability or may like adventure.

ESCAPES LIONESS.

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa, July 24. — From Rhodesia comes a story of a lioness' attack on a missionary and a baby's fortunate escape from death. Rev. Nigel Arnot, was asleep in his tent when a lioness put her foot inside and mauled him. The animal then seized the bed on which the missionary's baby son was sleeping, and dragged out the boy and the bed. The bed collided with an ant hill and the lioness bolted, leaving the baby unhurt.

BRIGHT OUTLOOK FOR FARM CROPS

Fairly Successful Year Seems Assured Despite Backwardness of Season.

BURNBRAE, July 22.—In spite of the fact that every farm crop in this district is from two to three weeks later than other years, crops generally are above the average and give promise of a fairly successful year for most local farmers. It was fear that the hay crop would be an abnormally light one, as the cold spring and early summer with absence of any particular rainfall, did not promote rapid growth. Then, too, a good deal of the alfalfa was winter-killed and stands were quite thin in some places. However, this latter crop has yielded well and the week of warm, wet weather early in July caused a very rapid growth among the later clovers and timothy. With the exception of a few days earlier in the month the weather has been very backward for handling hay, and the recent heavy thunder storms found many farmers with large quantities of hay in the fields almost ready to be hauled in. There is an abundance of swet clover and several farmers are stacking it rather than fill up space in their barns with such bulky feed. The backward weather is keeping the hay, which is not cut, in very good condition so that it will not be overripe if handled before the first of August.

The heavy rains have improved the pasture to a great extent. Any farmers who had alfalfa fields cleared are in luck as the second-growth stuff is making a phenomenal growth and this makes splendid pasture. The older meadows are also showing green where before was brown, dried up from hot dry days and cold nights.

Dairy cows have been milking well in spite of the failing pastures and stand to gain considerably soon. Many farmers were forced to resort to grain, silage or other supplementary feeds for a few days before the rains came. The rain also solved the problem of an early-failing water supply which is a grave menace to a dairying community.

Grain crops are looking about 100 per cent. better than they did on the first of July. After a slow start, due to cold and lack of moisture, the fine, warm, showery weather of the last month has made a wonderful change in the prospects for a grain crop. Barley is almost all headed with some beginning to turn, and promises a crop considerably above the average. Oats are heading and early fields seem to be filling well. Straw is longer than usual in the early fields and some cases of lodging are noticed already. Indeed the oat crop is generally so heavy that a severe wind and rain storm early in August would mean a very difficult harvest. Fall wheat and rye are ripening fast and present indications point to a good yield of fall grains.

Corn, which was very slow in starting, has been going ahead by leaps and bounds during the last two weeks and most farmers are unable to keep up necessary cultivation. Turnips and mangels are also coming on fast and should prove a paying crop this year. While there is no sign of turnip fly, there has been a veritable epidemic of grubs among the garden stuff and some gardens have been practically ruined by the ravages of these pests.

Early potatoes have made rapid growth and some local farmers report potatoes large enough for use on July 15th. A number of cases of blight are reported, affecting the early potato crop. The later varieties are doing equally well. The chief complaint of local farmers is the enormous quantity of weeds that have appeared following the cold spring. In some cases the weed crop will seriously affect yields.

Raspberries, cherries and other small fruits are in season and promise good crops as there has been ample rainfall at the most important time.

Price for farm produce have for the most part been good this year. Cheese has been well over the seventeen cent mark until the recent slump and a speedy recovery is looked for. Hog prices have varied a good deal but have been above the usual average. Taking everything into consideration farmers here look forward to a more successful year than has often been the case.

SOME SYMPTOMS OF THIN BLOOD

Everybody Should Be Able To Recognize Them Because Early Treatment Is Important.

Anaemia, or lack of blood, is a stealthy disease and is often quite advanced before it is recognized. It is much easier to correct in its early stages, but if unchecked causes weakness, loss of weight, lack of vigor and ambition.

Some symptoms of anaemia are loss of appetite, indigestion, headaches, sleeplessness, shortness of breath after light exertion, and often extreme nervousness. If you have any or all of these symptoms begin treatment now with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, the tonic which will make the blood rich and plentiful. Every part of the body will respond to this treatment, as is shown by the case of Mrs. Isaac Bell, Sr., Port Anson, Ont., who says:—"A few years ago I was a very sickly woman. I was all run down and my nerves badly shattered. I had taken doctor's medicine, but as I got no help from it, I tried other medicines, but with no better results. One day while reading a newspaper, I came across an advertisement of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills describing a case very much like my own. I decided to try them, and by the time I had taken two boxes I could feel the benefit I was getting from them, so I cheerfuly continued the treatment and was soon a well woman in better health than I had enjoyed for some years. In view of what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me I cheerfully recommended their use to all weak, run-down people."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are sold by all druggists, or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box by writing The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. A free booklet, "Building Up the Blood," will be sent to any address on request.

CROP PROSPECTS LOOK EXCELLENT

Rainfall Has Been Fairly General on Prairies Recently.

CALGARY, July 24. — The crop situation over the prairies is excellent and much optimism prevails, especially since the recent rains. The tendency is to revise previous crop estimates upward.

Rainfall has been fairly general and generous, and hail damage has been confined to small areas. In some cases the straw is short but the wheat is heading out nicely. The country really looks excellent and great prosperity predictions are being made should the crop come through. However there is no tendency to spend money in advance.

One farmer with 650 acres of wheat along the Alberta-Saskatchewan boundary, said he had a wonderful crop but that while the present indications were for a heavy yield, he would not count his chickens before they were hatched. But he was certain he was going to have a wonderful fall, starting from the time the first crop returns come in. I am told that Saskatchewan people have purchased eleven thousand new cars this year.

Amalgamation of the Grain Growers and the Farmers' Union in Saskatchewan is expected by the farmers to spread and to work material benefits. There is a radical wing in Union that may not fall into line, and may proceed with a separate movement. It is expected that the amalgamation will mean membership losses to both old organizations but great benefits are expected to accrue.

The rest of the West is laughing slyly at Saskatoon, which is being accused of hero worship in its dining and feteing of Aaron Sapiro, silver-tongued orator and counsellor for most of the farmers' co-operatives on the continent.

DELIVERS JUDGMENT.

Case Was 599 Years Old—Was First Heard in 1327.

AIX-EN-PROVENCE, France, July 24.—The Appeal Court here has just delivered judgment in a case which was first heard 599 years ago, in the year 1327.

This suit dealt with some 16,000 acres of grazing land, close to the Italian frontier, to which four parishes laid claim. The land, once the property of the royal house of Anjou, was the subject of a first decision in 1327. The final judgment just handed down divides it among the claimants under a scheme drawn up by experts.

POINCARE REACHES COMPLETION OF NON-PARTISAN GOVERNMENT INCLUDING 6 FORMER PREMIERS

French Franc Rallies Slightly as Task Is Finished.

NATIONAL UNION.

New Cabinet Regarded as the Strongest Since Close of the War.

PARIS, July 24 (Canadian Press). A new French Cabinet, regarded as the strongest since the war, is ready to take up the difficult tasks facing the country, notably those connected with placing the country on a sound basis, financially.

When Raymond Poincare, three times Premier and President of the Republic during the world war, succeeded yesterday in putting the finishing touches on his fourth Ministry—a National Union one—the franc immediately improved more than a point and a half to the dollar. The new Government seems to meet the growing demand for a non-partisan Cabinet that can make a real effort to solve the financial problems regardless of party or doctrine. It is hailed with the greatest satisfaction by the Senate and welcomed by the Chamber — by all groups except the Socialists, Communists and Extreme Radicals.

One of Premier Poincare's chief desires, voiced by him as he left Elysee Palace after presenting his Ministers to President Doumergue, is to have a talk with Andrew W. Mellon, secretary of the United States Treasury, who arrived in France yesterday.

Debt Settlement Difficulties.

The Premier remarked that there were certain difficulties connected with ratification of the debt settlement with the United States, and he would be glad of an opportunity for a conference with Secretary Mellon. M. Poincare is known to be opposed to ratification of the debt accord as it now stands, but would be satisfied with the terms if France were guaranteed against derangement of exchange through the transfer of the money to the United States.

If judged by his expression of opinion before he accepted the task of forming a Cabinet, the Premier is in favor of an arrangement whereby in case transfers of money become impossible, an alternative arrangement be made whereby France could make payments in kind, in potash, for instance. He is understood to favor only in part the financial projects suggested by the committee of experts appointed by the Government to consider the French financial situation.

Six Former Premiers.

The nucleus of the Cabinet is furnished by six former Premiers, one former President of the Republic and the son of another former President. Of the former heads of government, Premier Poincare will take the Finance Ministry with the Premiership; Aristide Briand will be Minister of Foreign Affairs; Louis Barthou will be Minister of Justice and Vice-President of the Cabinet; Paul Painleve, Minister of War; Georges Leygues, Marine; and Edouard Herriot, Public Instruction.

Andre Fallieres, son of former President Fallieres, completes the list of names in the new combination, taking the post of Labor.

Debut on Tuesday.

Upon leaving Elysee Palace, Premier Poincare announced that his Ministry would make its first appearance before the Chamber of Deputies on Tuesday; at that time he would introduce his financial measures.

He described his Government as having been selected without regard to personal preferences, adding:

"We wanted to form a Cabinet of the largest national union in which all parties would be represented, without taking account, too closely, of the representation of groups. We have tried to fulfill our task in the most high-minded spirit possible."

RECORDS DISPROVE HARDING'S STORY

Claimed To Have Escaped From Kingston Penitentiary—Futile Jail Break.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 24 (Canadian Press)—Bud Harding in explaining in Philadelphia the part he played in an attempted jail break recently at the Eastern Penitentiary, said he had escaped from Kingston Penitentiary. This claim, however, is not quite in accordance with the prison records. In 1920, while serving a sentence in Portsmouth he cut through two of the bars in the door of his cell, an iron open work like fixture, but this was discovered by guards before he had even got out of the cell into the corridor of the building.

The British and Foreign Bible Society circulated 10,472,733 Bibles, New Testaments and smaller portions of the Scriptures during the last year.

PETERBORO' MAN TO HELP SEARCH

Fred Kiff, Government Diver, Will Take Suit and Supply of Rope.

SURVIVOR AIDS.

Fred Kiff, 585 Division Street, a Government diver, has received instructions to prepare to proceed to the scene of the tragedy at Balsam Lake. Besides his diving suit, Mr. Kiff will, according to orders, take with him an extra supply of rope to aid in the search operations. He has not received definite orders to go to Balsam Lake yet, but is holding himself in readiness.

F. G. McNeely, boys' secretary of the local Y.M.C.A., has been appointed by the city authorities to go to Balsam Lake and assist in the operations, Acting Mayor Nagle Phelan told The Examiner to-day.

Wigington Returns

In response to a call from Toronto life-savers for assistance, William Wigington, one of the survivors, left yesterday afternoon for Balsam Lake to identify the point where the canoe upset and assist in the search for bodies of those drowned.

To Hold Memorial Service

One central memorial service for the ten young Toronto men of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew who lost their lives in the Balsam Lake drowning tragedy will be held at St. James Cathedral after the bodies are found, Canon Plumptre said yesterday.

"Naturally, references to the tragedy cannot fail to creep into the hymns and the service on Sunday," Canon Plumptre added, "but the memorial service will not be held till later. It seems fitting that it should be at St. James', since five of the boys were members of this church."

For the past two days Canon Plumptre has been visiting the parents who are mourning, comforting the mothers and fathers who have lost their sons.

"Every possible arrangement has been made," Canon Plumptre said yesterday, "for the proper care of the bodies when they are recovered. Undertakers in the nearby towns have been notified and the co-operation of the whole countryside, the city and the province will be appreciated by the relatives and friends of the dead men.

"The relatives of the boys need not worry about their effects," Canon Plumptre explained. "Everything has been carefully kept and packed, and will reach Toronto from Peterborough. The clothes and knapsacks will be taken to the parish house at St. James' Church and the parents or relatives will be notified to come and claim whatever is unidentified."

Expert's Opinion

"I think that they will find three or four of the bodies of the boys just where the accident happened and within a hundred yards probably other bodies. They would not go far before the others got exhausted and went down."

Thus spoke yesterday Mait Ackroyd, who for forty years had experience in recovering bodies in Toronto Bay and all over the country and even distant parts of the United States. Mr. Ackroyd has recovered 200 bodies; and in most instances it did not take him long to do it.

"They talk about recovering bodies in 45 feet of water, said Mr. Ackroyd. "That is easy. Note only where the body goes down; it will generally stay there until it rises. It is foolish to talk about the current carrying it away." He told about the recovery of a body at Algonquin Park which could not be found for four or five days. "They asked me to go up and as the accident happened in the rapids they said, 'You will find that body miles away.' I had not dragged half an hour before I recobevred it within 200 feet.

"Lots of people think that the current runs as fast at the bottom as it does at the top. It is only on the surface that the current runs most swiftly. The hardest job is when the body is standing up. Two years ago I recovered a body of a canoeist. The water was rough and they said that the current would carry it away. I found it exactly where the accident occurred and the water was so rough it was coming in over the side of the boat."

REBUILDING FRANCE NEARS COMPLETION

Damaged Factories Are Almost All Operating Again.

WASHINGTON, D.C., July 24.—(Canadian Press).—France's war reconstruction program which has required the expenditure of 79,000,000,000 francs, was far advanced with little proposed restoration work remaining to be done this year, the Commerce Department has been advised by Trade Commissioner Green at Paris.

Some of the accomplishments of the French toward restoring damaged property were outlined in the report. A total of 53,165 kilometres of highways have been repaired out of a total of 58,697 damaged, while 2,361 kilometres of railway lines have been restored to operation out of a total of 2,408 destroyed.

Of 17,616 public buildings destroyed or damaged, 11,343 have been rebuilt; 2,856 public buildings have been provisionally repaired and of 8,344 projects of various sorts connected with highways, railways and water courses, 6,749 have been restored.

Out of a total of 1,923,479 hectares of land requiring restoration, 1,815,449 had again been placed under cultivation; of 866,844 fixed properties destroyed or damaged, 521,913 have been built or repaired, of which 364,406 were residences or business quarters; 42,400 temporary homes have been erected with materials left over from the war, and 108,901 temporary wooden homes which were built during or since the war, were still serving as residences.

Operations have been resumed in 8,228, out of 9,332 destroyed or damaged factories, each employing at least 10 laborers. Pumping and other work in the mines has been completed in the departments of Nord, Meurthe-et-Moselle and Meuse, but considerable work remains to be done in the department of Pas-de-Calais.

Exports of newsprint from Canada for the 12 months ended April 30, 1926, were valued at $102,988,286, an increase of $11,000,000 over the previous year.

The manifesto said this proposal was the only one now before the Government.

PROGRESSIVE PARTY MEETING OUTLINES PLANS

Decision Taken To Consolidate Low Tariff Forces in Manitoba.

WANT H. B. RAILWAY.

Constituencies Recommended To Avoid Three Cornered Contests Where Possible.

WINNIPEG, July 24 (Canadian Press).—Continuation of the Custom probe by an imperial judicial tribunal having power to examine the evidence, was written into the election platform of the Manitoba Progressive party by resolution passed at a meeting of the executive committee of the Manitoba Federal Progressive Association held at U.F.M. headquarters, yesterday, and attended by Robert Forke, late house leader of the group at Ottawa, by Progressive members for Manitoba constituencies in the last parliament with exception of W. J. Levie and T. W. Bird, by Progressive candidates defeated at the last election, and by executive officers of the U.F.M. The meeting decided that consolidation of low tariff forces in Manitoba constituencies was esesntial to the best interests of the country. By resolution, it was recommended that constituency committess co-operate with all others of like mind to avoid three-cornered contests, and that the candidates selected as result of such co-operation be asked to pledge themselves to support the following:

Eight Resolutions

1.—No increase in the tariff, and a further reduction in some of the existing tariff schedules;

2.—Reciprocity with the United States in natural products;

3.—Completion of the Hudson Bay Railway;

4.—Maintenance of the existing statutory limitations on grain and flour rates as embodied in the Crow's Nest Pass agrement;

5.—Re-capitalization of the Canadian National Railways;

6.—Re-valuation upon a fair basis of Soldier Settlement lands;

7.—A sound system of long term rural credits;

8.—A complete investigation by a judicial commission into all irregularities in the customs department.

In advocating continuation of the customs probe, the Progressive leaders recommend that a most searching examination be made into the business methods of Canadian distilleries and the conditions surrounding the sale of liquor for consumption and its export to other countries. The view was taken, however, that the situation revealed by the customs probe, though aggravated because of certain conditions during recent years, was by no means of recent origin.

While no effort was made to minimize Government responsibility in the matter, the stand was emphasized that maladministration in one department of the Government could not and would not overshadow the major policies on tariff, freight rates, Hudson Bay Railway, wider markets, rural credits and other matters for which the Progressives had been fighting during the last four years.

ILL-FATED CANOE SAVED FROM SOUVENIR SEEKERS

All day yesterday Captain Thomas Sanders of the government tug Harwood, sent from Peterborough by A. L. Killaly of the Trent Canal, searched Balsam Lake for the bodies of its eleven dead. In addition a number of individuals patrolled the lake in small boats in an effort to probe the secret of its keping. In addition men went around the edge of Grand Island, Hog Island, and another small island in the vicinity to make sure than no body had been washed up. But their efforts, like the other searchers, were also without success. Many people came to view the scene of the tragedy. One man broke of a piece of the ill-fated war canoe as a souvenir and fearing that other attempts would be made to break it up the craft was taken out of the water and carried into the frame kitchen of the camp for safe-keeping. TOP LEFT shows men moving the canoe. CENTRE—The government tug Harwood, which is engaged in dragging for bodies. RIGHT—A view of the camp site, showing the large crowd which gathered yesterday. HEAVY HITTING WAS FEATURE OF KINGSTON-BELLEVILLE GAME

Ponies Came Out Winners With a 10-5 Score.

BRITTON STARS.

Belleville Failed in Pinches, Although They Had More Hits.

KINGSTON, July 24 (Special to The Examiner). — Kingston advanced another step towards the championship of the Central Ontario League yesterday by defeating Belleville at the Fair Grounds before a rather small crowd, by the score of 10 to 5. Taking advantage of everything that meant runs and getting good sound hits at the right time, Kingston came through with the victory. Belleville fell down in the pinches a couple of times and although they had one less error than Kingston and one more hit, they could not claim the verdict. It was a free hitting affair with plenty of good clouts being narrowed down to singles by fast work on the part of the fielders. Neither team lost any time on sacks, however, but in this respect Kingston were luckier than their opponents. Belleville had eleven men left on bases waiting for some one to come through with a hit at different times while Kingston had only five stranded. The game was featured by the home run made by Britton in the fourth inning. It was a long drive between left and centre and was easily the longest hit seen here this season in Senior circles. Britton's homer scored two runs ahead of him in that one inning and it practically put the game on ice.

Oulette started in the box for the visitors, but was evidently tired out from the long grind of Wednesday against the Peterborough team. He had to retire in the fifth frame and his place was taken by Goyer, who finished through to the end. Young went eight innings for Kingston and Cairns finished up. "Bubs" Britton played the star game of the day and in addition to having five put outs, he had nine assists and in three trips to the plate he scored three runs and secured two safe hits—a single and the homer. The play was great and he was easily the outstanding player of the game.

Score by innings:

Belleville ....022000100— 5
Kingston.... ....03430000x—10

SECRETS OF STARS INSIDE BASEBALL

as told to Billy Evans

BY TY COBB.
World's Greatest Ball Player.

Upon reaching first base, it is well for the base runner to make a false break on every ball pitched, even though there is no intention to steal.

The false break serves a double purpose. It tends to upset the pitcher, also keeps him from concentrating his fire on the batsman. This has a tendency to make for wildness.

In like manner it plays on the emotions of the catcher. The false break makes him fear the runner will go down on every ball pitched and causes him to call for pitchouts in an effort to thwart the runner if he goes down. This also tends to get the pitcher in the hole.

When the runner finally decides on the ball on which he is about to steal, he should forget about everything else and dash for second with all speed after getting the best break possible.

The runner should give thought to nothing until he nears second base, then he should pay close attention to the actions of the player covering the bag, be it the shortstop or second baseman.

Watch the eyes of the infielder about to handle the ball. There is no better way in which to learn the direction of the throw. This is very necessary to complete the steal successfully.

A knowledge of the direction of the throw enables the runner to adjust his slide accordingly, in order to make it difficult for the fielder to put the ball on him.

Incidentally, the batsman can be of great help to the base runner in his effort to reach the next sack.

The batsman, knowing the ball on which the runner intends to steal, should shift his stance prior to the pitch to the rear end of the batter's box. This forces the catcher that much farther back, thereby lengthening the throw.

It is also a good move for him to bunt stiff-armed with no thought of meeting the ball. This is perfectly legal and makes the catcher throw over his extended bat and arms, often obscuring his vision enough to decide the outcome of the play.

Diamond Disputes Decided

by BILLY EVANS

How is it possible to make a double play when two runners are standing on the same base?

It is impossible to make a double play in such a situation unless the runners play dumb baseball.

All that is necessary to eliminate any chance for a double play is for the original occupant of the base to stay there. If he does, only one man can be retired.

When two runners are on the same base, touching of the runner who advanced to that base, retires him.

The only way to get two men, is for the runner, who is entitled to the bag, to become confused and step off the base. This would permit him to be touched out for a double play if the man handling the ball was on his toes.

BILLY EVANS SAYS.

The leading batters in both major leagues are firmly of the opinion that there will be no .400 hitter in either organization this year.

As a matter of fact, few of them believe any regular will reach the .375 figure and are inclined to believe that any player who can finish in the neighborhood of .350 will have a mighty fine chance to carry off the swat honors.

Incidentally, the sluggers doubt if any of the home run hitters will get as many as 40. As a matter of fact it is thought that 35 will be the top figure in either league.

Since the opening of the season I have talked with perhaps a dozen of the leading batters, among them the two champions, Hornsby and Heilmann, and all are unanimous in the belief that this is going to be the toughest year in the past six to get base hits.

Pitching Improves.

While this may sound as if the pitchers were dominating the two big leagues such is far from the case. They have simply improved their game perhaps 25 per cent due to a not so lively ball.

There is no need to fear that batting has been pretty thoroughly stopped. It hasn't but it certainly has been curtailed.

One needn't expect a lot of 1-0, 2-1 or 3-2 scores featuring the old-time pitchers' battles so popular 20 years or more back. The pitcher has gained no such superiority over the batsman. However, he is unquestionably in a better position to match wits.

For that reason I feel that fandom is sure to see a more interesting brand of baseball this summer. In the worst spring in years the pitching has been uniformly good and the all-round play far above the average when one considers the handicaps the players have labored under.

Infielders Happy.

Fielding and base running, as well as inside baseball, which have been in the background for several years, are due for a revival.

The lively ball which has been in use for perhaps five years turned the job of infielding into a mighty precarious one. Because of the terrific force with which the ball shot through the infield, a bad bound, liable to happen on the best of fields, placed the infielders in great danger.

It was next to impossible for the infielders to cover any great amount of ground, simply because of lack of time in making a play on the ball.

For a shortstop to go over back of second base, come up with the ball in his gloved hand and get his man at first, was a decided exception.

In the first two weeks of play this season I saw the trick turned at least a half dozen times, probably closer to a dozen. And such a play carries a real thrill.

Variety to Play.

However, my main reason for believing baseball is going to be far more interesting than usual this year, is the fact that there will be more variety to the play.

The slam-bang style is no longer the one and only system. Getting runs in clusters, as was the custom, has been replaced by the get one or two and be satisfied.

Speed once more is a valuable asset and a club with good pitching is sure to be more troublesome than ever.

I doubt if any one welcomes the change in the ball more than the veteran infielders. A number of them will take a new lease on life as a result. Their careers mill be prolonged several years.

Yes Sir! Baseball is going to be far more interesting this summer because of its variety.

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

HISTORIC OLD RACE COURSE IN FOX FILM.

"Dixie Merchant" Delightful Story of Sunny South — MacDonald in Title Role.

The historic old race course at Pleasanton, Calif., was selected as the ideal spot to shoot the thrilling racing scenes in Fox Films, "The Dixie Merchant"—a delightful story of a philosophical old character of the South in which J. Farrell MacDonald is featured. The picture will be shown at the Regent Theatre for two days, starting Friday next.

The history of harness racing in America is contemporaneous with the history of the country itself. Until the Revolution most of the racing was confined to England, but after this the gentlemen of the colonies began to import stock and plot out courses for this sport. At first running horses were the only ones considered, but with the importation of the great "Imported Messenger," trotters became more and more popular, particularly with the wealthier classes.

Since then, with the invention of the ball bearing rubber-tired sulky in 1892, records have continued to be broken each year.

"Cherryblossom," the little mare who is cast as "Marseillaise" in "The Dixie Merchant," holds many records for speed at the various State Fairs in California.

Madge Bellamy and Jack Mulhall head the all-star cast in the picture which was made under the direction of Frank Borzage.

HOW TO SWIM

by Lillian Cannon

SHOWING CO-ORDINATION OF LEGS AND ARMS.

When one is learning the dogpaddle there should be no attempt at speed or long-distance swimming. These will come with other strokes.

The dogpaddle is the first to be learned and is only learned to give one confidence in the water and ability to propel the body through the water.

It is also useful in perfecting the scissors kick of the legs, which is as important a matter as any stroke.

Unless the arms and legs are co-ordinated perfectly, there will never be any real swimming. The muscular smoothness of the body when swimming is very important, and effort should be directed toward swimming with as little exertion as possible, except when there is necessity for unusual exertion.

Arms should move in perfect co-ordination with legs—right arm and left leg.

BABY CANNOT SLEEP TOO MUCH

Babies—like the chickens and birds, and just as primitive man used to do—should go to bed when night falls. Electric lights don't bother these youngsters.

By DR. S. J. CRUMBINE.

Undoubtedly our primitive ancestor worked and played during daylight, and, as soon as it was dark, slept. While the turning of night into day by the use of artificial light has been a distinct advantage to the adult and the advancement of civilization, it has completely ignored the rights of the child, still in the primitive stage of development.

Unlike the child put to sleep at twilight in the cave dwellings, the sleep of the modern child is often disturbed during the early hours of the night by family activities. Too often, the child is actually allowed to participate in these activities, until he falls asleep from exhaustion. Sometimes he is even taken to the movies or on long automobile excursions and allowed to sleep for hours in cramped, uncomfortable positions.

Needs More Sleep.

The runabout requires more hours of sleep than an older child because in addition to his great activity he is passing through the period of most rapid development of both body and mind. His immature body must not be overtaxed if he is to keep well and grow normally. Physical and mental activities are necessary for his development, but long hours of sleep at night, a mid-day nap, or a rest period of at least one hour's duration, up to school age, is a safety device which makes this activity possible without undue fatigue.

If the habit of an afternoon nap or rest period is established early and regular hours are maintained, there is rarely any difficulty in getting the toddler to go to sleep in spite of daylight and day noises. At least, rest is essential. Sleep during the rest period is desirable, but not always possible if a child's activities have been too strenuous or fatiguing.

Such a child in his effort to go to sleep often gets wider awake and should be told not to try to go to sleep but merely to lie still and rest. This assurance helps the child to relax and rest, and sleep often follows.

Can't Get Too Much.

Too much stress can not be laid upon the importance of training all children from infancy in good habits of rest and sleep. The amount of sleep required by children varies as it does in the adult, but their requirements can be stated fairly definitely. We need never worry about a child getting too much sleep.

If your toddler of 2 or 3 years allowed to stay awake for the evening meal and a romp with father when he comes home at night? Stimulated by his participation in the activities of the family, is it difficult for him to go to sleep when he is put to bed? Is he taken up and returned to the family circle when he registers his disapproval in no uncertain tones, with the excuse that he isn't one bit sleepy and is simply tiring himself by crying?

All of this could be, and should be, avoided by putting the child of from 2 to 3 years to bed before the family's evening meal. A child should not be allowed to participate in the evening activities of the family.

Does your child fail to gain in weight? Is he nervous and irritable? Is his appetite poor? If he does not get enough rest and sleep, a condition of chronic fatigue may result. Give him a real rest and see if the appetite does not return. Many children have no appetite because they are in a state of chronic fatigue in which not only may a desire for food be decreased but also the ability to assimilate. Of course, always make sure by having a physical examination made that the child has no physical defects and is receiving a proper diet.

Must Fix Habit.

The child's interest in sleep may be aroused by stimulating his eagerness to grow and be strong. It will be difficult for him to have this interest without encouragement and assistance from parent and teacher.

Do not expect him to seek plenty of sleep unless the habit has been fixed from early childhood. Remember there are many things to stimulate a child's mind and that there is a world full of interesting things yet to be explored. He may fight sleep and refuse to admit that he is tired. In fact, the underweight, nervous child who is most in need of sleep is often the greatest offender in this respect.

In addition to assuring yourself that your child has plenty of time for sleep you should make sure that his sleep is undisturbed. He should have a quiet spot, open windows, warm covering, and he should not go to bed overfatigued or with an overloaded stomach.

REGULAR HOURS HELP THE BABY

A little baby's day is spent mostly in sleeping. Indeed, he usually prefers to spend all but four to six hours of the 24 in slumber. His longest period of being awake is when he has his bath. He should go to sleep as soon as he has finished nursing. If he does not wake up for his next feeding time, he should be awakened.

Usually, it is most convenient to give the baby his bath before the mid-morning feeding. The bath should never be given immediately after feeding.

Five Meals a Day.

Most infants of average weight thrive on five nursings a day after the first few weeks. This means a four-hour interval during the day and no nursing at night. This gives the infant's stomach a chance to rest during the night and ample time to digest each feeding.

During the first month, the baby should be dressed according to the weather and taken out of doors each day. If it is cold or stormy, he may be placed on a porch protected from the wind, but exposed to the sun, or in a room with all the windows open. These airings should last from 15 to 20 minutes at first, the time being gradually lengthened to several hours. Airings in winter are best taken at mid-day. In hot weather, early morning or late afternoon will be best.

Crying and kicking are the baby's first exercises. No special exercises are needed for the normal development of the infant. He should not, however, be pinned down or deprived of the free use of his arms and legs. His position in his crib should be changed after each nursing.

Let Him Creep.

Voluntary exercises, such as rolling, kicking and creeping should be made possible by putting the infant into a baby yard or pen. This should be raised from the floor in cool weather to avoid drafts.

Walking should not be urged. The normal child on a correct diet attempts to walk as soon as his strength is sufficient.

The baby's day increases in length as he grows older. At six months he still needs 13 hours of uninterrupted sleep at night, with a morning and afternoon nap of at least two hours. At one year, he needs 12 hours of sleep at night with a two-hour nap during the day. The runabout should have 12 hours of sleep and a nap of one or two hours in the late morning or early afternoon.

Nothing is of more importance to the child than this sleep which he needs to regain the energy expended in the process of growth in constant mental and physical action. Nothing in the household should be considered of sufficient importance to interfere with the sleep of the infant and the little child.

THE RETORT IRRESISTIBLE.

We think the prize for courteous repartee was won by Thackeray, as related by Brander Matthews in an article in the 'Century.' "When he was standing for Parliament, he happened to meet his opponent one day, who, after chatting amicably, left the great novelist with the remark, 'May the best man win!' To which Thackeray returned instantly, 'Oh, I hope not.'" —Christian Register.

OUTDONE.

The author read the jacket blurb of his new book and turned to the publisher. "Please stop the presses and throw everything away," he pleaded. "I want to write a novel that is worthy of this tribute."

MASCULINE REVOLT.

"Matters have reached the breaking point," snorted Old Man Kyle, "when our barbers ask us if we want a girlish bob."

(By JEANNETTE.)

"A tight little bundle of wailing and flannel, Perplex'd with the newly found fardel of life."
—The Old Cradle.

Around the life of the infant cluster the hopes, not only of the parents, but of the generation to which the child is born. There are countless potentialities in the cradle, be it the cradle of the lowly cottage or the enamelled bassinet of the wealthy mansion. Who can say, when looking at the tiny red features of the newborn child, whether it is destined for a glorious or a common career? Shakespeare and Plato, Aristotle and Caesar, Napoleon and Edison, must all at some time have been little puling infants, with noses that required wiping and tiny fingers that waved aimlessly in the air. Those years of Messianic waiting must have been wonderful ones, in a way, when every newborn male child in a Jewish household might be the longed-for Messiah. If the Jews had fixed their eyes on a lowlier star, if they had sought the Redeemer, not on the heights, but in the lowly manger, what a difference there might have been in the story of Christianity. The world has grown used to the thought of Christ triumphant through death. It has never contemplated the vision of a Saviour who might have been, had the attitude of His own people been otherwise, triumphant through a glorious and wonderful earthly sojourn.

The thought of the baby touches all hearts, and so those organizations that have the welfare of the baby as their prime object have always an "Open Sesame" to the minds, if not the purses, of the people among whom they thrive. If the purses of those people who enthuse so much over children would react to their sympathies in this regard, even if the dark-skinned children of the Hindu and the black man lacked things that sometimes have a resemblance to the famous "red flannel waistcoats and cotton pocket handkerchiefs" that the Rev. Mr. Stiggins, of pickwickian legend, wished to donate to the little residents of the West Indies, every child in the Dominion, irrespective of birth or station, would have a better chance in the life which follows these formative years. Because it is accepted as an irrefutable fact that the feeding alone of a child during its first year of life determines to a very large extent its future health, and there are those who claim just as positively that the impressions, mental and physical, of the first few years, are strong determining factors in the spiritual and mental progress of the future man or woman.

"To lock the door after the horse has been stolen" is a common failing, with governments as well as with individuals. To provide asylums and penitentiaries, houses of correction and homes for the aged poor, are works that confront every state, of whatever size. The money expended on such institutions, if it had been expended on the very same people in their early, rather than their later, years, might have done what? It is hard to say, but it might have saved some, at least, of the maniacs, the criminals, the paupers amongst the adults, and the incorrigibles amongst the youth, of the land.

Here in Peterborough, one of the most unassuming, and at the same time, one of the most energetic and worth while organizations, is the Well Babies' Clinic. Because it is not a repair shop for broken down bodies, or a sanitarium for upset minds, because its work goes on quietly and silently, and because its chief benefactors, the babies who are brought there, are not able to voice their appreciation of the benefits received, in fact, because they, who get the most gain from it, know nothing whatever about what is going on, and voice their protestation at its ministrations in just the same fashion as they do when an unnoticed pin houses itself in the wrong place, because the good that comes from it is not manifest at all, and has its only outlet in the body and the mind, and consequently, the soul, of a wordless little baby, therefore, because of all these things, no one knows half the good that the Well Babies' Clinic does. The baby who goes there in an under-nourished state, with a starved little stomach threatening to handicap its digestive machinery for the rest of its existence, to be changed there to a full-nourished diet that warms and enriches and oils its little thin body into a plump and healthy physique, cares little for the good that is being done it. In later years, when the child of long ago pities the man or woman who suffers from indigestion, is there any way for it to realize that its immunity from such troubles had its beginning when its mother took it to the Well Babies' Clinic, and looked on, with perhaps an amused face, while the attendant doctor examined it or took, with a "grain of salt," perhaps, the advice about "butter soup" and sterilized rubber nipples, and such things. The girl who sympathizes secretly with her friend in later years over the latter's "flannel mouth" may never know that her own face was saved from just a disfigurement when her mother harkened long ago to the constant cry of the Clinic people against the use of "that everlasting comfort."

Adenoids and enlarged tonsils, rickets and bow legs, squinting eyes and indigestion, have their inception, with many like ailments, in habits allowed to form in childhood. The mother does not come to the Clinic; and the child suffers in later years.

Started here about six years ago, the thought mothered by the Local Council of Women, and primarily fostered in the mind of that organization by Dr. Jessie Birnie, who has been instrumental in carrying the Well Babies' Clinic to success across many stormy periods in its history, the work has increased and grown year by year, and the good it does is evidenced in the fact that, while other earlier attendants at the Clinic would tell of many untoward happenings in homes, and weird and awful things fed to some of the babies brought for examination, the present nurse declares that such practices are seldom encountered, and that woman generally are alive to the best way of doing things for their tiny babies. Even yet, many cling to the "comfort," and they pick it up from the floor or other spots where it has been thrown by tiny hands and replace it in the infants' mouth, with a sublime disregard for the great germ theory that should have a luckier outcome than it often receives.

Again, they find it hard to overcome the idea that "mother" always knows best. "Mother" may frown on the practice of placing sterilized linen caps over the rubber nipple of the nursing bottle, when not in use, but the Clinic prescribes this as a very commendatory usage. "Mother" may pooh-pooh the idea that the child should not be placed with its eyes turned to the glaring light, but investigators of causes of blindness made the computation a few years ago that one-third of the 60,000 cases of blindness in the United States in that year might have been prevented by proper attention and care of the child's eyes during the first few years of life.

So it goes. It was long held as a popular theory that a baby should "rough it" to a certain extent, and that it had to expect its full quota of children's diseases. A child that grew to manhood or womanhood without having experienced the sufferings of measles, chicken pox, scarlet fever, mumps, and even diphtheria, was supposed to have a Sword of Damocles hanging over its head, with a visitation of these diseases liable at any moment later on. Now, people think nthat one of these illnesses are necessary, and that the weaknesses that follow them may be sidestepped by sidestepping the disease in the first place.

Proper feeding and proper sanitary conditions of life should be provided for every baby. This is not alway one, but the aim of the Well Babies' Clinic is not to treat illnesses and sicknesses in the little frames, but to prevent them, if possible, from ever getting a hold on the child. "Prevention" is its large and ever-shining motto. At the Clinic weekly meetings, no surgical work is ever performed and no medical treatment given. These are left for the family doctor. But the baby is weighed, to determine whether it is of the proper weight for its years, and also examined for defects, deformities and for signs of improper feeding and mal-nutrition, that mysterious ailment of moderns, which attacks the wealthy and the poor alike, and has nothing whatever to do with the quality or quantity of the food consumed, but rather with its suitability for the particular person consuming it.

Follow-up work is also done to a great extent, in the manner in which the Clinic nurse, Miss Mamie Foote, visits the homes of children who have been brought to the Clinic, in order to determine whether conditions are just as they should be. Many a well-intentioned mother, whose first offspring is her pride and her joy, and occupies most of her attention, is unthinkingly and unknowingly doing all the time things with that baby and its food that are absolutely wrong and just about as bad for the child as if she left it without food altogether. She may rack her brains as to the

Rock-a-Bye, Up So High

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

FINGER plays can be started with very young children, fitting, of course, the subject matter to the child's understanding. Simple ones like "Pat-a-Cake" and "Here's a ball for baby," are taught to mere infants. Finger plays are excellent educational material in that they teach muscle co-ordination with pleasurable mental effort using constructive subject matter. Any librarian will direct you to the excellent books of finger plays on the market.

THERE'S a wee little nest in the old apple tree
With four eggs as blue as the sky
And the nest on the bough is swung by the breeze
Up so high, rock-a-bye, up so high.
And the mother bird spreads out her downy brown wings
So safely the blue eggs to keep
And covers them close from the sun and rain
'Till wee baby birds start to peep.
There are four wee, wee birds in the little brown nest
While the mother bird hovers close by
And they're rocked and they're swung in the old apple tree
Rock-a-bye, up so high, Rock-a-bye.

A Different Kind of Baby

BABY'S BATHS

Oil Baths, Warm Baths, Cool Baths, Sun Baths—They Make His Life Worth Living

Mysteries of the bath are expl ained to eager mothers at the Babies' Clinic.

A large factor in keeping the baby well is keeping him cool and comfortable. If he cannot be taken to some cool spot in the mountains, he can at least have for his nursery and sleeping room the coolest spot in the house.

The bath is an important adjunct to a baby's happy summer. It is more important in summer than winter, for it is refreshing, and during the heat of the day often will bring sleep. Due to an increased activity of the sweat glands in the summer, there is a constant irritation of the skin. The tendency to chafing or prickly heat may be relieved by adding a handful of bran to the tub of tepid water.

Oil Rubs at First.

Be sure not to give the bath immediately after feeding. An oil rub or a sponge bath should be given until the cord is off. As soon as the navel is healed a tub bath should be given in a room with a temperature of 70 to 75 degrees.

The temperature of the bath water during the early weeks should be warm, 98 to 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

During the first six months the bath water should be tepid, 95 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit. The baby should be bathed rapidly to avoid chilling.

When you take him out of the tub, wrap the baby in a warm soft towel, dry thoroughly and do not allow him to chill. Give a full bath or sponge every day if possible and early teach your child the love of a clean body.

Give Sun Baths, Too.

The head and neck should be supported with one arm or hand, while the baby is in the tub. Mild, white soap should be used and the skin thoroughly rinsed.

There is another kind of bath which adds much to the baby's well-being. This is a sun bath. Sun baths should be given under the very close supervision of a physician. Even though the baby is in the sun a good deal with his clothes on, he does not get certain rays which he needs.

His body should, therefore, be exposed directly to the sun's rays, two to three minutes at first, gradually increasing the length of time to one or two hours. His head and eyes should be protected from the direct rays. He should not be exposed to the heat of the sun during the middle of a hot summer day.

Sun baths in winter should be given during the middle of the day when the sun's rays are most effective and also the warmest. These may be given before an open window. The body can thus be sheltered from the wind and the heat of the sun help to keep him warm.

PLAY TIME; GROWING TIME

By DR. S. J. CRUMBINE.

It is natural for animals to live out of doors, seeking shelter during extreme heat, cold or storms, or for protection from their enemies. Unless the weather is very warm, they usually seek the sunshine.

It is just as natural for the child to seek the out of doors.

Our crowded cities with their apartments and hotels have made a great encroachment upon the play space of the child. There are no trees, ladders and stairways to climb and no attics or barn lofts to explore.

Child Needs Play.

Play has seemed to be something which the child seeks so naturally for himself that many parents who carefully guard the sleep, diet and health habits of their children pay little attention to their play.

The child needs to play out of doors several hours each day. He is as sensitive as a plant to fresh air and sunshine. He needs space for freedom of motion, where he may romp, sing or yell free from restraint. He needs trees and ladders to climb, swings and see-saws for the development and training of muscles.

Our cities are making provisions for their children through parks, playgrounds and recreation centres. These provisions are too often overlooked by the parent who sees in play merely something to keep the child quiet and his mind occupied. Since the movies are usually more accessible than play spaces, children are allowed to spend many hours in the movies that should be spent in some outdoor recreation. Frequently the movies are poorly ventilated and overcrowded. They furnish inaction instead of physical exercise. Their most serious effect is on the nervous system.

While the motion pictures have much to offer to the child who goes occasionally to carefully selected ones, the child who has the movie habit is frequently over-stimulated and has learned to depend on the excitement which they offer instead of his own initiative for amusement.

Through play with other children a child receives his best lessons in social adjustments. Learning to share a cherished plaything and to watch the other child enjoy it may be a very difficult problem for the runabout. By play with other children the selfish child learns to respect the rights of others, while the timid child is encouraged to take his place in the game.

Babies Not Playthings.

While children should not be so constantly supervised that they have little opportunity to develop their own initiative, becoming slaves to the adults' directions, they do need intelligent suggestions and guidance as soon as they are ready for new achievements.

Toys should have no sharp edges or loose parts that can be detached or broken off and they should be large enough not to be swallowed. Teaspoons, tin cups and spools strung on a cord can be washed frequently and are inexpensive. They mean as much to the baby as costly toys.

Babies are not playthings to be tickled or tossed in the air. The fretful baby should not have a noisy rattle waved before him to make him smile. Babies need to be played with at times, but it should be done quietly and over-stimulation avoided.

Babies get most of their exercise by moving their arms and legs. Several times a day they should be freed from the restraint of bed clothes and clothing and be allowed to take their own exercises.

"Papa, I wish you'd punish Willie. He's been such a bad boy. He wouldn't come in when I called him, he was impudent, he threw a stone through the cellar window, and he——"

"Oh, come, come! We mustn't be too hard on the boy. It's just youthful spirits."

By the way' did you ever try to unsay it with flowers?

THE GREATER GLORY.

An excited throng watched the courthouse burn down. Two small boys, apparently unmindful of the conflagration, were fighting each other, tooth and nail—there on the lawn.

"Here, here," interposed an old gentleman, "you boys shouldn't fight. Why aren't you watching the fire?"

"We're decidin' which of us saw it first," one of them panted.

Modern Motto—More chaste, less speed.

Dark Side of Divorce!

(By Dr. Frank Crane)

Chauncey M. Depew, interviewed on his ninety-second birthday, was asked what he considered to be the most beautiful word in the English language.

His answer was "Home."

About the same time President Coolidge, addressing a large body of people, expressed the belief that the only cure for the crime wave and many other problems of the present time lies in the home—in better homes.

Leading men all over the nation concurred with both statements.

But, while they were concurring, Mrs. Amy Steinhart Braden gave the other side of the picture. Mrs. Braden is Secretary of the California State Department of Public Welfare and recently she made an appeal for homes to take in divorce-orphaned children.

In this appeal she said

"The present-day breaking up of homes is leaving more children without parental care than there are childless families willing to adopt them."

She points out that there are, in this one state, about 3,700 "boarding homes" for children which have been given licenses.

These are full and there are several hundred children on the waiting list. An appeal to private homes to take them in is being made.

The dark side of divorce is seen in the lives of the children who are robbed of the normal privileges of home life.

Divorce proceedings are generally in the limelight.

It is not here, but in the shadows that lie beyond, that the main tragedy of the breaking up of homes takes place.

This main tragedy concerns itself with the helpless children left in abnormal conditions, not with the couples who separate.

Divorce-orphaned children, farmed out in groups in "homes" run on a commercial basis, and shut out from a knowledge of what a real home is like, form an ever-widening blot on our present-day civilization.

Wise Words

A Near Romance.

"Be careful not to confuse the rhomboid with the rhombus," cautioned the impecunious professor.

"Why not." inquired the wealthy young co-ed.

"Because," replied the professor, raising an impressive finger, "a rhomboid is a parallelogram."

"Goodness, as bad as that?" exclaimed the beautiful and wealthy young co-ed.

"And," resumed the professor, still more impressively, "the rhomboid and the rhombus are not dissimilar in appearance."

"Like mushrooms and toadstools," replied the bright, beautiful, and wealthy young co-ed.

"Quite so," admitted the impecunious professor, "but remember that the rhomboid is a parallelogram."

"And the rhombus ain't," added the beautiful, talented, bright, and wealthy young co-ed.

"And now," resumed the absent-minded and impecunious professor, "I want to say a word or two about the trapezium, to caution you regarding the trapezium and the trapezoid."

"Oh, I'll look out for them," purred the sweet, charming, beautiful, talented, and wealthy young co-e.

"The trapezoid," persisted the absent-minded, impecunious, hard-headed, stick-in-the-mudish old professor, "is quite harmless, but the trapezium——"

"Oh, I know," the beautiful, etc., young co-ed hastened to say. "My brother had one of those, and he fell out and nearly broke his neck. He was trying to skin the cat, but all he skinned was his nose and his knees." Along with this humorous sally the reckless, impressionable, and wealthy young co-ed became limp with laughter to such an extent that sheswayed uncertainly, and she had to catch onto the professor to steady herself, like a ship grappling to a wharf, rocking in the wind and tide, but the professor went right on talking about rhomboids and trapeziums and stuff.—H. DON'T DREAD BABY'S TEETHING

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M.D.

Not so long ago I drove down into Virginia to call on some friends. It so happened there was a seven-weeks baby in the house. Naturally and properly it was the centre of an admiring group.

I was much impressed by the many evidences of good sense in the care of the infant. To begin with, the child was not wrapped and swathed in a multitude of garments. A clean sheet was stretched over a wide couch and upon it the baby wiggled and twisted to its heart's content.

It is a shame to make a prisoner of a tiny baby. To shackle and bind and bundle such a morsel of flesh is a crime against its freedom and health-giving exercise.

But these are not the things I had in mind to tell you. I want you to hear what the sensible grandmother of this baby said. It was this:

"I don't believe a word about the evils of teething and the dangers of the second summer!"

Good for you, Grandmother! A false popular conclusion has been reached in this matter. Just because the upset stomach and bowels, the fever and discomfort, have coincided with the period when the teeth are cut, is not proof conclusive that they have resulted from the teething.

Of course, the teething period is a time when the nervous system is developing. This fact, together with the mouth tenderness of the time, must not be disregarded as having some effect upon the vitality and resistance of the child. But I am sure the significance of teething has been overdrawn.

Nature never intended that the "natural" processes, the many circumstances of growth and development, should be accompanied by peculiar dangers and possibilities of disaster. I have more faith in Nature than to believe this.

The trouble with us human beings is that we abuse the body. We insult Nature by neglecting her simple rules. We add injury to insult by deliberately violating her laws.

In a baby's life the centre of gravity is the mouth. To it gravitates everything the child can get its hands on and failing anything else to put there, its own little fist is thrust into its mouth. Even its toes find their way there.

It wouldn't matter much about what gets to baby's mouth, if the things were clean. But they aren't. Dirty toys and dirtier fingers are pressed and rubbed into the gums. Is it any wonder the mouth gets sore and inflamed?

Dirty rubber nipples and teething rings, contaminated objects of every sort—all these are a menace to the mouth health and general welfare of the child. If such things are kept from the lips and gums and tongue it will mean much for the baby's good.

The mouth should be washed out carefully, soft cloths or cotton being used for the purpose. The feeding bottle, the spoons, the toys — reaching this magnetic cavity should be thoroughly clean, surgically clean.

When the mother follows these suggestions I am sure she will have no occasion to dread the second summer, or the teething period whenever it comes.

What Does Your Child Eat In Summer?
Here is a Week of Hot Weather Menus

SCIENTISTS RECOMMEND LIGHT MEALS FOR TWO AND THREE YEAR OLDS.

(By Dr. S. J. Crumbine.)

(Copyright, American Child Health Association.

People talk of children, long ago and far away, who throve by eating corn pone sopped in bacon grease, or some such diet. Certainly it is true that in different times and localities, children eat food that at first appears horrifying—and the race survives.

With the knowledge now available, however, it is unfair to ask the child to go through the strenuous upbuilding period of infancy on anything less than a reasonably suitable and properly adapted diet. The child's food is too important to be served in haphazard fashion.

Here are a week's menus for children from 2 to 6 years old which are a safe schedule for the average healthy child

Monday:

For children from 3 to 6

Breakfast Orange, farina with milk, bread and butter, cup of milk.

Dinner Cream of potato soup, coddled eggs, string beans, bread and butter, cup of milk, junket.

Supper Cream of spinach soup, pettijohn's food and milk, whole wheat bread and butter, cup of milk.

DEGREE OF DANGER.

natural home is far away Sweden. The average builder has not been able to avoid its ready made lure. Being always of the same proportions and pattern, it presents a common and ugly appearance. It is a menace to any sense of dignity or homelikeness. This door, however, can be changed by the average joiner, or even by the "junior mechanic' of ones own household, into different simple forms which are more suitable, and some of which are suggested by the illustrations.

The front door hardware should receive due attention. But first see that the door is hinged on the right-hand side, opening inwards, and using three hinges which will assist in keeping the door in place. Is anything more annoying than a door that will not latch?

Do not skimp the cost of the hardware; select a strong, well-built lock of reputable make, as the front door is more in use than any other door in the house. Copyright 1926 by MacLean Building Reports Limited.

The main entrance should receive more consideration than any other one feature of the exterior of the house.

Many plain and simple houses are made attractive because character and refinement are shown in the design of the front door. The design of the door and the panels, the sidelights and transom, together with the steps and platform approach, should be made effective, not by showy hardware and metal grilling, plate glass or other display, but by that simple elegance only made possible by obtaining good outlines and proportions.

The location for the entrance door should be at the front of the house, if the plan will at all permit. On the other hand a sense of retirement can undoubtedly be obtained by placing the entrance at the side of the house. There is a certain amount of interest one experiences when walking along the path, looking for the entrance when not at the front of the house, especially if there are flowers and shrubs to welcome us.

The front door should be designed to give a sense of protection, and at the same time should be definitely friendly looking and inviting. Of the two illustrated the Tudor entrance appears quiet, spacious, inviting protection from storm and heat alike. We sense the hospitality within, before the door opens, and vision the bright fireside, the cosy chairs and happy voices, long before one enters.

How different these are from the uninteresting doorways one sees in street after street; all so much alike that the residents hardly know their own door, but are guided by the postal number. Instead your doorway should at least show some individuality, if only by its color—dark green or chocolate, or even no color, just unpainted wood. We must seek for a general improvement in the design of our doorways, and not let the thought and charm put into the old work be entirely forgotten.

In Canada the four-panelled front door is much in evidence, though its

BABY ISN'T HUNGRY EVERY TIME HE CRIES

BY DR. S. J. CRUMBINE.

SUMMER is the season to which the older child looks forward with delight. It may mean the lakes, or farm, or it may mean only an occasional outing or brief visit to city parks. Anyway, it is spent mainly out-of-doors.

But for the baby it has too often been a season when discomfort, diarrhoea and death hovered near. Few babies whose mothers are able to nurse them are troubled with diarrhoea and summer complaint unless they are overfed. The breast-fed baby has from five to six times as good a chance of living through his first year as has a bottle-fed baby.

Keep Him Well.

Don't try to fatten your baby during the hot summer months. The main thing is to keep him well. Four ounces per week is a very good gain. You do not eat heartily yourself in hot weather. Why should you overload the baby's stomach? Give him plenty of time to rest betwten meals. Allow four hours between feedings. Do not think just because he cries, that he is hungry. He may be thirsty. Give him water that has been boiled and cooled.

Most mothers could nurse their babies if their daily life were properly regulated. The mother as well as the baby should have a regular schedule. She should live a quiet life free from excitement, worry and fatigue. Ample rest at night and a period each morning and afternoon for complete relaxation and rest are essential. The baby should be fed at regular intervals and completely empty the breast at each feeding. This is the best way to keep up the supply of breast milk.

Do not wean your baby without consulting your doctor. Even though it becomes necessary to supplement your breast milk by modified cow's milk it is usually best to keep up your supply of breast milk until the baby is at least six months of age.

After the ninth month a baby often thrives best if taken entirely from the breast. Weaning should be done gradually. One bottle may be given for the afternoon nursing before the sixth month and when the time for weaning arrives other bottles may gradually be substituted. In this way if it should become necessary to wean the baby suddenly, he is already accustomed to cow's milk.

It is for the baby on a bottle that particular caution must be taken. Obtain for him the freshest, cleanest cow's milk it is possible to buy, and, unless advised by your physician to buy milk which he knows to be "certified" by a medical commission, buy only pasteurized milk which has been cooled and sealed in sterilized bottles by a reputable dairy.

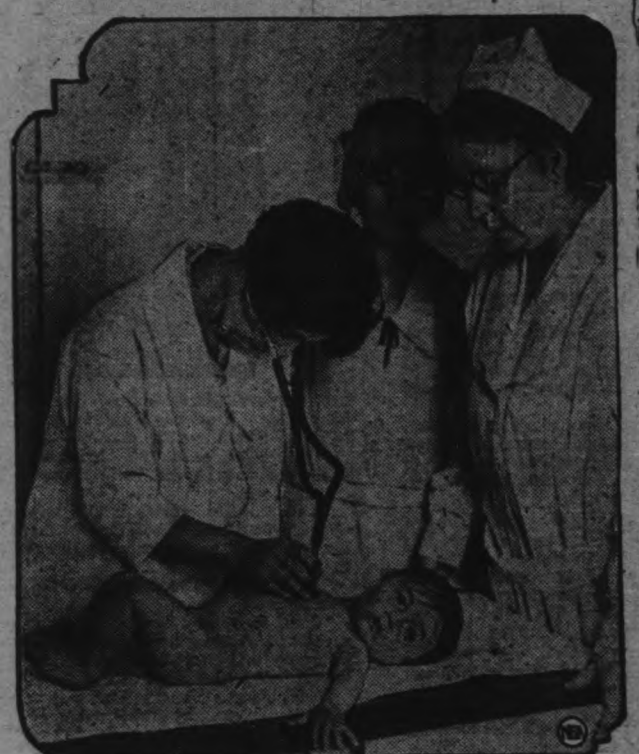
During the summer months, boil for 5 minutes all milk and water to be given to the baby. When the baby is 2 to 3 months old he should be given orange or tomato juice daily. When the milk is boiled he must depend on orange or tomato juice to replace an essential food element in the milk, destroyed by heat.

All babies fed on a bottle should be under a physician's care. Babies cannot take straight cow's milk, and the amount and strength of the milk formula should be determined by your physician. If your baby gets diarrhoea or vomits, stop all feeding and give nothing but boiled water until your doctor arrives, even though you should have to wait from 12 to 24 hours.

Use Everything Fresh.

Before preparing bottle feedings for the baby, wash your hands carefully. Wash the bottles with hot soapsuds. Boil for five minutes the bottles, nipples and all utensils used in preparing the feedings. After the milk formula has been prepared, put the exact amount for each feeding in bottles and place on ice or in cool spring. Always prepare the baby's bottle from milk freshly purchased and do not use whole milk kept from the day before. Throw away all milk left in each bottle. Never give the baby feedings prepared the day before.

Dry milk or powdered milk may be used if you are traveling with the baby or stopping where pure, fresh milk cannot be obtained, or where you have no way of keeping it cool. Do not use the sweetened condensed milk unless it is ordered by your doctor. As far as the baby is concerned travel is rarely justified unless he is being taken to a better place than home to spend the summer.



A baby being given physical examination by physician and nurse to fix his daily schedule. This three months' old baby is passing his exams with high honors.

cause of the child's inability to wax and grow fat, at least as fat as it should be for its age, but she will hnever hit on the solution probably, u til she takes it up to the Clinic and gets the advice of experts who make such things their specialty in life. The very fact that this information is free, as well as plenty of literature that has to do with every item in the life of "King Baby," perhaps causes some people to view it with suspicion. It is an axiom that most things have to be paid for, and free, voluntary service along any line is a novelty that does not always get the reception it deserves.

Rich and poor mothers come here. There are no distinctions of any sort. The only entrance ticket for real attention and interest is the possession of a baby, but onlookers are welcome at any time to come along also and see how the thing works out, and listen to the lectures that are given along lines of baby welfare, during the winter months, by a staff of doctors who give some of their time to this work.

Attendance and interest in the Clinic increases annually, as is evidenced by the fact, noted yearly, of larger numbers at the meetings. Last year, during the twelve months, eleven hundred and eighty babies were brought here for examination and advice. In little over half that period which has already elapsed this year, over six hundred have come, showing the increase in the half year up to date. The mothers appreciate the advice they receive and many are the expressions of gratitude that they bring to those in charge, the nurse, Miss Foote, who succeeded Mrs. G. McCartney, the first Clinic nurse, the supervisor, the ever-faithful Dr. Birnie, the volunteer helpers, in Miss Marjorie Best and Mrs. Rappe, and the executive, at present composed of the president, Mrs. A. Mowat, vice-presidents in Mrs. J. Mills, Mrs. R. Harstone, the secretary, Miss Annie Wood, and the treasurer, Mrs. F. C. Neal. The honorary president is Mrs. W. Galbraith, who has been an energetic worker on the Board ever since the commencement of the work, when the late Mrs. James Kendry was the first president.

Pre-natal care is the latest work undertaken by the Clinic, and the nurse does a great deal of good in this way, visiting expectant mothers and telling them just what foods are best for them. These, of course, again, are women who come to the Clinic. The nurse does not reach out for work of any sort, confining her activities solely to those women and children who take advantage of the Clinic's facilities for service along such lines. The percentage of still-births, as everywhere else, is very large in Peterborough, but the general infant mortality rate has declined in recent years, owing, in a great measure, to the work carried on at the Clinic. An analysis of such deaths often shows, too, that deaths from preventable causes are very low. That is to say, that putting aside the cases that are absolutely unpreventable, the remaining per-cent age of deaths in infants under one year of age in the city, is not very high. It is to help in some way to overcome the rather high percentage of deaths from what are called unpreventable causes and to prevent, if possible, so high a percentage of still-births, that the pre-natal work is being undertaken.

The nurse, in her rounds, comes on many conditions that are sometimes, not through fault of the mother, but through that inability to see the wrong method that sometimes characterizes those who are at close range to the subject, not just conducive to the best for "King Baby."

The too warm clothing of the child in hot weather, the lack of fresh air at all times in the homes and sleeping rooms, the use of the "everlasting comfort," the placing of the child in such a way that the light falls hard on its unprotected eyes, the carelessness in preparing and taking care of its feeding bottles, and also, a good deal of indifference to the menace contained in the fly, as a germ breeder and carrier, are among the common faults of well-meaning, but unnoticing mothers.

The Well Babies' Clinic uses rooms provided by the kindness of the G. W. V. A., and gets a donation from the city, which, insufficient for the work carried on, is supplemented by donations from various charitable-minded organizations. It also has the unceasing assistance of the King's Daughters, who provide tea at the weekly meetings, and the Thursday Club, who make layettes. Children from two weeks old to four years of age are brought here. During the six years of its work in the city, only one child brought here for examination and advice, has died.

YOUR CHILD'S CAREER

What of the films for your child's career?

Will Hays, "the movie czar," presents a picture of the widely diversified opportunities in the following statement for The Examiner.

By Will Hays.

"The average person, when thinking in terms of a film career, has only acting in mind.

"And so I take pains to stress the point that there are vast opportunities in the world of celluloid for people who could no more pass the casting director's test than—well, myself, for insance.

"Although you do not see their pictures on magazine covers, there is an army of fine talent in the background of every film success: scenarists, continuity writers, scenic and costume designers, craftsmanly carpenters and interior decorators, scene painters, directors and assistant directors, publicity men and women, advertising specialists, sales experts, distribution experts and the controlling executives themselves.

"You have you choice in a long gamut that runs through the arts to the hard-headed financial details.

Face Isn't Everything

"So if your child's dream heads him toward films; if your own dream is to see the child a figure in one of the world's greatest industries—don't despair if it doesn't happen to possess a 'film face.'

"Now, as to advice—can you, as a parent, truthfully tell yourself that you know enough about the films to detect the necessary talents in your children?

"It is one thing to sit in a theatre and be entertained and diverted and educated; and another to appreciate what has gone into that film and analyze these factors.

"It is not likely that you will have much success in diverting a child's attention from the action and the interest of the picture to point out essentials. But upon returning home you can instruct the child in the highly interesting story of how a film is made.

"You can furnish him with innumerable books and articles on the building of a great picture. You can add mightily to the child's imaginative flights by indicating what dreams have been in the minds of the writers, what genius has been expressed by a director and what qualities make a story.

"In this manner you will have stimulated the interest toward the profession you have in mind, and, at the same time, added to the store of information so vital to the mental growth of the child.

"He may disappoint you—so many children do—and enter upon the last sort of a career you had imagined—but he will have much helpful knowledge. It is thus with any profession. Stimulate the play-life of the child with saws and hammers and wood and he will build himself a little world.

"And building worlds is the service of the movie people from the lowliest extra to the greatest director.

"As to the child as a potential film actor—

"Well, it is only human that a parent should consider a child quite as pretty and precocious as any to be seen upon the screen.

"And, again, it is only human that every other cunning youngster that can mimic Jackie oogan should be dragged into a casting director's office by a proud mother.

"But be pretty sure that the child has something more than mere average talent. All children are mimics. All children are cute. All children are pretty—at least to their parents.

"And yet how many of them have faces that would photograph well? How many could fall into the parts to which they might be assigned? How many could forget themselves in the parts they have to play?

"That refers, of course, to the child actor.

"Whether the child will become screen material, only time will tell. No harm is done by giving a child lessons in grace, dramatics and such. These are necessary in any later social encounter.

"Perhaps as maturity or at adolescence the child will have a "photographic" face; perhaps not. Perhaps it will have the proper talent; perhaps not. That's a gamble in any profession.

Best Traditions

"But if you want your child on the screen—whatever else you do, bring it up to respect the best screen traditions. If the idea is implanted that the screen offers an easy, lazy life, full of Rolls-Royces and midnight suppers and million dollar salaries—the whole thing is hopeless.

"The screen life is work—hard work, and if you don't believe it, a visit to any studio wil convince you.

"More and more, as the screen develops, the need of "team-work" is emphasized. Everybody isn't going to star, but the butler who walks in and off can be an artist as certainly as anyone else can.

"Build your child's brain, build his interests, build his imagination, build his taste and his feeling for beauty—build, above everything else, his willingness to work and work hard, and he will fit in somewhere."

The Crocodile

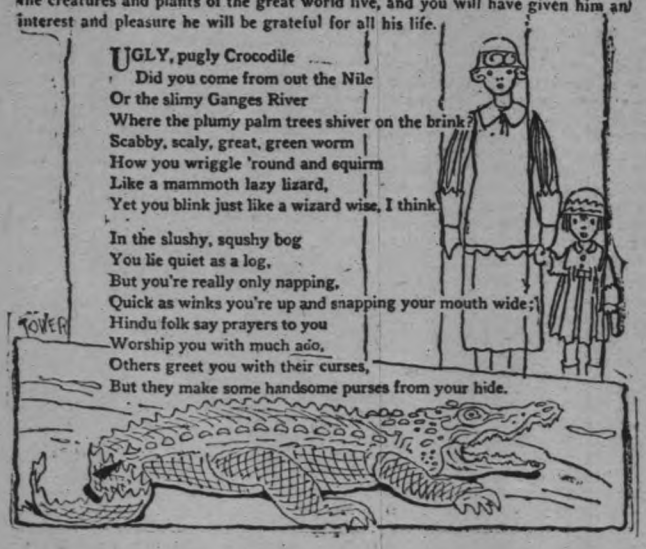
THERE is no more mentally healthful or interesting general subject in which to interest a child than Natural History. The country child has the whole outdoors to study. The city child has the zoo, aquarium and botanical garden. All children have access to books. Start the child early on the road to learning how the creatures and plants of the great world live, and you will have given him an interest and pleasure he will be grateful for all his life.



UGLY, pugly Crocodile
Did you come from out the Nile
Or the slimy Ganges River
Where the plumy palm trees shiver on the brink?
Scabby, scaly, great, green worm
How you wriggle 'round and squirm
Like a mammoth lazy lizard,
Yet you blink just like a wizard wise, I think.

In the slushy, squshy bog
You lie quiet as a log,
But you're really only napping,
Quick as winks you're up and snapping your mouth wide;
Hindu folk say prayers to you
Worship you with much ado,
Others greet you with their curses,
But they make some handsome purses from your hide.

SOLUTION OF YESTERDAY'S CROSSWORD PUZZLE.

MR. GLUCASS AT HOME

The Great Gadget Magnate Handles a Domestic Probl m.

"Fred," said Mrs. Glucass, as her husband handed his hat, coat and stick to the three flunkeys at the door of his home, "Junior was very bad today. He deliberately broke two of the stained-glass windows in the kitchen."

"The ten-thousand-dollar ones?" asked Mr. Glucass.

(Mr. Glucass was president of the United Gadget Company, and personally controlled the destinies of the Gadget Trust, the third largest industry in the United States.)

"No," said Mrs. Glucass; "if they had just been the ten-thousand-dollar ones I wouldn't have said anything, but they were that pair of fifty-thousand ones. I told Junior you'd come right up and spank him when you got home."

"Did you?" asked Mr. Glucass nervously. "I—I'll go up and see him after dinner."

"You'll go now," said his wife.

"If you say so—" said Mr. Glucass.

(He was known throughout the financial world as "Single-Track" Glucass, the man who could never be made to do anything he didn't want to do.)

"Hello, old bean," said Junior, when Mr. Glucass entered the boy's room.

'Daddy is very cross with you," said Mr. Glucass.

(The Gadget Company had a special home for Mr. Glucass' stenographers. It was called "The Nervous Wrecks' Retreat.")

"All I did, governor, was to bust a window," said Junior.

"You shouldn't break windows." I only makes daddy have to spank you Come on, bend over."

"Aw, wait till I finish this chapter."

"All right, but not longer than that," said Mr. Glucass.

(The King of England once had to send Mr. Glucass a personal apology because a Prime Minister had kept him waiting three minutes while deciding whether to send another hundred thousand soldiers to their death.)

Junior finished the chapter. Mr. Glucass sighed and took off his coat.

"Oh, daddy," wailed the boy, "I have such a pain—all of a sudden."

"Dear me," cried Mr. Glucass, intense anxiety in his voice, "What'll we do? I'd better call Mother."

(Billion-dollar corporations fought to get Mr. Glucass as a director because he never lost his head.)

"I don't think you need bother Mother," said Junior. "All I need is rest——"

He hopped into bed and Mr. Glucass kissed him good night. As Mr. Glucass started out of the room, Junior called after him:

"I wouldnt say anything to Mother, daddy; no use worrying her."

'That's very thoughtful of you, son," said Mr. Glucass. "You're a fine boy."

And Mr. Glucass shut the door carefully and went downstairs.

DISCUSSES

TOO MANY FATHER'S SONS

"A man will ponder ten times as long over a carpet as he does over the lady who is to walk on it."

Father is a successful man. He began with little or nothing—except brains and character. No money: no influence: not much education: and not much luck. He suffered hardship: he fought against odds: but the brains and the character were more powerful than the adverse odds: and father won. He now has a place in the world: and he can wield just the sort of influence which once as a youth he wanted and could not get. He may not be a multimillionaire, or even a millionaire: but relatively to his original position he is rich and he lives in luxury. No need for him to look twice at sixpence.

But father has a son, and the responsibility is his of launching that son upon the world. At first his course is plain: there can be no argument or uncertainty about it. Son must be educated. Father was not educated: but this is an age of education, and not to have son educated in the finest possible way would be a crime against son and against society. Accordingly son is educated in what father considers to be the finest possible way. The advantage to son is immense, and father would be more than human if he did not occasionally remark, either about son or directly to son "I never had such an advantage."

Well, so far so good. But now, as son's education is approaching completion, comes father's bad time—the time when father hesitates to the point of trembling in his five-guinea boots, blushes at the mere mention of the word 'hardship,' and wonders secretly what in the dickens he is going to do in regard to son.

To begin with, father has accustomed son to luxury, where—as father himself when young simply did not know what luxury was. Hardships were naught to father: they would be absolute torture and misery to son. Again, son may not have the fundamental forceful character with which heaven endowed father. Son might founder where father grandly breasted the waves. And in the third place father may well have a business or profession to be thrown away for lack of a successor? And there are many other considerations. For example, the feelings of mother.

So the result is that in offices and manufactories one sees relatively large numbers of young men who may be called "father's sons." These fathers' sons are on velvet which they have not paid for. They may, in rare instances, soon prove that they possess character and ability worthy of the velvet, and strong enough to treat the velvet as though it were a bare-board. Or, they may just be able to conduct themselves with decency and without humiliation, maintaining fairly well, but not enhancing the position into which good luck has thrust them. Or they may be simply ridiculous, by reason either of idleness, incompetence or essential weakness of disposition. In either case, but especially in the second and third cases, their occupation of the precious velvet will cause considerable secret resentment among the less fortunate beings with whom they work. Their mere existence will arouse the sense of injustice, will emphasize the general discontents of society, and most infallibly in some degree make for inefficiency all around.

The question arises What can be done about it? The answer to this question is Not much.

The theory that early hardships are an aid to success is only half true. They may be an aid, but they may also be a drawback. Many men have failed utterly under hardships who might have succeeded tolerably well in circumstances less trying and more comfortable.

Further, it is contrary to the commonsense of mankind that son should be forced back to the point at which father started. The progress of humanity at large will not be achieved by rolling a stone uphill, throwing it back to the bottom, and then once more rolling it up again, and so on, ad infinitum. Father himself has probably not reached the summit of Mount Everest. Heights yet remain for son to conquer, and, whatever his unearned advantages, he may find it just as difficult to climb from ten thousand feet to twenty thousand feet as father found it to climb from ten feet to ten thousand feet.

General character and ability 'will out.' If son possesses them he will somehow demonstrate the fact, despite being 'spoiled.' If he doesn't—well then, it is a pity that he should occupy any velvet: but parental affection also 'will out'—and parental affection means velvet for children: and who among you would advocate the strangling of parental affection?

However, if father cannot do much to nullify the bad effects of bestowing influence, opportunity, or capital on son, he can at any rate do something. And chiefly he ought to measure out the size and the soft thickness of the velvet according to son's keenness and natural gifts. If son is not keen then he should be allotted as small an allowance of velvet as possible, for overliberality in velvet will soon rob him of what bit of keenness he has. On the other hand, if son is really keen, plenty of velvet will not harm him: it may indeed even sharpen his keenness. And the same truth holds good for natural gifts.

There is the problem of son's income during the first years when he earns little or naught. Father of course provides such income. Nothing is more likely to undermine son's character, and particularly his self-reliance, than the easy feeling that if he wants money he can get it by asking or wheedling. The income should be very moderate and it should be rigidly limited.

Father should say to son "Here is the total. It must suffice for all your personal expenditure."

Son is pretty certain to come along soon and plead, for instance "A friend of mine is getting married. I must give him a wedding present and I've nothing in hand." Whereupon father will reply "Your wedding presents are your affair, not mine. What should you do if you were a clerk with a fixed salary and no father?"

Says son "But what am I to do?"

Says father "If you have no money you can't scatter presents."

Says son "But I simply must. It would look so odd."

Says father "Let it look odd. This will teach you in your financial arrangements to provide a margin for emergencies."

In this manner and in no other manner can son learn "the value of money." By such training alone can son's moral stamina be encouraged and strengthened, and the common reproach of being 'his father's son' be taken away.

Black Cats Take First From Falling Leafs

SECOND GAME GOES TO LEAFS

Two Toronto Men Banished From the Field in First Match.

COSTLY MISPLAYS.

TORONTO, July 24 (Canadian Press) — Toronto and Jersey City broke even in the closing of their series here yesterday, the Black Cats coming from behind to win the first game 6 to 4 while Carlyle's long double to right centre with Mullen and Lawry on base and one out in the seventh gave the Leafs the second game 5 to 4. An error by Mullen and one by the pitcher himself brought about Owen Carroll's defeat in the first contest, both misplays coming in the sixth inning when the Black Cats scored three runs. Umpire Crooke ran into a rough passage during the afternoon, Manager Howley and shortstop Miller being banished from the park in the first game while Tillie Walker got the gate in the second.

The International leaders, the Baltimore Orioles, maintained the margin in front of Toronto by also splitting a bargain day bill with the Stars at Syracuse.

In the first, Baltimore scored five runs in the ninth to give them a 9-5 win. The Stars, however, gave the home boys a treat in the second game and turned in a 6-4 victory.

Buffalo entertained Reading and were successful in turning in a 13-4 win. Neis featured for the winning Bisons with a couple of homers.

At Rochester, Nowark defeated the Colts 8-1, Mamaux keeping the home team's ten hits well scattered.

AROUND WORLD RECORD BREAKERS.

Edward Evans and Linton Wells reached Mitchell Field, New York, shortly before 3 o'clock July 14, completing a record-breaking trip around the world in slightly over 28 days, or about seven days better than Jonn Henry Mears did it in 1913 without the use of airplanes. Left to right are seen Linton Wells, the writer and chronicler of the trip; John H. Mears, who greeted the fliers on their return; and Edward S. Evans, banker, who planned the exploit. The two travellers had been almost without sleep for two days or more.

Inside Sporting Dope

By A Wise Cracker

Mister Sporting Editor:

After that wonderful battle in Belleville Wed. and the last 2 or 3 fine exhibitions on the home lot, a lotta local birds oughta to get hep to the fact that right now the Petes is stepping along about as fast as any Peterboro team ever done, and that the ball being played in the Central loop is sure-fire senior calibre. They ain't been a more sensational ball game ever staged in this end of Canada's finest Province than that scrap in Belleville, and take it from me, Mac, they was enough brilliant pitching, classy fielding and thrills crowded in them 19 innings to satisfy any 1. If Peterboro ball fans had seen that exhibition they wouldn't be room in the park for all what wanted to see the next battle, for it was senior ball at its best. Every 1 was satisfied with a draw. It woulda been a shame to see either of them pitchers beaten Wed. after the demonstration of courage and coolness and skill they give, for both covered themselves with enough glory to last a season. The way them 2 iron men went along in the heat it looked as if they coulda battled on for many more innings if Mister Colling hadn't decided that the shades of night was falling too fast to take a chance on starting the 20th frame. As the box fighters sez, "A draw don't hurt nobody," and so Mister Colling's decision was applauded by every 1, except 2 birds which applied for their money back because the game wasn't played thru to a win.

Mister Johnston, the Petes' pilot, kicked himself out of the game at the end of the 5th and departed for the grandstand after carefully expressing his disapproval of Mister Umpire Woodley's decision, his looks, his judgment and his family connections. Anything that Mister Johnston forgot to say coulda been written on a postage stamp. Ahyway Mister Woodley had the last laugh, for Mister Johnston hadda spend 14 innings in the grandstand alongside of Mister Slats Kerr, Belleville's rooting ace, and they is more pleasant ways to pass a summer afternoon.

THE NEXT SET-TOO.

The Petes is idle until a week from today when the Belleville railroaders and them will resume their fight where they left it off in the 19th Wed. It'll likely be the last appearance of the Bellevillians here this summer, and in view of the ball the Petes has been playing, they for once should oughta be greeted by a real crowd of old customers.

Last Sat. the boys knocked off Kingston very smoothly, with Heck holding the whip hand over the Ponies all through the journey, and them what was figgering the Kingstons would win this league in a walk should notice that in 18 innings the Daley men has only picked up 2 unearned runs off the blonde heaver's delivery. In fact, in 55 innings Mister Heckman has allowed but 8 earned counters, about 1 to every 7 innings, and if that ain't pitching supreme, Mac, I'll eat your straw hat.

By the way, Mister Sporting Editor, if the lads ever figger on playing a baseball marathon here it's to be hoped they don't pick on a red hot day for it. Some of them birds which park on the bridge to watch the battles would be libel to get a sun-stroke if they had to stand there for 4 hours, and mebbe the city fathers'd hafta stand a damage suit for building the bridge so close to the sun.

Well, Mac, it's been too hot to do much writing this week. The old bean don't respond none too quickly at any time and just naturally curls up and dies during a heat wave.

So here's where I drop off.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

BELMONTS WIN SOFTBALL GAME

Carruthers and Harrison Pitched Wonderful Game of Softball.

SCORE 7 TO 3.

Before one of the largest crowds of the season at Central Park, the Belmonts took the first game in the opening of the post-series by 7 to 3. This is for the right to enter the O.B.A.A. Softball play-offs.

The game was close until the third innings, then the Belmonts kept well in front.

Carruthers and Harrison pitched wonderful ball. There was little to choose between either. Carruthers allowed 7 hits, struck out 3, and walked 4. Harrison allowed 10 hits, struck out 1, and walked none.

Delahaye, Ward and F. Batten were the fielding stars. In the eighth inning Delahaye made a wonderful shoe-string catch and while on the run threw to third and doubled off Grant. Ward accepted 7 chances without an error on third, throwing out the side in the seventh.

In the eighth innings with one out the Belmonts had Green on third and Lowe on second, Harrison flied out to right, Green held his base waiting for the catch. Lowe ran as the ball was hit. On the throw in, the catcher dropped it and Lowe passed Green, making Green the third out, the Belmonts losing a chance to score.

Grant and Frick were the most effective with the bat; Grant getting a triple and a single, while Frick got a double and single. The teams:

Belmonts.—Green, m; Maudsley, 3b; Lowe, 1b; Harrison, p; Frick, 2b; Holyman, ss; Haskill, c; Baker, lf; Fanning, rf.

YANKEES DEFEAT THE WHITE SOX

Hank Severid Knocks Two Singles and Double For New York.

SHOCKER PITCHING.

NEW YORK, July 24 (Canadian Press). — The Yankees continued their heavy hitting to defeat the White Sox yesterday, 11-3. Urban Shocker worked on the Yankee Stadium protruberance, tossing them to Hank Severeid. Hank, playing his first with the Yanks, hit a double and two singles.

Cleveland kept coming at Philadelphia yesterday where the Ohioans demonstrated their worth with a 8-5 score. Philadelphia opened well with two runs and closed with three.

Detroit pounded Washington at the capital for 19 hits and won 9-6. Manager Cobb took up a good deal of the two hours and forty minutes playing time with an argument with umpires about removing a fan who had been reviling him. Nothing was done about it.

The St. Louis Browns accomplished their fourth straight win at Boston, 6-4. The victory was hard earned, Miller's single, followed by a triple by McManus, and Kamm's sacrifice being necessary to push across the winning tallies in the tenth.

MILL WINS AGAIN.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 24. — The mill won their ninth game in the association softball, while St. Marys were losing a like number, at the Agricultural grounds Thursday night.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

(By Special Arrangement With Golfers Magazine, Chicago.

JOYCE WETHERED—USING DRIVER THROUGH GREEN.

Whether the golfer is a natural long player or not, the mental attitude he should adopt in attempting to play his driver through the green will be identical in every case. There are, however, certain precautions that need to be taken.

Stand a shade more behind the ball than is customary with the driver off the tee and take up the line to the hole with exceeding care by means of the stance. Swing more easily than was your wont, and feel that your left arm is guiding the club on its way down and that, at the psychological moment but not before, the right arm, with all its straightness and cautious strength, is guiding the club through to an effortless finish.

Imagine that the ball lies at that place in the curve of the swing which is the lowest point of its arc. Sweep the ball away and avoid any movement that is in the nature of a dig or an uncertain snatch.

Finally, do not try to elevate the ball, since every driver has a shade of loft, however unapparent it may seem; nd, on the other hand, make no attempt to drive the bal in a downward direction.

If everything goes well, the result will be the shot of your dreams.

MAYS ALLOWS FOURTEEN HITS

Cincinnati Red Sox Lose To Boston in National League.

SCORE 6 TO 2.

NEW YORK, July 24 (Canadian Press).—Only three games were played in the National League yesterday and Boston, St. Louis and Chicago won, while in the same order, Cincinnati, New York and Philadelphia lost.

The Cincinnati Red Sox tried Mays on the mound and Boston found him for 14 hits to win 6-3 Wertz kept the Reds' safeties scattered. J. Smith went five times to bat for the visitors and reached first safely four times.

St. Louis downed the Giants 6-1 at St. Louis. The Cards swatted McQuillen when hits meant runs, Southworth, former Giant, smacking in four. Manager Hornsby, who was hit in the eye Thursday, was back in the game.

Chicago bunched hits off Wayland Dean in three innings and defeated Philadelphia 5-3 in the second game of the series. Charley Root, pitching smoothly, chalked up his thirteenth victory of the season. Huber, Phillies third baseman, was spiked.

The Brooklyn-Pittsburgh fracas was postponed by Jupiter Pluvius.

SCORING RULES ARE OVERLOOKED

Belleville Scribes Had Better Dig Up the Old Rule Book and Read It Through.

Just to keep the record straight Belleville scorers should understand that a wild pitch cannot be scored as a fielding error, unless the batsman reaches first base on the play. The scoring rules make that plain yet the Belleville scorers clapped an error on both Ouellet and Heckman in the box score of Wednesday's game, marring the spendid fielding record of both pitchers. And at the same time the Quinte scribes should also understand that when a base runner is retired by being hit by a batted ball the batter is entitled to first base and automatically to a hit. The rules expressly say so, but Max Swanston was robbed of a hit on this play in the Belleville score of Wednesday's game. Last but not least pitchers are not credited with assists on strike-outs.

On Tuesday evening the Kiwanis Bantams will tour to Curve Lake where they will clash with the Curve Lake Bantams.

Roy Whetung has rounded up a fast aggregation of kids from the Reserve and they expect to give Jack Dainard's Kiwanis a great battle. The game should attract a good crowd and should be a red hot fixture.

The boys will be entertained after the game to a social evening and dance.

Cars will leave Lebarr's Book Store at 2 p.m. and the boys are asked to be on hand promptly.

LEGAL ENTANGLEMENTS CHECK DEMPSEY AND TUNNEY BOUT

Lawyers Declare Clements Had Claim on Match With Wills.

HELD IN CHICAGO.

Rickard Declines To Make Known What Steps Are Being Taken.

CHICAG, July 24. — Tex Rickard's plans for holding a world's championship fight between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney in Chicago next September, came to a sudden and abrupt halt yesterday when his attorneys, after examining the contracts held by B. E. Clements, of the Chicago Coliseum Club, advised Rickard that Clements had "a fairly good claim" on the champion's services for a match with Harry Wills, the negro challenger.

Rickard, still professing every hope that he would be able to stage the Dempsey-Tunney contest as planned September 11, immediately plunged into the task of untangling the legal entanglementh involving the champions signature. He declined to reveal, however, just what steps would be taken to clear away the obstacles confronting him. He had a long session last night with the group of Chicagoans who are associated with him in the venture.

While Rickard was in conference with his attorneys Clement announced the Dempsey-Wills fight would be held in Chicago between the dates of Sept. 16 and 20, and that the proceeds would go to a Christmas charity fund raised annually by Patrick J. Carr, county treasurer.

Clements, however, failed to reveal where he would raise the $300,000 he must pay Dempsey on August 5th under the terms of his contract, and $500,000 ten days in advance of the contest.

OMEMEE, July 24. — Mr. Joseph Morden, an aged resident of Omemee, who is a carpenter by trade, fell from the loft of a small barn in town yesterday and broke his left arm at the wrist. Mr. Morden was engaged in repairing the building and accidentally fell to the ground, a distance of about eight feet. The fall was broken by a pile of straw, but in falling he struck his arm on a scantling which caused the break. His hip, too, was somewhat hurt, but he was able to walk to his home about one half a block away, after the bone was set.

Sunday School Picnic.

The annual Sunday school picnic of Trinity United Church, was held at Thurstonia on Wednesday afternoon, with the usual large crowd in attendance, notwithstanding the Conservative picnic on the same day, to which many were attracted.

Fine weather favored the occasion but the heat was so intense that part from swimming and boating, games of soft ball by the boys were the only sports indulged in. Many preferred to spend the afternoon as quietly as possible and enjoy the refreshing breeze from the lake. Phe superintendents, Mr. T. C. Ivory and Mr. H. Lamb, were in attendance as well as several other teachers and officers of the school, who were active in looking after the comfort and welfare of those present.

About 5.30 o'clock a shady spot, large enough to accommodate the large gathering was located and an abundant supply of good things were seen to disappear by the hungry picnicers.

A truck and private cars conveyed the party to the picnic grounds, the drive of about ten miles being the most enjoyable feature of the afternoon for many.

KIWANIS MAINTAIN A THOUSAND CAMPS

Under Privileged Children Get Holiday in the Great Outdoors.

CHICAGO, July 24.— Kiwanis Intenational's districts, which number twenty-nine and geographically divide the North American continent into divisional areas, with each district being under the supervision and direction of a governor and his aids, have made preparations for the annual conventions to be held in various cities in the United States and Canada this fall.

Twenty-nine conventions, with an attendance of two or three thousand at every gathering, has afforded the host cities to make extensive preparations for entertaining visitors. All district conventions will convene for two days

Convention cities are: Aanaconda, Mont.; Hot Springs, S.D.; Casper, Wyo.; Sault Ste. Marie, Mich.; Wausau, Wis.; Eugene, Ore.; Logan, Utah; Calgary, Alberta; Muskogee, Okla.; Biloxi, Miss.; New Castle, N.H.; Conneaut Lake, Pa.; Syracuse, N.Y.; Toronto, Ont.; Davenport, Iowa ;Columbus, Ohio; Charleston, W. Va.; Manion, Ind.; Trenton, N.J. Chattanooga, Tenn.; Roanoko, Va.; Augusta, Ga.; Shenandoah, Ia.; Lakeland, Fla.; Hot Springs, Ark.; Tuscaloose, Ala.; Bisbee, Ariz.; San Jose, Cal.; and Charleston, B.C.

The last one in's a.....splash! We don't know what the last one really is, but a hundred and fifty thousand under-privileged kids from Sydney to San Diego, Vancouver to Coral Gables, and cross-wise over the North American continent have cried the age-old challenge this summer.

Mother Nature never worked from a blue print when she started out to make our swimmin' holes, so over one-thousand Kiwanis camps are hidden away in the mountain and country places this year.

The Kiwanan, though he may be an executive tied down to his desk these hot months with reports, budgets and mid-summer orders has not, forgotten his swimmin' hole days. No matter where he may have wandered, memory has lent him the scenes of years gone by. The last one in, and the coldest shiver, means something to him even though he must carry on in the business world. He still recollects the thrill and wild clamor while getting out of a pair of old shoes, overalls and a shirt, and to the first one to touch bottom and bring up a handful of sand.

It is estimated that one-hundred and fifty or more children both boys and girls, will be given vacations for several weeks at each of the many camps this summer.

Just multiply that! A thousand camps by one-hunded and fifty kids each. One-hundred and fifty-thousand under-privileged children as Mother Nature's and Kiwanis' guests in the great out-of-doors this summe.

CRUSADERS ARRIVE FOR BIG MEETINGS

Representatives of the Church Army Tell of Work They Do.

Captain Casey and his seventeen crusaders from the Church Army of the Anglican Church of Great Britain arrived in this city at noon today and were welcomed at a luncheon in the Paragon.

The Crusaders left England in early May and have been conducting evangelistic meetings in Ontario and Montreal since arriving in Canada. The band is made up of eleven men and seven sisters; people who have dedicated their lives to God and His great work. The Crusaders are to speak in the various Anglican churches tomorrow and then at night there is to be a great open air service in Victoria Park at 8.00 o'clock.

Sister Bannister in a few words told of the work of the sisters and thanked those present for the warm welcome. She said she deemed it an honour to come and do work in Canada similar to that which they do in the homeland.

This is the first time the sisters have been privileged to pilgrimage with the men and while the sisters are in this city they hope that they shall be of help to the women and girls.

Captain Ward told of the work done by the men, how two of them would go out in a caravan and spend a week or two in different villages and towns, preaching the Gospel and helping the down and out. The captain concluded by saying that the Army stands emphatically for the fullest possible teaching of the doctrines of the Church of England, especially emphasizing the sacraments.

Mr. Peck, in a very few words, told of being confirmed in St. John's Church and being one of the first members of St. Luke's. He laid emphasis on the work that the women do in the Church, and wished the Crusaders success in their sojourn in this city.

Mr. Bousfield welcomed the Crusaders for the clergy, and he said he hoped that at the end of this crusade that there would be many men and women so inspired so as to take up this work in Canada.

Rev. J. L. Hughes is in charge of the crusade while they are here, and it is through his untiring efforts that they have come to Peterboro.

MAY BUILD LARGE APARTMENT HOUSE

For Exclusive Use of Vatican Employees—End Threats of Strike.

ROME, July 24 (United Press).—Pope Pius XI may build a large apartment building near St. Peter's, to be used exclusively by employees of the Vatican and to end their threats of a strike.

Since a recent temporary walk-out of Vatican gardeners threatens to spread to other workers in the employ of the Catholic Church, His Holiness has given considerable attention to claims that his staff was under paid. If the apartment plan is carried out as suggested, it is believed the cost of living of dissatisfied Vatican workers can be reduced.

Hudson Motor Car Coy's $10,000,000 Body Plant

Tremendous Economies, Absolute Accuracy, and Perfection Made Possible.

The automobile industry's largest single body-building unit—and not a single body-builder employed in it! That is the unique situation in the $10,000,000 body plant which the Hudson Motor Car Co. has erected to manufacture its new all-steel Essex coaches.

Yet the accuracy and the finish of the work done on these bodies by modern machinery is described by the industry's experts as actually superior to that of the hand-working body artisans. And more than that, the Hudson organization makes the flat out statement that the new Essex Coach body is as rugged and long-lived a body as can be found in the world, price regardless. "Rigid as a steel building," is a phrase describing it.

"The men employed in this Essex plant are as fine types of working men as America affords," said C. L. Brewer, Hudson-Essex distributor," but they are modern in that they let mammoth machines perform the heaviest and most complicated tasks.

"In the manufacture of a cowl, a door, or one corner of the body, for instance, the most vital operation is performed by giant presses. A whole cowl is pressed out by one tremendous blow. The cost of the big machine which does this represents a fortune. Probably the dies themselves cost from $10,000 to $15,000. In all the man tending the machine probably has at his command $75,000 to $100,000 worth of facilities. The weight of the machinery is more than 160 tons; the plunger of the press exerts a force of 400 tons.

"It can readily be seen that with such facilities, the various parts can be manufactured to absolute accuracy, and that when there is a sufficient volume of business tremendous economies are possible, when compared with the former methods. As similar mechanical devices are used in every part of the body, the aggregate savings make possible the building of an exceptionally fine-quality body at a very favorable price. These facts are easily understood by Americans because our high wages are made possible by such machines and methods. They explain the strength and quality of the body as well.

Bill Wiggington Tells of Seeing Mysterious Figure on Shore.

(Special to The Examiner).

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 24. — With a courage unfailing still, George Waller and "Bill" Wiggington agreed to return to the scene of their dreadful adventure on Balsam Lake to give the seekers what direction they can for the recovery of the bodies of their fated chums whose lives were lost there.

George Waller, accompanied by his father and "Bill" Wiggington, with his older brother Harry, drove in two cars from Toronto last evening, arriving here in time to sleep the night before facing the ordeal of the peaceful blue lake this morning.

They met yesterday evening for the first time since they dropped exhausted in their camp. Waller, who is a fully grown boy, impulsively threw his arm around "Bill" Wiggington's shoulders, and the two turned aside for a moment of wordless greeting. It is a very grim, yet a very noble, task that faces them to-day. Across the lake moved the slow little skiffs of the draggers. At any moment something may be found, a cry may go up. Yet these two lads are performing with the mysterious reserve of youth what they deem to be their duty to the eleven tragic homes that keep vain lights burning through these long nights.

On the drive up, which consumed three hours, the two survivors sat side by side, saying nothing. Their wish not to be questioned was faithfully respected. They had nothing to say to each other, save to exclaim with strange inconsequence at the scenes along the road. To the memory which flooded back upon them, at this their first meeting since the tragedy, they seemed to shut their eyes. A fact which seemed to puzzle them out of the mass of detail which has been reported they referred to as they rode, speaking with painful care lest they burst open the flood gates of talk. "The wind was behind us as we came down the lake," said "Bill" Wiggington.

"Yes, south-west," agreed George Waller. "When we passed the Point it struck us sidewise."

Saw a Figure.

To his brother Harry, "Bill" Wiggington has confided one strange thing. When he staggered on the sand beach with his three lone companions, "Bill" saw, or thought he saw, a figure standing there watching him in the gloom.

"What sort of figure?"

"He said it looked like a farmer boy," said Harry. "But it was nobody."

AIRPLANE SIGHTS

cial Air Service had had to return to Toronto last night but under his instructions Major Thompson carried a reporter again this morning as observer. We were in the air an hour. From a flying point of view the flying was perfect but from a duty point of view it was rather trying. Keeping one's head over the side for an hour with one's eyes strained to the limit of concentration in an attempt to pierce the monotonous black sheet below that continuously slid along at a sixty mile an hour speed was trying to a severe degree. An hour of this was just about all we could stand and we came down at eight o'clock.

As a matter of fact during the last half hour the wind had freshened and once more the surface of the lake was wrinkled with curls that sometimes broke into white caps. This had the effect of making it opaque; trying to look through it was like trying to look through a pane of corrugated glass.

But in the first half hour all of us decided that something had been achieved. For all up and down the stretch of waters lying between Grand Island, Long Point and Indian Head up which we coursed, circled and wheeled enlessly at an average height of four hundred feet, we could glimpse at intervals the surface with sufficient clearness to make out the shelves and holes and to even see at times occasional tangles of snags and driftwood. The angle of vision was limited. When one was looking over the side to the west with the sun behind, the lake was black. And when one was flying due south with the sun rising in the East straight in front of one's vision, the silver sheet on the water was blinding.

Could See Bottom

But when we struck a course somewhat Southwest with the sun slightly on our tail but lighting up the depths below, it was possible to see with startling clarity.

It was when on this course that I first sighted the semblance of a body on a line that ran between the Long Point Camp and a point somewhat south of the middle of Grand Island, very considerably south of the area in which the dragging of the last three days had been carried on. Immediately I pointed to Major Thompson, anxiously trying to keep my eye on the spot so hard to mark in the fast receding water. He banked at once and swung in a circle. We curved and curved and recrossed and cut the spot as exactly as possible many many times. Personally I saw nothing further. I could not pick up the presumed body again. But both Thompson and Reid definitely saw something which seemed to coincide with my own observation.

During our flight, below us in a motor boat, cruised the two survivors in an attempt to reconstruct the course of the war canoe last Tuesday evening. They were constantly in our vision, but we were too intent on the business in hand more than to notice them casually.

Observations Agree

But after our location of this spot we glided down and spoke to them. And we found to our gratification that it was in the area which they had decided the tipping over of the canoe had taken place and where Shea-Butcher and the other boys were drowned.

This was at the end of the first half hour. We took the air again but while we were down the wind had risen enough to change the whole surface of the lake, and the keenest of our eyes had been blunted by weariness.

So we landed. "If we could only get an absolutely calm half an hour," said Major Thompson, when we had climbed ashore, "I have not the slightest doubt but that we could see absolutely definitely."

I have not any doubt that we could. In the meantime checking up with the story of the brought back survivors, enough has ben discovered to change the efforts of the draggers to a restricted area, at least a mile south of the most southerly fringe of the big unchartered region of waste water in which they were grappling yesterday and hopes are high that there will be results.

ADVERTISE IN THE EXAMINER

SEARCHERS WERE A MILE AWAY

searchers. George Waller's father and Bill Wiggington, his brother and two reporters were their companions in the early morning quest.

We left shore before six o'clock and steered for the camp from which we took at reduced speed the course taken by the canoe. The two boys directed A. J. Gould, whose motor boat was used, to points more north. We then told the boys where Cobconk lay at least twenty degrees south of where were were pointing. "They told us when we got back to camp," said George Waller, "that we had taken the wrong course, but this is the course we took for that far bay yonder."

Further and further we left land behind, the two boys watching the headlands about, which were surely burned deep upon their memories.

They squinted their eyes so as to try and recapture the conditions of sunset under which they last saw this land. Overhead the Government plane, with an experienced observer aboard, wheeled about watching us. At last we got to the point where the boys agreed the canoe, coming into the cross crop of the narrows past Long Point had upset. "Right about here," said George Waller, "we went over, and we made two separate and organized attempts to shove the canoe while swimming towards Long Point. Within a hundred yards or so of here, most of the boys sunk."

At this stage, the areoplane came down and landed near us and Griffin said that they had observed quite definitely an object on the bottom quite near where we circled and another object either floating or half suspended in the water half a mile further along.

Capt. Lang then joined us in another boat carrying a signal buoy to mark the spot, the boys having now got over the emotional shock of resisting the scene, both the Wiggington boys under the strain of knowing their brother lay somewhere under the blue water on which we slid securely in the fast boat. Capt. Lang took charge and was again showed detail by detail the survey the boys had made. He asked numerous technical questions in fine details and then took charge of the new dragging operations.

"So far," said Capt. Lang, "we have been operating at least a mile away from where the bodies sank. There is, of course, a decided current here, and I know that when the boys say they were shoving the canoe towards Long Point, they were making no headway at all, but drifting further out all the time. A change of wind undoubtedly occurred perhaps one hour after the upset, so I shall drag a wide course from this spot forward."

The life-crew have got their water drag working successfully, and the combing of the bottom, aided by the down-looking aeroplane, will go forward faster. The boys, after concluding their work, returned to Fenelon Falls, and are being driven to Toronto.

Lapointe Repudiates Charge That He Took Joy-Sail On 'Margaret'

Former Minister of Justice S ends Telegram to Mr. Meighen Denying Truth of State ment Made By A. J. Doucet at Meetin g in St. John.

PRIME MINISTER DISCU SSES REMOVAL OF MARITIME P ROVINCES DISABILITIES

OTTAWA, July 26 (Canadian Press).—Mr. Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, has sent to Mr. Meighen a denial of the charge that he was one of the party on the steamer Margaret. The text of the telegram follows:

"Canadian Press reports Mr. A. J. Doucet (of Kent, N.B.). as having dealt with the customs investigation at your meeting in St. John Saturday, and as having used the following language in connection with an alleged trip of the preventive steamer Margaret:

"'They called at Quebec and took the Minister of Justice and his friends, and they had a joy-sail on the St. Lawrence as far as Anticosti and the Magdalen Islands, acros s to the north shore, and went up the Saguenay, and all told they were six weeks away.'

"This statement as far as it relates to me is utterly untrue, I never took part in any such trip as described by Mr. Doucet nor indeed did I ever travel at any time on the steamer Margaret.

"You and I have been colleagues in Parliament for nearly twenty years. In all our controversies I believe I have always fought fairly and honorably.

"In view of our long relations, both parliamentary and personal, and in view of what public men owe to one another, I think I have the right to ask you to repudiate a statement which with the other particulars alleged by Mr. Doucet, constitutes an unequivocal calumny, uttered in your presence by one who is associated with you in your tour throughout New Brunswick."

Meighen's Tour

BRIDGEWATER, N.S., July 26 (Canadian Press).—Over highways and by-ways, Premier Meighen Saturday carried his campaign along the southern shore of Nova Scotia. He crossed from St. John to Digby by boat, motored from Digby to Liverpool, motored thence to Bridgewater, Chester and Halifax, on his way to Sydney where, today, he is expected to give special attention to the coal and steel industries. He spoke briefly in Digby and held a couple of meetings in Queen, Lunenburg, the constituency represented in the last parliament by William Duff, Deputy Speaker of the House.

For Mr. Duff, the Prime Minister had caustic reference. "I know of no virtues of your present member," Mr. Meighen said, "which entitle him to any special consideration at the hands of the people of Lunenburg. A Liberal Government will be pretty black, will be convicted not once, twice, thrice or a hundred times before it will ever be deserted because of its blackness by William Duff. I think the people, not only of Nova Scotia, but of the Dominion will watch Lunenburg in this election."

Mr. Meighen did not make special reference to the keynote speech of Mr. Mackenzie King, but of the constitutional issue, arising from the refusal of the Governor-General to grant dissolution to Mr. King, the Prime Minister said: "It is a bogus question. It is fiction. It is worse—but the word I was about to use should not be used before any audience. It is nonsense. It is a humbug."

Assistance for Coal Transportation.

The Prime Minister pressed his policy for public assistance in the shipment of basic Maritime products to the Central provinces; and carried it further. He declared that the intention of his Government was to commence with the big basic products; and the outstanding basic product was coal. He was prepared to ask the whole Dominion to assist the shipment of Maritime coal to the markets of Central Canada.

"We should leave to the Railway Commission," explained Mr. Meighen, "the duty of specifying the rate in regard to each commodity. But after the commission has done that, then the Dominion of Canada should bear a share of the rate on basic products from the Maritimes on the one hand and from the far West, on the other, to the Central Provinces markets."

Challenge to W. L. M. King

Mr. Mackenzie King had denounced that policy in Ontario and Quebec. "Let him come here and say if it is unfair to Ontario and Quebec. If he will not say that, don't take from the answer that he has got a Maritime commission to find out. When a better proposal than ours comes from any source, I am willing to yield to it. But I am not willing to yield to any man who has not at least some proposal as an alternative.

"What we advocate in Opposition, we stand ready, in office, to put into practice.

"We must reach the objective of carrying the freight of Canada, not only of imports but also of export trade, from the ports of our own country. We must not only reach that objective, but must make any sacrifice to get to it, save this: That we must not sacrifice the trade itself. We cannot go to the extent of losing the market, but short of that any party ought to be able to go and, in my judgment, in justice to this province, any party is bound to go."

Alleges Discrimination Against Cape Breton

Mr. Meighen asserted that the "blighting hand of the fickle fiscal policy" of the King Government had discriminated against the Island of Cape Breton, "and brought one of the great basic industries of this province, to the very precipice of ruin." He charged that the King Government had administered the customs law merely with the objective of gratifying the cupidity and graft of its friends. He admitted that dishonesty in public administration could not be absolutely stopped. Under a Conservative administration, there would no doubt be some dishonesty, but dishonesty would not be permitted to eat into the vitals of the country. "Whenever it appears," added Mr. Meighen, "its head will be cut off."

Doucet on Customs Inquiry

And on the customs probe also A. J. Doucet, went into the cruise of the steamer Margaret. Mr. Doucet was a Conservative member of the customs inquiry commission. At various meetings since Mr. Meighen opened his campaign, Mr. Doucet has been giving some hitherto unpublished sidelights on the probe. He has asserted that, in 1923, the customs protective steamer Margaret was taken from her patrol on Northumberland Straits for a six-week's cruise on the St. Lawrence with 20 cases of whiskey on board, 200 dozens bottles of beer and an orchestra.

Mr. Doucet said that in St. John on the previous day he had mention Hon. Ernest Lapointe as hav-

CABINET COUNCIL WILL MEET TO-DAY

Consider Imperial Government's Proposal To Postpone Conference.

OTTAWA, July 26 (Canadian Press).—After a week of extreme quiet, there are signs of renewed activity in Cabinet circles. Council has been called for to-day and a number of things which have been piling up will be disposed of. Further supply probably will be provided through the medium of Governor-General's warrant. This becomes necessary because Parliament dissolved before the supply bill passed the Commons.

Another matter which is to be considered is the proposal from the British Government that the Imperial Conference be postponed from October 5 to October 19. It is believed that the postponement is proposed because of the Canadian elections, to give the new administration, whichever side is returned, more time to arrange for Canada's representation at the conference. Canada's answer to London will almost certainly be acquiescent in the proposal to postpone.

The Cabinet Council will probably be attended by Sir Henry Drayton, acting Premier; Sir George Perley, Secretary of State; Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Postmaster-General; Hon. Dr. S. F. Tolmie, Minister of Agriculture; Hon. J. D. Chaplin, Minister of Trade and Commerce, and Hon. E. B. Ryckman, Minister of Public Works.

Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King leaves for Sarnia to-night to open his campaign in Western Ontario.

COMMONS HONOR BERNARD SHAW

To Be Entertained To Dinner To-day in Celebration of Seventieth Birthday.

MANY TRIBUTES.

LONDON, July 26—George Bernard Shaw, who will be seventy today and is as Shavian as ever, will be the honored guest at a dinner in the House of Commons, which is expected to add still another controversy to the long list of those which have sizzled and sparkled as side lights to his literary career.

It was proposed that Shaw's birthday speech be broadcast but the British broadcasting company, which is something of a government monopoly, undertook to extract a pledge from him not to make controversial utterances, and, as might be expected, he declined any such peldge for his seventieth birthday party—or his eightieth, ninetieth or one hundredth. So the speech will not be broadcast but the public is awaiting with even more interest than otherwise what G.B.S. will say, for one phase of his career which is never dull, is joshing the English in particular and the world in general—making them like it and pay him handsomely for his banter and repartee.

The newspapers are filled with columns of adulation and critical analysis of Shaw's remarkable personality and genius, with many tributes from abroad.

German and Dutch journals have issued special Shaw numbers, while a bulky, handsomely bound volume delivered at the famous Shaw flat in Adelphi Terrace, contained greetings of one hundred eminent German statesmen, authors, musicians, actors and critics, including Dr. Stresemann, the foreign minister, Prof. Einstein, of Relativty fame, and Richard Strauss, the musician.

Although the fire of his Celtic genius still blazes with all the vividness of youth, as proved by the general acceptance of his most recent play, "Saint Joan," as his best, there is a great change in the personal appearance of the man who will sit at the festive board, presided over by former Premier Ramsay MacDonald, with intellectuals, distinuished government officials and famous literary lights ranged along the table.

CHURCHILL ASKS BORAH TO SHOW VILLIFICATION

Replies To U. S. Senator's Statement About His Speeches.

"UNCLE SHYLOCK."

Senator Says Churchill is Trying To Brand United States.

LONDON, July 26 (Canadian Press). — Right Hon. Winston Churchill, Chancellor of the Exchequer, shown Senator Borah's statement that he was conducting a "campaign of villification" against the United States, designed to secure the cancellation of war debts, is quoted by the Exchange Telegraph as saying:

"I invite the Senator to quote any passage from any speech or written statement on which he relies to justify such a complaint."

Senator Borah, chairman of the enate Foreign Relations Committee, in a formal statement on Saturday, charged that Chancellor Churchill had sought by recent utterances in Parliament ao apply military tactics to the international situation and to conduct a "Gallipoli campaign for cancellation."

Villification had always been a part of military strategy, the Senator said, and now it had been brought into play to brand the United States as "Uncle Shylock," and the American people as a nation "void of all sense of humanity or correct principles."

Railway Switch Tracks Are Carried Into River

MEMPHIS, Tenn., July 26 (Canadian Press).—A cave-in on the east bank of the Mississippi River here yesterday afternoon carried away practically all of the property of the West Kentucky Coal Co. The damage was estimated at $250,000. At 5 o'clock the bank was still crumbling, carrying switch tracks owned by the St. Louis-San Francisco Railway in the river.

WORKERS CONTINUE THEIR TRIPS UP AND DOWN LAKE WITH DRAGS THOUGH TASK SEEMS HOPELESS

Not Even Shred of Clothing Found, Fred McNeely Reports, After Working All Day Sunday on Lake—Asks For Men To Row.

BOYS CAN'T PICK LANDMARKS VERY ACCU RATELY, HE EXPLAINS

Bodies Found Nearly Mile Apart—Airplane Continues Its Journeys Across Lake—Four or Five Boats in Use By Men Searching For Corpses.

(By Examiner Staff Reporter.)

ROSEDALE, BALSAM LAKE, July 26.—"It sems a hopeless task," Fred McNeely told The Examiner last night on his return from dragging all day on the lake. He had been sent up by Acting-Mayor Nagle E. Phelan in response to a request for assistance, and started his duties yesterday morning. "We have not found even a shred of their clothes," he continued, "and have even yet no idea of where they went down. We don't know the direction in which they were going, or how far out they had got when they upset. It's hard for boys to pick out landmarks they have only seen once, especially when they were busy paddling and probably not paying much attention to the shore-line. What we want is to get Lambden here. He was steering the canoe and he is a mature man. I think he will be here tomorrow."

Telling of his work, Mr. McNeely said the boat he has been rowing bears one end of an eighty-five foot deep sea drag. While he rows, another man holds the rope to feel whether it catches on anything. The drag is taken on a three-mile stretch, the length of Grand Island, and at times the going is very hard.

There were only four or five boats engaged in the search yesterday, Mr. McNeely said, no others being available for searchers who would gladly have assisted. It was the drag on which he was working that brought Heale's body to the surface yesterday.

Twelve Hours' Work

The Peterobrough representative in the operations came ashore at 8.30 last night after a long day's work that started at 8 o'clock. His boat stayed at the scene of the accident, as nearly as can be judged by the imperfect identification given it, until the airplane had made its circling inspection without sighting any bodies.

The airplane took off from the little bay which is its home while it remains at Balsam Lake, at 7.10 last night. Taxi-ing toward Rosedale, it turned in a wide sweep, speeded up, and rose gently from the water across Grand Island. Between Grand Island and Long Point it circled for an hour, now and then dipping close to the water for a closer look at something that attracted the attention of the observer. At one time it sighted a log, and landed on the water to investigate.

A request was made by telephone last night to acting-Mayor Nagle Phelan to send up two more strong men to row the boats that are expected to be available today.

Body Brought Ashore

The body of Gordon Heale, the second to be recovered, was brought ashore here about noon yesterday.

MANY DEATHS FROM ALCOHOL MAY BE CAUSE OF REVELATION OF WORKINGS OF BOOTLEGGERS

Hamilton Man Is Held, Facing Charge of Manslaughter.

EVADES QUESTIONS.

Ontario Government Starts United Drive To Clear Up Situation.

(By Alex. Stark—Copyright, Reproduction or Refyling Forbidden).

OAKVILLE, Ont., July 25. — Twenty-nine deaths in highway towns and cities from Buffalo to Toronto, fourteen of them in Ontario, may rend the veil which has hitherto covered the operation of large scale bootleggers.

At present one man, Bert D'Angelo, of Hamilton, faces a charge of manslaughter. His two alleged agents, Maybee and Gill, both lie dead, and so will never reveal just what their role may have been. Chief interest, therefore, centres around D'Angelo, who was arrested in Hamilton, and is at present being held in the Milton Jail. In an interview to-day D'Angelo threw some light on the ramifications of the bootleg machine.

Late Saturday afternoon D'Angelo, who had been arrested in Hamilton on a charge of manslaughter in connection with the handling of the death-dealing drink, was brought to Oakville by Chief of Police Kerr. He appeared before Magistrate J. H. Shields and was immediately remanded for eight days until August 2nd. D'Angelo was held in the Oakville Jail over night, and this afternoon at two o'clock, accompanied by Chief of Police Kerr and the writer, he was conveyed to the county jail at Milton, where he awaits trial.

D'Angelo is a dark-skinned Italian with black hair and deep black eyes. Though short in height, he has a lithe, athletic appearance. He has gleaming white teeth that contrast sharply with his swarthy complexion. He is bright and cheerful by nature, and has an engaging smile.

Seems Unworried.

D'Angelo was dressed as a laborer

ONE STANDARD OF COINAGE FOR THREE NATIONS

British Banker Suggests Belgium, France and Italy Combine.

TO SETTLE FINANCES.

Matter Will Be Discussed at Bankers' Conference at Antibes.

PARIS, July 26.—A single monetary standard for western European countries with depreciated currencies, it is reported, will be proposed by Montague Norman, Governor of the Bank of England, to Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the United States Treasury, if they meet in France. It is considered probable they will meet within a few days at Deauville.

Mr. Norman believes it will be easier to stabilize European currencies if France, Belgium and Italy settle on a common economic plan. It is understood he has been preaching this to Benjamin Strong, Governor of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York, in their conferences at Antibes, and there is considerable agitation in the three states concerned over this method of settling their finances. As all have distinct economic situations they hold they cannot conform to a single standard.

The informal conference among the world's leading bankers already explained in Mail and Emipre, will probably begin, however, with discussion of the possibilities of taking over German reparations securities on railroads and industry as the basis for a huge European credit for all Germany's creditors. This affects most countries with depreciated currencies and would also be welcomed by England.

Four Bodies Taken From Watery Grave By Searchers Today

Work of Dragging Parties To-day is Productive of Results—All Are Toronto Boys—One Is Shea-Butcher, Camp Director.

HUNDREDS VISIT SITE OF CAMP IMPRESSIV E SERVICE CONDUCTED

BALSAM LAKE, Ont., July 26—(Special to The Examiner)—The efforts of the parties engaged in the search at Balsam Lake for the eleven young men drowned last Tuesday were rewarded today by the recovery of four bodies, all of which have been identified. They are John Wigginton, Oliver Mardell, Joseph Edwards and A. R. Shea-Butcher, the leader of the party.

(By Examiner Staff Reporter.)

LONG POINT, BALSAM LAKE, July 26.—The site of the ill-fated St. Andrew's Brotherhood Camp was crowded yesterday as it never was crowded before. Early in the morning the people started to arrive, and by noon there were more than a hundred cars parked in the open space around the kitchen. At three o'clock, with an influx of Toronto people, the number of cars was increased to nearly three hundred, and fully eight hundred people wandered around the camp or stood on the shore near the pier.

And yet, with all the crowd watching, only five boats were engaged in dragging. There were many willing helpers on shore, but no boats were available to take them out.

It was, for the most part, a quiet and awed assemblage. Around the canoe people thronged all day long, discussing its merits and demerits, wondering how fifteen boys could crush themselves into its apparently narrow confines; commenting on this, that, and the other feature of what appears to be an ordinary war canoe. Here George Johnstone, of Port Perry, criticized the heighth of the thwarts from the floor, tending, he said, to make the craft "tippy." Donald Walker, Toronto, who said he had been paddling such canoes since he was a boy, could see nothing different in this craft from those to which he had been accustomed. Thomas Rodgers, also of Toronto, said the canoe is too deep. Thus, throughout the day, a shifting group continued to investigate and comment on the craft.

And here on the grassy slopes from which the boys had gone smiling to their unseen death; beside the canoe which had treacherously or accidentally or storm-driven thrown them into the cold waters of the lake; surrounded by hundreds who were helpless to aid but ready to pray, Rev. W. F. Wrixon of Coboconk conducted an impressive memorial service. A formal service of remembrance will take place at Coboconk on August 8, but it cannot match in grandeur of impressiveness that which took place yesterday on the shore of Balsam Lake, still carrying in its depths the bodies of nine of the victims.

The war canoe was the preacher's rostrum, the benches at which the boys had sat, and the grassy slopes of the camp grounds were the people's pews, the canopy of heaven was the only roof, unhindering the prayers that were uttered for the consolation of sorrowing parents; and in the pregnant silences that punctuated the service was heard the doleful song of the lapping waves that had rolled over the bodies of the victims the lake had claimed.

THE WEATHER.

Sunday's highest temperature was 74 degrees; lowest 54 degrees — an ideal day with a gentle breeze and cloudless skies. Last night the thermometer got down to 44 degrees. In this section of Ontario the night temperature averages lower than many other sections. This is owing to some extent, to its height above sea-level (between 700 and 800 feet) and to other causes. The result is we are seldom subjected to the discomfort of sleepless nights owing to oppressive heat. This is a matter we may not appreciate as we should, but is invariably remarked upon by visitors from a distance, and especially by visitors from the large American cities.—W. P.

MANY CANDIDATES BEING NOMINATED

Conservatives Lead in Placing Men in the Field.

TORONTO, July 26.—(Canadian Press).—Forty-eight candidates will have been placed in field for Ontario's 82 seats in House of Commons by tonight, including 25 Conservatives, 19 Liberals, two Progressives, one Liberal-Progressive and one Liberal-Labor-Progressive. W. J. Taylor, publisher of Woodstock Sentinel Review, was chosen by a joint convention of Liberals and Progressives of Oxford North and Malcolm Lang was nominated for Temiskaming South at a convention in which Liberals, Labor and Progressives were represented.

In addition to the candidates already nominated, conventions have been arranged by the Conservatives in 26 ridings by Liberals in 13, by Progressives in five and by Labor in three.

In Peterborough Churches

PARK STREET BAPTIST

In the Park street Baptist church, before an intensely interested audience, Rev. N. R. McLeod discussed the question "Should a Gospel Preacher Shoot a Man in Self-Defence?" — Exodus 20, 13, Matt. 5, 39; John 18, 36.

The question and the message of this evening arises out of a shooting tragedy of a week ago when Dr. Norris, pastor of a church in Fort Worth, Texas, shot, it is claimed, a would-be assailant. It should be observed that Dr. Norris is not a pastor of a regular Baptist Church—himself and his church having been read out of the local association of Baptist churches as well as out of the convention of Baptist churches for the State of Texas. This action was taken some three years ago.

My thought this evening is not to discuss prematurely Dr. Norris act, nor is it to be partizan in any way. Probably the most sane thing which I have yet seen written was that by Father Burke of Toronto, in which he asked that we should refrain from making any judgment in the matter until the facts are all in. This should be a universal and fundamental principle in all cases of court procedure. Too often, even in Canada, when such tragedies occur, there is an immediate attempt to prejudice the public mind before those responsible for investigation and judgment have had a chance to do their work. What we need in Canada is more thorough and impartial court investigation and administration, and less interference through judgment by the general public.

In the case in question I should like to remind you that we live in Canada under Canadian law, while this shooting took place in Texas under Texan law. This simple fact makes it impossible for us Canadians to form any judgment at the present time, since we know neither the facts nor the state law governing the facts.

May I make this further observation in passing. I think it is only fair. I had the pleasure of meeting a Dr. Johnson, a Presbyterian minister from North Carolina, in the Empress this week. He tells me that it is his impression that there is no state in the union where the majesty of the law is more thoroughly recognized and appreciated than the State of Texas. That may change our impression of at least this one of the southern states.

And just here in passing I should like to plead with our civilized Christian conscience for the abolition of a too prevalent carrying of fire arms. It may be that those great presidents of the United States who were assassinated would have filled out their presidential duties had there been a much more stringent and rigid regulation re the possession and carrying of revolvers. Many a man who has not the courage to strike a man with his fists will resort to the cheap, cowardly way of drawing a pistol.

And now I want you to think with me this evening of the moral aspects of the Sixth Commandment, "Thou shalt do no murder."

Our text is from the Decalogue, or as we more commonly call them "The Ten Commandments.",

These ten laws form the heart of Gods regulations and restrictions on His people of old. They natually fall into two parts:

1. Man's relation to God—first four.

2. Man's relation to man—last six.

Our text you will observe is the second law in the second table. Of the ten laws—or words, as they were originally called. This sixth has to do with the sacredness and continuance of human life.

As we enter into the study of the making of this commandment and the right of one man to take the life of another, however he may take that life, we must first turn to

The Origin of Life.

What is the origin of human life? This is porbably the most inviting and fascinating question of the day. In Gen. 2:17, you will find the one and only answer which will satisfy, i.e., "Jehovah God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul." There are here three simple statements relating three simple facts:

1: God formed man of the dust of the earth.

2: God breathed into his nostrils.

3: And man became a living soul.

Such is the origin of man as recorded in the ancient documents. Infinite Deity was his Maker. God not only made man but He made him for Himself. Since that is true there is at least one logical conclusion, i.e., God, the Giver of Life is the only one who has the right to take life. After that little life is once conceived in the sacred precincts of the mother's being, until in later years it goes with white head and bowed form to the grave, unless perchance it goes in earlier years, it belongs to God. Hence the murder of many an unborn baby. Hence the murder of infanticide as well as suicide. And we may be advised in passing to remark the many varied forms of murder today.

There is wilful murder in a passion, suicide, infanticide, war—and of war Russel Lowell said;

Ez for war, I call it murder,
There you have it plain and flat;
I don't want to go no furder
Than my Testyment fer that.
God has sed so plump an' fairly,
It's ez long ez it is broad,
An' you've got to get up airly
Ef you want to take in God.
Make the thing a grain more right;
'Taint a follerin' your bellwethers
Will excuse you in His sight.
Ef you take a sword an dror it,
An' go stick a feller thru,
Guv'ment aint to answer for it,
God'll send the bill to you.

And we continue with the classification of murders. We were speaking of war, there follows drunkeness, and murderous occupations.

We have been discussing our text from the standpoint of the origin of human life, the source of our being, and we are compelled to say that from the viewpoint of God's creation and plan for us no man has the right to take another man's life and when he does so he is not only committing a civil crime, but is striking at the very government of God Himself. Life is of God. To take it as to give it is God's own divine prerogative.

We think of our text in the second place from the viewpoint of the sacredness and sanctity of human life. If what we have said is true, if life is a divine creation, mysterious and magnificent in its genesis and possibilities, it is never, therefore, to be taken at the will of man who cannot fully comprehend its meaning and mission.

When you come there you must think of the issues that are involved in death, and especially when a soul is hurriedly dispatched into eternity through murder. You must admit that God is the only One who knows when we have lived our full and allotted span. There is only one safe course to pursue, and that is to live every day as though that day were the last. Therefore, because of the sacredness of human work and life and destiny no man has a right to take the life of another. This priceless casket of unknown sacred potentialities must remain in the care of God.

The teaching, spirit and example of Jesus.

If you will turn now to the spirit, teaching and example of the Master of all life you will discover that Jesus has given us safe guidance and a sure answer to the question before us. The teaching of Jesus everywhere is opposed to the use of violence even against those who oppose us. In Luke 9, 54-55, he reproved James and John for proposing to take venegeance on some inhospitable Samaritan villages. Moreover, in His Sermon on the Mount He distinctly declared, "Resist not him that is evil, but whosoever smiteth thee on the right cheek turn to him the other also." Matt. 5, 39.

Furthermore, when before Pilate he said, "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight."

The spirit and example of Jesus is as clear as his teaching. We will take but one passage, which again is part of his teaching, but in this case we observe how this teaching is manifested in his life and example to us. In Matt. 5, 44, we read, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." I submit to you that Jesus lived out that teaching and command in his own ministry. Most of all when in the shadow of the Cross he did not try to save or defend himself against a maddened Jewish mob, or a trained Roman soldiery—even though there was the most dire plot against his life—but rather while on the Cross prayed that his crucifiers might be forkiven.

This spirit of Jesus has been the life and example of Christians throughout the history of the church. Livingstone did not go against wild man and wild beast, but he went armed with the spirit of love and power of God. When Father Chiniquy was told that if he did not quit preaching the Gospel, he would be shot, he went on unarmed, continuing to preach the grace and love of God in the power and demonstration of the Spirit.

Our theme tonight concerns life, your life and my life. We are thinking of our right to live and let live. In this closing moment we turn our thought to our own life in God through Jesus Christ our Lord. Think will you of the coming of Christ in this great saving mission. He came not to destroy life, but to save life; not to take life, but to give life.

Life is death if severed
From thy throbbing heart.

My appeal to you now is to come into the very largest consciousness of God in your own soul and to leave all with Him. There are many issues in life and many crisis and many times when we need defence. Think especially of the attacks which are made upon the citadel of your soul when you would be overwhelmed by Satan. In these times, in all times, in great crisis and small crisis there is but one defence and that not our self defence, but the defence which of God.

Then are we able to say with the Psalmist, "God is my refuge and strength, a very present help in time of trouble." Commit yourselves unto God.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The carnelian is today's talismanic gem. The ancients believed that it brought good luck in love affairs—indeed they claimed that at this time no lover would be successful unless he wore this stone.

Today's natal stone is the coral. It protects those who travel, especially if the journey be by water. The ancients believed that to those born on an anniversary of this date, the coral brought unabating vitality and the power to attract the opposite sex.

Yellow is today's color and attracts prosperity to those who wear it.

Today's lucky flower is the thistle.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

ONLY A DANCER.

"He could dance."

What an epitaph with which to seal the memory of a man. I never had seen Barry Cornwall, but I knew he must have had something in him or a girl like Joan would never have cared for him at all.

She told me he had all the marks of distinguished ancestry, and if that were so his mother had probably been very proud of him. He had told Joan that his mother had died while he was away at war and he had whispered, "I think her heart was broken when she saw me go."

He went away very gay and brave and served his country to the end; and he came back a poor, maimed thing whose only eulogy must be, "He could dance."

I looked at Joan Meredith, dainty and sweet in a frock whose simplicity spelled money. Truly I had learned a lot since I had come to this city; then, although I perhaps knew more about good taste in dress than most girls who live in small towns, even I had to learn that there was a kind of plainness than which nothing was more expensive.

Elegant simplicity! One of the ambitions that I had acquired was that at sometime I would be able to have a suit like Joans'.

Restaurants such as the Beaux Arts were good schools to learn the difference between a flashy young woman who dressed to attract attention, and one of the real smart girls who wore her plain little frock with an air that made it stand out like a tall slender lily among a lot of brilliant weeds.

I rather smiled at myself for thinking these thoughts while such a tragedy as Joan's was being enacted about me.

Again I understood that my silly brain has always refused to think too long about trouble. Perhaps it was because I was still so young, and everything that I saw or did gave me such a kick.

Now, however, I was brought back by a strangled sob from Joan.

In a whirl of remorse, I put my arm about her.

"You must pull yourself together, dear," I said. "We must go immediately and find Lela. Think of the trouble she is in."

"But she didn't love him as much as I, Judy," asserted Joan.

"How do you know, dear?"

"Well, she must have known that Barry was at least flirting with me, and she did not even appear jealous."

"You can never know, Joan, what is in another woman's heart. She knew there was a baby coming. She knew they must have money to live. She knew you could give it to her. She knew that if Barry could keep on dancing with you until after the baby came, it would be a great thing. Perhaps, my dear, she loved him so much that she trusted him."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

GOETHE AND CHARLOTTE BUFF.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

A beautiful fair-haired, blue-eyed girl of nineteen, already betrothed to another, was Goethe's love at twenty-three. Charlotte or "Lotte," Buff, captured the heart of the immortal author of "Faust". Goethe knew that he was an intruder and Lotte knew that she was not doing right in encouraging Goethe, but the glamor of the poet's love was too overpowering and things went along in their unpleasant course. Lotte's lover preserved his dignity and said nothing and his patience at length bore fruit. Goethe could no longer stand the false and dangerous situation he was creating and ran away from his beloved. The letters below are his farewell messages

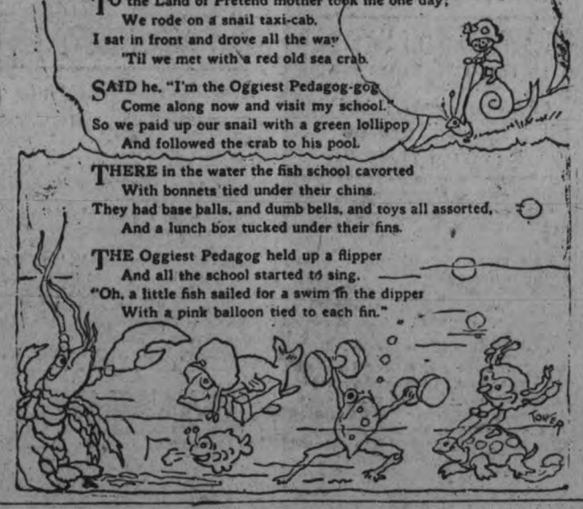
"I hope indeed to come back but God knows when. Lotte, what did my heart feel whilst you were talking, for I knew that it was the last time I should see you. Not for the last time—and yet tomorrow I go away. He is gone. What spirit led you to that conversation? When I was forced to say all I felt—oh, my thoughts were of this life, of your hand, which I kissed for the last time: the room which I shall not enter again and the dear father who accompanied me for the last time. I am now alone and may weep. I leave you happy and shall remain in your heart. . . ."

"Everything is packed up, Lotte, and the day breaks: one more quarter of an hour and I am off. The pictures which I have forgotten, and which you will divide among the children, must be my excuse, Lotte, for writing when I have nothing to write. For you know all, you know how happy I have been during these days. I go to the dearest and best of men but wherefore from you? But it is so, and my fate, which I cannot alter today nor tomorrow nor the next day. . . . Be ever happy in mind, dear Lotte, you are luckier than a hundred others—only not indifferent: and I, dear Lotte, am happy because I read in your eyes that you think I shall never change. Adieu, a thousand times adieu."

The Oggiest-Pedagog-Gog

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

PURE nonsense has its definite and legitimate place in child education. Children love laughter and nonsense. The grown up world would be a healthier, happier place if folks took themselves less seriously and laughed more. There are homes where the inmates don't laugh from one week's end to the other. How much they miss. I heard a mother beg her teen age daughter to stay home more. The girl retorted, "Why should I stay home, we never have any fun around here. Why, you and father never fool and laugh." There was a real problem. I felt equally sorry for the mother and for the child. A wee girl of four I know, has a great gift—she comes laughing. "I know how we can make some fun, Mother." "Isn't that splendid—when there isn't any fun, just make some!



TO the Land of Pretend mother took me one day;
We rode on a snail taxi-cab.
I sat in front and drove all the way
'Til we met with a red old sea crab.

SAID he, "I'm the Oggiest Pedagog-gog.
Come along now and visit my school."
So we paid up our snail with a green lollipop
And followed the crab to his pool.

THERE in the water the fish school cavorted
With bonnets tied under their chins.
They had base balls, and dumb bells, and toys all assorted,
And a lunch box tucked under their fins.

THE Oggiest Pedagog held up a flipper
And all the school started to sing.
"Oh, a little fish sailed for a swim in the dipper
With a pink balloon tied to each fin."

RECIPE FOR ROSE JAR.

Two Different Methods and Ingredients Needed Are Explained.

We have been asked to print again recipes for making pot pourri (rose jar) which appeared in these columns last year. The first recipe came from Mrs. A. L. Kent, 493 King Street, and the second from Mrs. H. B. Dean, 114 Hunter street West:

Recipe Number One: 4 ozs. orris root, 3 ozs. oil of cloves (or bruised cloves), 2 ozs. gum benzoin, 4 ozs. Calamus root, 6 ozs. angelica root, 10 drops true oil of cinnamon, 40 drops oil of bitter almonds, 1 drachm essence of bergamot, 40 drops English oil of lavender, 30 drops oil of verbena.

Gather fresh rose leaves to nearly fill the jar. Sprinkle some salt through them and allow to stand for a few days. Then pour over them the above mixture. It will perfume the air for years.

Some people prefer to spread the salt strewn leaves on newspaper and allow them to dry out, sufficiently to prevent any mold from forming in the jar.

Recipe Number Two: 1 oz. rose leaves, 1 oz. lavender flowers, 1-2 oz. orris root (coarse powder), 1 drachm powdered cloves, 1 drachm powdered cinnamon, 1 drachm powdered allspice, 1 oz. table salt. Mix thoroughly.

BLACKHEADS

Don't squeeze blackheads—dissolve them. Get two ounces of peroxine powder from any drug store and rub with hot, wet cloth briskly over the blackheads. They simply dissolve and disappear by this safe and sure method.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

(By Mildred Marshall.)

Facts about your name, its history; its meaning; whence it was derived; its significance; your lucky day, and lucky jewel.

GERTRUDE.

Gertrude, so charmingly feminine, has an origin in war. It signifies spear maid and comes originally from Ghernot, second brother of Gunther, who, though free of the guilt of the murder of Siegfried, shared the fate of his brothers by being killed early in the encounter by the Markgraf Rudiger. Chief among the feminine names derived from this warlike source is a Valkyr name Gerdrud or Gerthrud. Many pretty maids of Northern lands bore it and considered themselves battle maids armed with the spear of Ithuriel.

It was given popularity by a daughter of one of the great Pepins: she founded the Abbey of Nivelle and was revered by the Franks and Germans for the performance of miracles. The royal nun Gertrude was also a great favorite in Teutonic lands and the drinking of toasts to Saint Gertrude at banquets was almost a proverb for revelry. There was another St. Gertrude of royal blood, in Saxony, who became the Abbess of Heldelfs.

In Norway the Woodpecker with black and white plumage and red head is called the Gertrude bird and the legend goes that Gertrude was the name of the woman who was baking bread when our Lord passed by and asked for a morsel: she promised it and straightway the dough began to grow under her hands. In an access of greed, she repented her promise and as a punishment she was turned into a woodpecker and condemned to seek her living between the bark and the wood, and never to go home until the red should fall from her head. For that reason it is said, the woodpecker migrates from Norway when she begins to moult.

England uses the name Gertrude without derivatives and employs only one diminutive Gatty. She is Gertrude in France: Gertruda in Italy: Gertraud and Trudchen in Germany and Gertrudes in Portugal.

Her talismanic gem is the garnet which possesses many of the same qualities of its relative, the ruby. It protects the bodily and mental health of its wearer: to dream of it signifies the solution of a mystery. Thursday is Gertrude's lucky day: 5 is her lucky number: and the snowdrop is said to be her flower.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

MONDAY, JULY 26, 1926.

For a time today sinister planets appear to rule, according to astrology, but later the aspects are benefic.

The Moon is in Pisces a sign that is fruitful and promising to many lines of work. There should be a tendency toward kindliness and honesty under this sway.

Women are well-directed under this rule which certainly gives promise of great success for them in public movements.

Politics will interest many women of high aspirations and noble purpose, it is prophesied and the autumn campaigns will develop many interesting situations.

This should be a lucky wedding day, for it presaged lasting love and the direction of the stars is not toward the divorce court.

Marriage now comes more under the classification of a civil contract than a church sacrament. New customs are to be introduced, the seers foretell, which will strengthen family ties instead of loosing them.

Theatres will undergo remarkable changes, it is again foretold, and while there will be great combinations of amusement enterprises the people are to provide much entertainment for themselves.

In the new era there will be less hero worship than ever before, astrologers foretell, since no mysteries now surround public personalities.

Reverence will be rare in the coming decade, but certainly a reactionary spirit may be counted on.

Neptune appears in sinister aspect today and there may be ill luck attending ocean voyages through storm or delays.

Fashion is to introduce a startling mode of some sort, it is prognosticated, but it will affect only those who have wealth or public place.

Arms now are to be much noticed, for they are to be featured in winter costumes, a fact that has a significance to those who study the symbolism of dress.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of great financial opportunities and profits in the coming year. There may be danger of loss through fraud.

Children born on this day probably will enjoy extraordinary success in whatever vocation they choose. These subjects of Leo have many friends, but they should be taught to beware of trusting too much.

Absorbs and deodorizes at the same time. Thus ending ALL fear of offending.

You discard it as easily as a piece of tissue. No laundry. No embarrassment.

You get it for a few cents at any drug or department store simply by saying "KOTEX." Women ask for it without hesitancy.

EDUCATION IS NEEDED.

As The Examiner pointed out on Saturday, some well-meaning but misguided people have been suggesting legislation against the use of canoes on Ontario's lakes and rivers.

A measure of that nature would be ridiculous.

The canoe only becomes a menace when it is carelessly or inexpertly handled.

Ontario Indians use canoes exclusively, and although it is said that many of them have never learned to swim, it would be a novelty to hear of an Indian paddler being drowned.

They are abroad in canoes during weather when other boatmen would scarcely dare face the elements in a rowboat.

The explanation, of course, is that the Indian understands his craft thoroughly.

He realizes that he must be careful, must keep the weight well down in the canoe, and be on his guard to see that the boat is well balanced.

And in his hands the canoe is a safe craft.

It is nonsense to talk of doing away with canoes.

As The Examiner has already suggested, the thing that must be done is to educate people to be careful in the use of such boats.

MERELY A STEPPING-STONE.

Complaints are being made by Toronto labour leaders that Canada is being used as a stop-over station by British workers, who have applied for admission into the United States, and while they are waiting for their opportunity to enter that country, secure positions here.

It is charged that many of these men come into Canada as farm labourers, but once safely here they locate in industrial centres and secure work until they can cross the border.

That there is much truth in these complaints cannot be denied, and the matter deserves some attention by the authorities.

If Canadians are being kept out of employment by workers who are merely using the Dominion as a stepping-stone into the United States, it is time the unfairness of the situation was officially recognized.

It has been common knowledge that the regulations in regard to farm labourers have been generally disregarded, and that many of those admitted into Canada as such have taken up residence in the cities; the fact that a percentage of these newcomers have no intention of remaining here any longer than is necessary for them to secure legal entry into the United States adds another factor to the situation that calls for some recognition.

POISONED BEVERAGES.

The general interest in and grief over the Balsam Lake tragedy has to some extent at least detracted public attention from a situation that has already caused the loss of as many lives as the war canoe accident.

In one section of Ontario during the last few days eleven people have died from the effects of poisoned alcoholic beverages.

Here is a series of tragedies that call for vigorous investigation.

While there has never been any great drought in Ontario since the advent of prohibition, and while much liquor that has been far from being good has been illegally sold, this Province has been spared to a very great extent at least from the deaths from wood alcohol poisoning that followed the introduction of the Volstead Act over the border.

The sale of poisonous beverages here has never approached the record set up in the United States where "poison hootch" has claimed hundreds of victims.

Apparently, however, the poison bootlegger has crossed the border—or his methods are being copied in Ontario.

Last week's death record indicates activity along a line that should receive the full attention of the Ontario authorities.

WHAT THEY WANT.

The man on the street has not yet begun to get excited over the Federal election.

While partisans talk of customs or the constitution, there is a large percentage of electors not worrying very much over either of those "keynote" issues, but, on the other hand, greatly concerned over the prospects of one old party or the other getting a clear majority in the next Parliament.

In fact, so disgusted are many of these citizens with the proceedings of the last session that they would even welcome a Progressive majority over all if they thought that result were possible.

They are tired of a political situation which leaves the Government at the mercy of a handful of members, weary of the manoeuvring and bargaining that such a situation has produced, and are hoping not for the success of any particular party but rather that one party will have enough members to proceed with the administration of public affairs unimpeded by the bargaining of any group in the House.

Whether the campaign will give one party a clear majority remains to be seen.

There are many who do not look for any appreciable change in the present standing of the House—but nothing is more uncertain than an election, and wise men will leave their prophesying until September 15th.

THE GROUP SYSTEM.

Miss Agnes McPhail, Progressive member for an Ontario constituency, deplores the fact that under the party system it is difficult to get for any subject brought up in debate the sort of discussion it should have, based entirely on its merits. The last session of Parliament furnished abundant evidence of this undesirable state of affairs. In fact, the whole programme of the party in power was arranged with the idea of party advantage. Progressive members had to be placated and humored in order that the Government might maintain a majority. The result was that Liberals voted and talked for projects which, had the parliamentary situation been different, they would have opposed. Also Conservatives in the opposition fought against measures which under other circumstances they might have supported. There is nothing new in the situation. It seems to be one of the essential evils of the party system in Canada. Undoubtedly the country suffers from it, but would the state of affairs be any better under group Government? Miss McPhail believes it would. However, one is compelled to doubt in view of the experience France has been going through ever since the war. There, group Government has been far from stable and the country has suffered far more severely than Canada, with its admittedly faulty-functioning two-party system. It is possible the cure for our political trouble will not be found until we as a people get a higher conception of government than we now have. When the day comes that we look upon the administration of the affairs of the nation in the same light that we view the conduct of industrial and commercial enterprises in which we have financial interest, political conditions may change. In that day we will think less of the party and more of the state. Then the party that refuses to deal with issues solely and only on their merits will be given short shrift. Which suggests to me that our faulty political leaders are not so much to blame after all. So long as we stand for what they give us, they have good right to believe that is what we want. In other words, we, the voters, are in the final analysis responsible for the sort of government and administration the country is blessed or cursed with.—Alberta Farmer.

WANTED—A POLICY.

For some years Canadians have been under the impression that the United States supplied this country with coal somewhat reluctantly. Indeed, during the fuel shortage across the line, protests were made in American newspapers against coal being shipped to the Dominion when American users were short, and frequent demands for an embargo on exports were heard. Last winter, also, during the miner's strike it became impossible for Canadian consumers—and presumably for many American consumers—to get anthracite at all.

It appears, however, that the United States is, at heart, glad to have Canada as a coal consumer and worried at the prospect that her trade with us in this respect is falling off and likely to show a further decrease. The Department of Trade and Commerce at Washington has issued a circular which shows that the Canadian market for American anthracite is steadily decreasing and says that "the only possible way to arrest the movement is advertising and educational campaigning. . . . Importers of Welsh coal have tried these methods successfully. The cost of American anthracite must be reduced if there is to be an increased market."

Canadians will be delighted to know that our coal imports from the United States are showing a substantial decrease, a decrease sufficient to warrant the issuance of an official circular on the subject. One cannot help but hope that the decrease continues and that the day will eventually come when Canada will be entirely independent of American fuel supply. There is no good reason why we should not be. We have plenty of coal within our own borders. The question is simply one of development and transportation. It lies within the power of the Canadian Government, assisted by private enterprise and consumers' co-operation, to provide for Canadian use of Canadian coal.

Canada has never had a real fuel policy. The Border Cities Star hopes that the next Government will make this question one of first rate importance and go after it in earnest. Prominent men on all sides of politics have asked for such a move. The new administration, whether it be Liberal or Conservative, will have the country at its back in any development along these lines. It means so much to us from a national standpoint that we cannot afford to delay action any longer. With anywhere from fifty to a hundred millions of dollars pouring across the line each year for the purchase of coal the seriousness of the subject can be readily seen.

This money should be kept at home—for Canadian development for Canadian miners, for Canadian mine owners, for Canadian railroads. If the United States Government, through its Department of Trade and Commerce, thinks enough of the business secured from this country every year to advise an advertising campaign in order to hold it, what better proof could we ask of the desirability of handling this business for ourselves?

All that Canada needs in this matter, as in most others, is leadership.—Border Cities Star.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Wood alcohol is apparently trying to keep pace with the motor car as a killer.

The leaders have announced the issues, but it remains for the smaller fry to put the finishing touches on the campaign oratory.

The hum of the mosquito is to be broadcast Probably static will represent the sting.

The Peterboro Industrial Exhibition has never had to run opposition to a Federal election before, but the directors are not worrying. The Exhibition's reputation will carry it through.

French Ministries change as often as some of the Progressives changed their allegiance during the last session.

The Federal election and the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition both come in the same week. Big events like these should be spread out a little.

The campaign at least will not be a long drawn-out affair, and for that mercy Canadians will give hearty thanks.

Campaign meetings while the harvest moon is shining will be a novelty in Canada.

At least it can be said of the jaywalker that he never runs anybody down.

August is usually one of the most glorious months of the year. And the politicians have to come along and spoil it.

Now that both leaders have made their keynote speeches, the campaign can be said to be launched. But it won't be an official election unless Jimmy Simpson runs somewhere.

The usual family jars are reported among Toronto Conservatives. There will not likely to be the same anxiety to become candidates among the Saskatchewan members of the party.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, Que., July 26.—Canadian Press)—Extreme dullness again characterized the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market Saturday. The domestic trade was also slow but prices were steady.

In the spring wheat flour market business was quiet but the undertone was steady. A moderate amount of business was worked in winter wheat grades and prices were firm.

Prices for all lines of millfeed were well maintained with a fair trade passing. There was little business transacted in standard grades of rolled oats but prices were unchanged.

The butter trade was fair and steady. The receipts last week were 16,477 packages.

The export trade in cheese continued fair but the local demand was small. Prices were unchanged. The receipts last week were 65,696 boxes.

Trading in eggs was on the light side but prices were firm. The receipts last week were 7,898 cases.

CHICAGO GRAINS.

CHICAGO, July 26.—(Canadian Press.)—Prospects of a hot wave in Canada did much to bring about a sudden upturn in wheat values on Saturday. Closing quotations on wheat were strong, 1 1-2 to 1 7-8 net higher, corn 1 1-8 to 1 1-2 up; oats at 1-8 to 1 3-8 gain, and provisions unchanged to 20 cents advance.

Wheat finished virtually at the day's top level. In addition to fears of crop damage in Canada, reports were current that big chartering of vessel room for wheat was in progress at the Gulf of Mexico. Under such circumstances the market rose rapidly in the late dealings, having apparently become oversold during the first part of the day. An exaggerated report of increase of wheat stocks at Kansas City had a good deal to do with causing sellers to put themselves in a false position. Early advices said that since Monday there had been 2,281,000 bushels enlargement of the amount of wheat on hand in Kansas City but later this was corrected to 1,281,000 increase.

Kansas City receipts of wheat yesterday, nevertheless, set a new high record 1,109 cars. Indications point also to large primary arrivals on Monday and to a good sized increase of the United States visible supply total. The outlook for possible renewal of crop damage reports from Canada, however, operated as more than an offset for the liberal winter wheat movement and for other bearish factors as well. Besides, considerable buying here was done on acount of a report from the northwest that there would not be to exceed 100,000,000 bushels of bread spring wheat raised this year in the four principal producing states. This amount of spring wheat, it was pointed out, could easily be used by the Minneapolis mills alone.

Illinois and Indiana dry weather reports outweighed in the corn market the influence of Nebraska and Iowa rains. Oats showed independent strength as result of crops reports from a wide area.

Provisions responded to upturns both in hog values and in grain.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

"OF ALL OTHERS."

"Of all other Americans, Washington and Lincoln are first in the hearts of their countrymen."

This sentence, and others similar to it, are frequently seen. It says that Washington and Lincoln are numbered among "other" Americans, which is, of course, incorrect. The sentence should read

"Of all Americans," etc. Or we may say, "More than other Americans, Washington and Lincoln have a place in the hearts of their countrymen."

An example given in "The Verbalist" says "'The vice of covetousness, of all others, enters deepest into the soul.' This sentence says that covetousness is one of the other vices. A thing cannot be another thing, nor can it be one of a number of other things. The sentence should be, 'Of all the vices, covetousness enters deepest into the soul:' or 'The vice of covetousness, of all the vices, enters,' etc.: or 'The vice of covetousness, above all others, enters,' etc."

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—While Chautauqua is still fresh in the minds of all who attended the programmes of this year, and those who supported it by time and money, I give below a statement of receipts and expenditures of the local committee and also of the Chautauqua Company.

Local Commitee Receipts.

Season Tickets Sold—
Adult 415, at $2.50	$1,037.50
Children, 67 at $1.25	83.75
1-4 of gate receipts	110.72
	$1,231.97
Deficit	128.59
	$1,360.56
Expenses—
Paid to Chautauqua	$1,250.00
Light	10.00
Advertising	60.00
Carting to and from station	40.00
Stamps	.56
	$1,360.56

Chautauqua is not put on as a money making business and is not a show for the rich only as many people think and say, but is intended for everybody, and especially for those people who cannot travel and see such entertainments as are put on by them, as I feel will be borne out by all who attended the entertainments just closed.

Almost any evening's show would cost the price of the season's ticket if put on in any of the large cities in the best opera houses, and while we had only a tent, hard chairs rain and thunder storms to contend with, I am sure all had a good time and a real holiday of entertainment, not forgetting the children.

The actual cost of putting on Chautauqua is given to me as $1,750.

The receipts for the past week to the company are the amount paid by local committee to them

Of	$1,250.00
To 3-4 of gate receipts	332.16
	$1,582.16

Showing a loss to the company of $167.84, which has to be made up on some other city showing a profit.

I feel sure that all who attend and support Chautauqua believe that it is worth the price, is a good thing for Peterborough as a real education and an inspiration to old and young and a means through which much good can be done for the upbuilding of our young people.

The local committee wish to thank all who helped sell the tickets, all who purchased a season's ticket, and all who purchased single tickets, and wish to point out that now is the time to interest your friends to buy a season's ticket for next year. I hope you all get some fun out of the work. After all Sir Thomas Lipton says there's no fun like work, and I believe him. Dr. Craig will dig up the money somewhere to cover the deficit and in closing wish to say Chautauqua will come again next year.

Yours truly,
G. A. GILLESPIE.

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

PA ON CHANGING THINGS.

I wouldn't mind her cleaning house,
(You know how women like to do it),
K'd keep as quiet as a mouse
If that was all that happened to it.
But what gets me, and other men,
When home at night a man has drifted,
Is where to find the bed again,
And where the bureau has been shifted.

Now "Pharaoh's Horses" deck the wall
Where Grandpa's portrait used to greet you,
The little table's in the hall,
Yes, in the dark it's there to meet you.
Just when a fellah learns the lay
Of things, you really just begin to,
They shove a sideboard in your way,
Or something else to stumble into.

I've barked my shins, I've risked my life,
To only try to find the poker.
Your Ma's all right, a faithful wife,
But there are times that I could choke her.
If wives would only leave things where
They used to be, we wouldn't mind it:
But when you want your easy-chair
You need a road-map now to find it.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

THE FUTURE OF COAL.
By Dr. Frank Crane.

Roger W. Babson, who usually knows what he is talking about, says there need be little fear of a coal shortage next winter.

In the first place, says Mr. Babson, the strike was a complete failure. Both sides lost and there need be no fear of another coal strike for at least two years.

So abnormal labor conditions will have nothing to do with either the supply or the price of coal. Its old price will be regulated purely by the old law of supply and demand.

In the second place substitutes are replacing coal as a fuel.

During the recent strike many people changed to other fuels. Oil and electricity were substituted by some. The increase in the use of gas is said to be the most striking phase of the turning to other fuels. It is predicted that many of those who have changed will never again return to a full use of anthracite coal.

Turning to the future, Mr. Babson predicts that gas will be much more generally used in years to come. This will be true both for heating and for industrial purposes.

In the cities of the future, he prophesies, the delivering of coal through the streets will become as obsolete as independent drinking wells.

Homes and factories will use gas and electricity exclusively.

The public utility companies will be the ones who will use anthracite coal. It will be used largely to produce these fuels.

With this situation coke will find a greater place in furnishing heat and power. No smoke and little dirt are two of its attractive features.

Another part of this prophecy concerns itself with teaching economical use of fuel in the schools. The buying and use of different fuels will be included in curriculums.

Aside from the interest in what a man who bases his ideas upon facts has to say about the future of something we are all interested in directly, Mr. Babson's interview is of special interest to men who are planning their coal purchases for next year.

He assures them that absence of labor troubles will insure a constant supply and that the substitution of other fuels means less growth in demand.

From these ideas he deduces his conclusion "I don't see how any higher prices are possible, and lower prices for coal are more likely.

RANKING SECOND NOMINATION VOTE

Woman Governor of Texas Trails Dan Moody By 72,209.

DALLAS, Tex., July 26 (Canadian Press). — Miriam A. Ferguson, woman governor of Texas, seeking re-nomination in the Democratic gubernatorial primary, yesterday was trailing Dan Moody, youthful Attorney-General, by 72,209 votes when 224 of the 252 counties in Texas, including 34 complete, had reported to the Texas Election Bureau.

Moody, however, lacked 13,961 of having a majority, which is necessary for nomination. Moody's vote was 256,936 and Mrs. Ferguson's 184,727.

Lynch Davidson Houston, lumberman, was third with 70,914.

Other candidates in the race polled an almost negligible vote.

Unless Moody receives a majority, a run-off primary would be held on August 28, between the two highest candidates.

LONDON NEWSPAPERS POUR OIL ON WATERS OF DEBT ARGUMENT

Sunday Observer Suggests Statesmen Should Discuss Matter Privately.

BOTH STANDPOINTS.

LONDON, July 26 — (Canadian Press)—A long article dealing with the debt question, by J. L. Garvin, editor of the Sunday Observer, asks why the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, Wintson Churchill, and the U. S. Secretary of the Treasury, Andrew Mellon, cannot leave alone this ugly international controversy, which unless controlled threatens to flare like naphtha.

"There are steady hands and decent hearts enough on both sides," he continues. "Let them work with might and main to stop Europe screaming at America and America sermonizing Europe. The obvious course for both Churchill and Mellon as statesmen is either to talk about this miserable business privately or not talk at all.

"By arguments for their own relief, necessarily at the expense of American taxpayers, Europeans can gain no success; they can only put back the clock. There is no moral or mental agreement.

"What can be done is to eliminate heat and bitterness from the discussion in order to arrive at a clearer understanding of the disagreement."

Mr. Garvin then puts fairly as he sees it the case from both British and American standpoints, frankly stating the terrible burdens which Great Britain and Europe are sharing and the universal belief which prevailed here that the United States would be willing to share the losses and cancel the debts.

He admits that abuse will only harden the American policy and postpone revision.

"When Europe cries 'Shylock America cries 'Sponger', says the writer. If American credits are wanted there must be civility, as well as stability."

"There can be only one end to it —there will be explosions of reeling from time to time as long as the payments last and the United States receives the whole of German reparations. It is a source of chronic irritation and unpleasantness, and it cannot be anything else."

Remarking that the European nations in concert may be driven to diminish their imports from America, Mr. Garvin repeats the belief that cancellation of the debts would have been the best policy, but adds:

Stick to Agreement

"The nations signed the Baldwin agreement — let us stick to it like men. For paying and squealing there is nothing to be said. We beg America, in turn, to recollect that Europe is wounded and fractured all over, and that every hard touch hurts the bandaged places and limbs in splints."

The Sunday papers devote much space to the debt controversy and to speculation on the possibility of Mr. Mellon meeting Montagu Norman, governor of Bank of England, and the French statesmen.

Sunday Times

The Sunday Times, which is not connected with the Daily Times, comments editorially, deploring the controversy which has arisen, but at the same time declaring that Mr. Churchill, "knocked the bottom out of Mr. Mellon's and the American treasury's contentions," concerning the commercial part of the debt. The Times begs America to remember that if she resents this somewhat futile hunt for the villain, it was she who on this occasion started the running.

"If incorrect statements have been made," says the Sunday Times, "they must be answered. But it is important that Americans both as spectators and targets of this fresh outburst should not mistake its meaning. We are not attempting to evade our obligations.

"We can see, and it is useless to blink at the fact, that the American attitude is responsible more than any other factor, for the present disorganization of the world.

"Before long America herself must come to view this matter with a vision less detached and then she may revise her opinions. And when she adopts a more truly international viewpoint she will have concluded that great service to the world which she began in 1917."

The diplomatic correspondent of the Sunday Express deprecating the belated outcry against the debt settlement, points out that the campaign of mutual recrimination has been condemned by the leading bankers of London and New York.

CHURCH OPPOSES RELIGIOUS LAWS

Archbishop Issues Pastoral Letter To Catholics of Mexico.

POPE AGREES.

MEXICO CITY, July 26 (Canadian Press).—All religious services in Catholic churches throughout Mexico requiring the offices of priests will be suspended after July 31 by order of the Roman Catholic Episcopate, which has addressed a pastoral letter to the Catholics of Mexico.

The letter, which is signed by the Archbishop of Mexico, the Most Rev. Mora y del Rio, the seven other archbishops and twenty-nine bishops, protests against the new religious regulations promulgated by the Mexican Government, and proclaims the various penalties which may be imposed against those of the Catholic faith who are responsible for the new laws or in any way aid in putting them into effect.

Among these penalties is ex-communication of those who issue laws, regulations or decrees against the rights and liberty of the church, those who prevent the exercise of religious jurisdiction and those who usurp ecclesiastic property.

The letter, therefore, implies that President Calles and all officials of the Government responsible for issuing or enforcing the regulations may be ex-communicated.

It is declared by the episcopate, in protesting against the Governmental decree, that work will be carried on for amendment of this decree and the anti-religious provisions of the constitution and that the clergy will not desist from their purpose until it is attained.

The letter was issued in agreement with the expressed views of Pope Pius XI., who in his last apostolic letter spoke of the iniquity of the decrees and laws sanctioned by the Mexican authorities against Catholics in Mexico.

Permission not having been granted to Catholic primary schools to give religious instruction, to which they are bound, fathers are adjured to prevent their sons from attending schools "where their faith and good customs are endangered and where the texts violate that religious neutrality recognized by the constitution itself."

UNION WITHDRAWS FROM FEDERATION

British Seamen's Organization Disapproves of International Secretary's Actions.

LONDON, July 26 (Canadian Press). — The National Seamen's Union has adopted a resolution withdrawing from the International Transport Workers' Federation.

The action was taken chiefly on the ground that the Federation is more of a political than a trade union, and that its secretary, Edo Fimmen, has been guilty of issuing manifestos whose affect has been to mislead the workers of all Europe.

Only recently it was revealed in the House of Commons that the British Government had refused to permit Edo (Fimmen), who is a Dutch Socialist to enter England. Home Secretary Joynson-Hicks said that he had been barred because he had tried to interfere with British trade by arranging that British ships should be held up in foreign ports during the recent general strike.

CAMP FIRE GOSSIP.

ROTARY-Y.M.C.A. CAMP, July 26.—It rained all day Thursday and outdoor activities in camp were somewhat interrupted, swimming being the only amusement to call the boys out of the buildings.

Starting about 4 a.m. the rain acted first as an alarm clock, awaking almost all the boys, and then as a lullaby to send them back to sleep. The rain ceased then, permitting the early parts of the day's programme to be carried out, and then started again before 11.00 o'clock.

Except for the regular swim, reading, writing and singing helped pass the time, a fire being lit in the big fire place in the dining hall. Many parents will doubtless receive long letters from small sons who have neglected their duty through lack of time in fine weather.

SEARCHERS RECOVER REMAINS OF ANOTHER DROWNING VICTIM

Body of Gordon Heale Taken From Balsam Lake on Sunday.

USING MERCURY.

Hamilton Man Offers To Pay Cost of Method He Suggests.

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 26 (Canadian Press).—The waters of Balsam Lake yesterday gave up the second victim of last Tuesday's drowning tragedy, in which eleven young members of the St. Andrew Brotherhood summer camp lost their lives, when grapplers brought the body of Gordon Heale, of Toronto, to the surface. On Saturday the remains of Walter M. Burgess, aged 15, also of Toronto, were recovered.

A painted buoy was dropped to mark the spot where Burgess' body was recovered. The body was taken to Long Point Camp and was identified by Jack Mardell, brother of Oliver Mardell, who had perished in the squall. Burgess was wearing his right boot, and was stripped except for his B.D.V.'s, in which the grappling iron caught. His body was found in 40 feet of water.

Yeoman service is being rendered by Rev. Ernest Harston, United Church minister of Woodville, who has been handling grappling irons and ropes in the rain and blazing sun. On Saturday Rev. Harston had a narrow escape when the tug lurched and he was washed off the rear, falling under two long rowboats. His long rubber boots filled with water, and he was lifted out with difficulty.

Bread and Mercury.

A generous suggestion was acted on Saturday when five stale loaves of bread, containing mercury, were cast in the lake and their course watched. Rev. Mr. Harston had received a letter on Friday from Mr. C. P. McGregor, 284 James Street, Hamilton, telling of the use of bread and mercury some years ago when a drowning took place in Grand River at Brantford. The body was in the water 5 days when an Indian suggested the idea. It was adopted, a loaf of bread stopping near the drowned body, some two miles distant from where the accident occurred. The loaves and mercury had cost $5, and Mr. McGregor stated that if Rev. Harston wished to try it out, he could send a draft on McGregor at Hamilton for the $5. The loaves were tried out, but a small storm prevented the boats following the bread to shore, although one party said he saw what looked like a body on the shore of Grand Island where one loaf had stopped.

About two hundred people were in attendance for an evening of fun enlivened by a musical programme, in which the Salvation Army Band took a prominent part, providing some excellent music; also the Female Voice Choir, and the Juvenile Choir, directed by Mrs. R. Bugg.

The Female Voice Choir, which gave one selection, "Annie Laurie," with accompaniment by Miss Margaret Flowers, was composed of the following members: Mrs. Parkins, Mrs. S. McKinley, Mrs. Stott, Mrs. Buckton, Mrs. Murray and the Misses Berwick.

The Juvenile Choir, whose numbers received much hearty applause, sang "Jesus Wants me for a Sunbeam," "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," and "Two Little Girls in Blue," and was composed of the following members: The Misses Ina, Madeline, Margaret and Annie Fletcher, Rose Rumary, M. Barry, Winnie Francis, and Phyllis Pink. A duet was given by the Misses Pink and Fletcher; Annie Fletcher sang "Nursery Rhymes,' little Phyllis Pink gave "The Butterly Meadow," and solos were also rendered by Madeline and Ina Fletcher. Each of the small girlies was presented with a dainty basket of candy.

THIRTEEN PEOPLE NOW DEAD FROM ALCOHOLIC POISONING

Death Toll in Ontario Cities Increases Over the Week-end.

SOME IN BUFFALO.

Thirteen is Death Total For Border District of New York.

TORONTO, July 26 — Thirteen Ontario persons who are believed to have drank wood alcohol from the same source of supply, are dead, and still another is in a critical condition in a Hamilton Hospital. A man and a woman lie dead in the Toronto Morgue, both having succumbed at St. Michael's hospital. Three died at Allanburg, not far from St. Catharines; four at Hamilton, and four at Oakville. Patrick Lyons, whose brother Thomas was one of the Oakville victims, is in St. John's Hospital, Hamilton, in a serious condition.

Buffalo and Lockport also contributed a list of dead from wood alcohol poisoning, and it is suspected that the deaths in Ontario and across the line have some connection.

Upon the statement of George Gill, one of the Oakville victims, Bert D'Angelo, an Italian, of Hamilton is under arrest at Oakville on the charge of manslaughter.

Inspector Starts Investigation

Inspector Stringer of the Ontario Provincial Police Criminal Investigation Department starts this morning to trace the source of the wood alcohol and determine if the deaths in Toronto Oakville, Hamilton and Allanburg are related.

An inquest was opened at Oakville Saturday on one of the victims, and adjoured until Thursday next.

Nickle Takes Action.

Attorney-General Nickle, who was on vacation at Kingston, returned last night, and will this morning direct vigorous action in connection with the 13 deaths. Until he has a conference with the Attorney-General, Acting Chief Coroner M. M. Crawford will not order another inquest in this city. Pending the decision of the Attorney-General, the bodies will be held at the Morgue.

Grilled by the Police.

William Maybee, of Oakville, who died on Saturday afternoon in St. Michael's Hospital from alcoholic poisoning, it is believed, took ill on Friday night in the course of a visit he and his wife, aged 22, and his two sons by a previous marriage, Walter, aged 17 years, and Harold, aged 14 years, were making to the home of Mrs. Elsie Fairbanks at 4 Balmuto street, Toronto. It was at this address that Maybee was taken into custody by detectives on Saturday morning, charged with responsibility for cetrain of the deaths Maybee was violently ill when arrested and had to be carried by the police.

On Saturday afternoon Mrs. Maybee, her two stepsons and Mrs. Olive Guertin, aged 36 years, 4 Balmuto street, who later became one of the victims, were grilled by the police at headquarters. Thirteen in Buffalo.

BUFFALO, N.Y., July 26.—(Associated Press.)—While the police and prohibition enforcement agency in this district were trying to locate the source of the supply of wood alcohol that had caused over a score of deaths in this city and nearby Canadian cities over the week end, the death list was today increased by ten—four in Buffalo, three in Lockport, and one each in Toronto, Hamilton and Oakville.

Thirteen of the poison victims lived in this city, their deaths covering a period of four days.

Girls in Hospital.

TORONTO, July 26. — Gladys Guerin, aged 16, of 178 Sackville Street, and Nora Connolly, aged 16, of 194A Sackville Street, are in St. Michael's Hospital, the Guerin girl in a serious condition, suffering from the effects of alcoholic poisoning. The girls are said to have drunk some beer supplied by Roy Wolfron, Oshawa. Wolfron was taken into custody by Detective Donaldson on a charge of supplying liquor to minors, and John Backett, Bolton Avenue, and Ephraim Lindsay, Sackville Street, are held as material witnesses in the case. The hospital authorities stated last night that the girls would recover.

The news of the girls' illness uncovered a sordid story of illicit drinking with three young men in a house on the Kingston Road, Saturday, with the grand finale at the Connolly home yesterday afternoon. According to the police, the girls set out with Annie Connolly, aged 18, of 194A Sackville Street, on Saturday afternoon. They did not return home until 3.30 Sunday morning. The Guerin girl lives alone with her mother. The Connolly girl is one of 12 children. Her father is in Nova Scotia.

Investigation Started.

TORONTO, July 26. — Canadian Press. — The Attorney-General's Department, in collaboration with the Ontario Provinvial Police, and the Ontario License Board, to-day commenced a thorough investigation into the conditions surrounding the deaths of thirteen Ontario people and the serious illness of several others from what is believed to be alcoholic poisoning. The object in view is to ascertain the source of the liquor which created such havoc both in Ontario and in points across the border. The police believe it had a common source in the United States.

Stands are Closed.

BUFFALO, July 26. Canadian Press. — Twenty "soft drink" stands were closed to-day as a result of 30 deaths here, in Lockport, and in Canadians towns just across the border, of persons who drank liquor that contained wood alcohol.

Two dealers have been arrested on a homicide charge, and the police sought James Volker as the distributor of the liquor.

Acting Chief of Police John S. Marnon said he would confer with District Attorney Guy B. Moore today and ask at least five indictments for murder.

The death late last night of C. E. Lombard, hotel man of Wright's Corners brought the total in Buffalo to 13, while an equal number died in Toronto and other Canadian towns and four died in Lockport.

E. Lamb, of Plenty, Sask. The Rev. Canon Haslam, rector of St. James' Church, was the officiating clergyman.

The bride, who was unattended, was prettily frocked in sulphur yellow flowered georgette with a becoming coat of sand georgette and hat to match and corsage of Ophelia roses. She was given in marriage by Mr. Macklem. Dr. Medley Hazen assisted the bridegroom.

The rooms were effectively decorated with rose and yellow snapdragons, the pretty flowers also gracing the refreshment table which was lighted with tall blue candles.

Mr. and Mrs. Lamb motored to Regina, where they will make their home.

The above notice, taken from the Saskatoon "Star," refers to the wedding of Miss Helen Carter, of Saskatoon, daughter of Mr. W. H. Carter, of 15 Lisburn street, Peterborough, and the late Mrs. Carter.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S DRUM STICKS.

(Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Jackie Bow Wow had a drum. Yes, the little puppy dog boy had a drum all right, but he had no drum sticks for it, and the best Jackie could do was to pound on the drum with his paws.

"But that doesn't make half enough noise!" barked Jackie as he paraded up and down the yard, with his brother Peetie marching behind him. "Why didn't you get me some drum sticks, Daddy, when you got me this drum?" the little puppy asked his father.

"Oh, just because," answered the dog gentleman with a funny smile, and that is all he would say. So Jackie had to go about beating his drum with his soft paw, instead of with a regular stick which would have made a lot of racket.

"But between you and me and the lamp post," said Mr. Bow Wow to his wife a little later that day, "the reason I didn't get Jackie any sticks for his drum, is because I didn't want him banging it too hard, and making your head ache."

"Quite right and thank you," said Mrs. Bow Wow.

"I got drum sticks when I bought the drum, of course," went on the dog gentleman, "but I have hidden them away where Jackie can't find them. So he will have to go rub-a-dub-dub with his paws, and the drum will not be so noisy."

'Oh, dear, I wish I had some drum sticks!'

"Quite so, and very clever I call it," said Mrs. Bow Wow.

But Jackie did an think it was clever He wished, over and over again, that he had sticks for his drum—proper sticks that would make a rattling banging sound like soldiers on parade.

"Oh, dear, I wish I had drum sticks!" Jackie, said time and time again, as he marched about beating softly on his toy.

And then Uncle Wiggily Longears, who was hopping out of his bungalow, heard what the doggie boy was saying.

"Too bad!" thought the rabbit gentleman. "I know where I can get Jackie some drum sticks. The poor little puppy very likely has lost the sticks his father bought with the drum.

You see Uncle Wiggily didn't know why Mr. Bow Wow had not given Jackie the sticks. So the rabbit gentleman-heart filled with kindness, hopped off toward the swamp where grew the tall, green stalks of cat tail flags. And on the end of the round stalks were brown tufts, hard and firm, and these make the very best of drum sticks for little puppy dog boys.

Uncle Wiggily cut two of the largest cat tails for drum sticks and then, feeling the need of a little rest, he sat himself down on the green, grassy bank holding the cat tail drum sticks in his paws.

"I wish I had a drum here to try these sticks on before I take them to Jackie," thought the rabbit gentleman. Then, looking toward a bush near by, he saw, sticking out, what looked like the head of a drum.

"Ha! Just the thing!" exclaimed the rabbit uncle. "I'll try the sticks here on this drum!" So he drummed—"dub! dub! rub-a-dub-dub!" until, all of a sudden, out from under the bushes jumped th Bob Cat howling:

"What ar you banging me on the head for? Why are you pounding me? What's the idea? I didn't do anything to you!"

Uncle Wiggily was greatly surprised, but he was clever and said:

"No, you hadn't done anything to me yet, but you were going to. That's why I drummed on you and I'll drum on you again if you don't run away!"

"Oh, in that case I'll run away!" snarled the Bob Cat, and he did.

"Ha! Ha!" laughed the bunny gentleman when the bad chap was far away. "I thought his white head was the head of a drum, but it wasn't. Still, I'm glad I rub-a-dubbed him. I guess these cat-tail sticks will be good for Jackie."

The little doggie boy was much pleased with his queer drum sticks, and, really, they made little more noise than his paws, so his mother didn't have a headache and all was well.

So if the ice-cream spoon doesn't get the shivers when it goes swimming in the hot water, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily helping Mr. Cheer Up.

A COLLISION

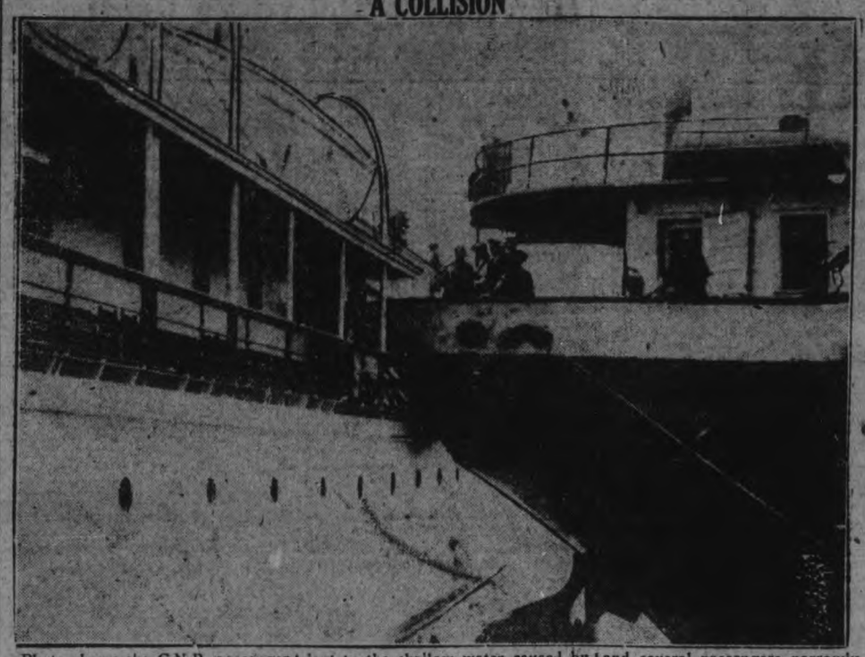

Photo shows the C.N.R. passenger steamer Northumberland and the Dominion Sugar Company's freight boat, Claremont, locked in collision in Toronto harbor. A C.N.R. official statement attributed the accident to the shallow water caused by filling operations of the harbor board causing the boats to run aground, the Northumberland sliding over the shoal into the Claremont. The slight impact damaged her rail and awnings and several passengers narrowly escaped injury. The Northumberland was able to proceed within 25 minutes on her voyage to Port Dalhousie., Ont., across Lake Ontario.

Daily Short Story

DINNER FOR FOUR.

By DOROTHY DOUGLAS.

THEY were both a trifle peevish as they made their way out with the throng. First, because it always annoyedAlice when the man she was engaged to admired so openly a girl so utterly different to herself. And secondly, George had come along to the matinee in his business car, a small delivery wagon, George being a traveling salesman. Which meant that Alice would drive back to Long Island on the front seat of the car—the inside was filled with George's samples—a thing which she detested, especially when she was all dolled up in her new white fur and powder blue hat.

"Dear, I don't see why you always make such a fuss about the car. I would have to go away out to Long Island with it and come in again by train and that's a deuce of a bother—just to come in to the theatre. And besides—if you took any interest in driving at all—you could be learning right now."

"And I've told you a thousand times that I haven't the slightest desire to drive."

To make matters worse the self-starter refused to do its duty. Being in just the slightest temper himself he gave the self-starter a forceful jerk and a second later was holding his wrist in a grip of iron while his face paled with the effort not to register pain.

George might have made another attempt but for a girl who had watched the whole scene and who sprang forward to assist.

"Let me crank her," she said swiftly, "please, I'm quite used to it. Here, let me see your wrist—nasty wrench, isn't it?" Quick as a flash, the strange girl had whipped out a great handkerchief and bound the wrist firmly.

George smiled into the girl's eyes. "You're a peach," he said fervently. "I don't know now what I'm to do about driving. I hardly dare risk this city traffic with this stupid ache in my arm."

"I'm at your disposal if you need me. I've been a bit fed up without anything to drive since my boss is away on his vacation. I'm like a fish on Broadway without my hands on a wheel."

"Are you quite sure you're not saying this just to help a fellow out?" George searched her face but she assured him it would be a great joy to drive him to Long Island.

After informal introductions all round George turned to Alice.

"Would you rather drive back with Miss Weller and let me go by train, or——"

"I'd far rather go by train—if you don't mind," said Alice, and dragging her feminine garments, in the way of white fox, about her slender neck she made off for the railroad station. She first, however, made certain that the fine diamond ring on Miss Weller's finger indicated that she had already found the man of her choice.

"This is the first time I've ever been driven in my own car. By jove, it seems funny—but rather a nice change," George said as he watched the girl swing neatly in and out of the vast line of traffic. "I don't know what I can do for the next week or two while this wrist's mending. I've got to drive my car and I can't very well do it. Is there a chance that you would be free for awhile yet?"

"Delighted. But will the little lady not object?"

"Can't help it if she does—business is business and I am not in a position to lose customers—at this stage of the game. What about your fiance."

"Tom doesn't interfere in anything I want to do. He spouts to me about the moon and all I'm thinking about at those moments is how long it would take to get there in a sixty-mile-an-hour car. Tom doesn't know a magneto from a steering wheel."

"Neither does Alice," laughed George and edged just the least bit closer to the firm arm that guided his car. "What about a cup of tea?"

"Far rather have coffee," laughed Miss Weller and drew up at the next tiny tea-room that dotted the roadway.

"We have spent just one hour and a half having coffee," said Miss Weller as they emerged to take up the trail.

"And a good thing, too—it's done my wrist a world of good. I wouldn't mind stopping at another a few miles on." Again he turned frankly toward her. "Business is going to be a grand and glorious adventure while you drive for me. I'll bet I sell more than I have during the past ten months. I say," he burst out suddenly, "what are we going to do about this?"

"About what?" she asked, and her heart gave a great thump.

"You know very well what," he said tenderly, and also a bit desperately. "You and I are engaged to the wrong people. Do you think there's a chance in the world that if we arrange a little dinner for four that your Tom and my Alice would forget us and take to each other? From what you've said of Tom I fancy he's exactly the type of man to make Alice supremely happy."

"I like that. What about me?"

"I'm the type to do that, and what's more ten Alices and fifteen Toms aren't going to keep me from doing it.

Miss Weller very nearly swerved into the ditch but being of a decidedly level-headed nature all she said was, "If we turn sharp right at this crossing it will take us seven miles out of our way and there's an adorable tea-room——"

"Turn sharp right," said George.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

By Edson R. Waite, Shawnee, Okla.

William P. Baker, editor of The Syracuse (New York) Post Standard, says

THAT when all the homes on a street are architecturally attractive, and all the lawns well-cared for, the value of each home is enhanced by the beauty of the whole.

THAT when an ugly ill-kept shop or garage, cheap and squatty is built in a residential section, the value it acquires from location is only a fraction of the damage it does to the property in its environment.

THAT Fifth Avenue has become the greatest retail street in the world because it has no overhead wires and no poles, it has no intruding steps or porches or bays, it has no overhanging signs to break its beauty, it has no manufacturing lofts to weaken its retail character.

THAT whatever construction is of damage to its neighborhood is damage to the community. That beauty is a community asset and that a gasoline filling station may be made an ornament, not a blemish.

Community spirit is no more than the golden rule.

MOTHER ADMITS SLAYING GIRLS

Tells District Attorney That She Tried To Commit Suicide.

HUSBAND CRUEL.

WARSAW, N. Y., July 26. Canadian Press. — Mrs. Ida Flint has confessed that she inflicted wounds on her two young daughters which resulted in their deaths on Saturday, District Attorney Greff announced today.

After striking the children on their heads with an axe she tried to commit suicide, using the same weapon, but failed.

The woman told the District Attorney and Sheriff Simons that she had intended ending her own life for some time because her husband was so cruel to her, and that she could not bear to think of leaving her two daughters, Helen, aged 10 years old, and Rosie, six, behind her.

Her husband was suspected by the authorities, and was immediately locked up pending the outcome of the children's wounds.

After making her confession Mrs. Flint was placed under arrest and a police guard was assigned to watch her in the hospital.

MANY ATTEND SERVICE IN PARK

Church Army Crusaders Conduct Open Air Meeting Here.

VISIT CHURCHES.

A solemn parade wended its way down the beautiful slopes of St. John's church grounds last night to Victoria park where at least a thousand people were gathered to worship God with the representatives of the Church Army of the Anglican Church of England.

The Cross came first, followed by the local clergy in their robes of office, then the choir boys and choir in their white gowns, the crusaders, and the people who had been at the church. The parade marched very slowly, singing old familiar hymns that are known to practically everybody.

As they entered the park all commenced to sing "Onward Christian Soldiers," and after they had taken up their positions on the band stand several other hymns were sung with the large crowd joining in with great enthusiasm. The Crusaders were then introduced to the audience, each telling where he came from, his work in winter, and ending by quoting a verse of scripture, after which a verse of a hymn would be sung by everyone present.

The crusaders have travelled from Montreal and are holding such meetings as the one of last night in all the towns and cities. Captain Casey, who is in charge of the Crusade, spoke briefly on the work that the church Army does in England, where it has 60 vans travelling around the country preaching to the people, helping those who think they are down and out, aiding those who want work, and getting many to go to their homes where they will be well looked after, so that when they are sent out into the world again they will live a better life.

Captain Ward, the speaker of the evening, took for his text John 1.29 "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." In a very few words, but in a clear voice that everyone in that scattered audience could hear, he said. the problems of this world were those of waywardness and Jesus was the only solution for these problems. Sin is not necessarily swearing and other such things but all sin can be slain at the cross of the Lord Jesus Christ. "My friends, I can thoroughly recommend to you this evening Jesus and Christianity, for let everyone listen to the words of the text. I am delighted to be hear so that I can tell about Jesus and his saving grace for

'I came to Jesus as I was
Weary and worn and sad
I found in Him a resting place
And he has made me glad.'"

One of the sisters then spoke a few words. She told of Peter when he was fishing by the sea and had had a poor catch. When Jesus came up and commanded him to cast the net on the other side of the ship he obeyed and caught a very large draught of fish.

The meeting closed with several more hymns and a quartette by the crusaders.

Captain Ward won the Military medal for bravery in the battle field when he was only sixteen years old.

The Crusaders left this morning, dividing into two groups, one going to Port Hope and the other to Omemee. Yesterday they preached in all the Anglican churches of the city.

The fashion for bobbed and shingled hair is said to have led to a decrease in the number of sufferers from headache.

PILES DISAPPEAR

No Cutting or Salves Needed

External treatments seldom cure Piles.

Nor do surgical operations.

The cause is inside—bad circulation.

The blood is stagnant, the veins flabby.

The bowel walls are weak, the parts almost dead.

To quickly and safely rid yourself of piles you must free the circulation — send a fresh current through stagnant pools. Internal treatment is the one safe method. Ointments and cutting won't do it.

J. S. Leondhardt, M.D., a specialist, set at work some years ago to find a real internal remedy for piles. He succeeded. He named his prescription HEM-ROID, and tried it in 1000 cases before he was satisfied. Now HEM-ROID is sold by druggists everywhere under guarantee. It is a harmless tablet, easy to take, and can always be found at McDermid & Jury, who will glady refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied customer.

GOAL KEEPING OF C. GRIFFINE SAVE THISTLES

Masseys Dominated Play Throughout the Whole Period.

THISTLES LUCKY

Goalkeeper Stopped All Kinds of Shots Ranged at Him.

A fair crowd of spectators witnessed the Thistles lose a valuable point in the league to the Masseys on Saturday afternoon, on King Edward Park. The league leaders had only ten men against eleven but were very fortunate to only lose one point, because Masseys were the better team, while Griffine's goalkeeping was wonderful and he alone gained the one point. There were no goals scored.

First Half

Both teams started minus players. Masseys winning the toss, and the Thistle facing the sun and wind. In the early stages of the tussle, Griffine made a spectacular save from the foul kick taken by Mann, up in the corner of the upright, but Montgomery shot past from close in. A break-away by Hutton-Mayette combination ended in the Massey custodian fisting clear when hard pressed. The Masseys replied with a desperate attack from every angle in which Griffine was the artist between the uprights. On one occasion, Beggs' individual effort was nullified by the goal-keeper's anticipation in play, then again he diverted over the bar from Westlake's right foot drive below the bar.

Griffine's Spectacular Saves

The bombardment continued in the Massey's favor as Foster ran amuck in the left wing corner where Walker tackled fearlessly to record a number of foul-kicks against him and keep Griffine alert to prevent disaster. During this siege, the hard-pressed opponents interspersed the play with spirited attacks through McPhate on the left wing. Twice he was right through on his own and in front of goal tapped the ball towards Warde, who was a second too late to put his side ahead. From the goal kick Masseys returned to the attack with a vengeance, but the Walker and Scott full-back defence tackled closely and heavily outside the dreaded area to cause the attack to shoot from long range; thereby giving their goal-keeper a chance to clear.

Mayette Missed by Inches.

The two half-back defence of Buchan and Bromley put in a power of work in tackling and fielding their forwards; in fact, the latter more prominent in tactics than the other. An individual rush by Ward left Mayette in possesion on the wing, he beat two men and while on the run, shot hard and fast, to skim the cross-bar. Then again Masseys took up the initiative to keep Griffine busy for the remainder of the period. The whole forward line of the Masseys went down in a body, the full-backs spread out to offset close combination, but a free-kick against Walker about brought defeat when Mann picked his shot in below the bar. The Thistle's custodian again making a wonderful save to concede a fruitless corner gick. In the closing minutes of the first half, the Massey held the upper hand in play while the hard-pressed team replied with good defensive tactics and above par goal-keping.

Half Time

After the customary respite, the teams started with new vigor. The Thistle were now kicking with the wind, while the Masseys completed their full eleven when Blowers made his appearance against the opponents' ten men. Wade, the Thistle centre-half, being an absentee through sickness. A throw-in in favor of the Thistles let Warde make progress for goal, but his parting shot was wide of the mark.

Masseys Continued to Press

The Masseys were the first to make any shape like scoring through Beggs, who went right in on goal, but Griffine ran out to save the situation as Scott headed clear. A series of free-kicks in favor of the Masseys for minor infringements kept the Thistles on the defensive for a while. Eventually the "Jags" took up the attack and made things interesting around Montgomery's charge, but they met a robust defence that checked closely to their discomfort.

Griffine Saves His Team

During the last twenty minutes, the play was of a lackadaisical nature in every department, except Griffine's, who made as many brilliant saves that it would require a long-drawn out epistle to record his deeds but one in particular is worth mentioning. Beggs and Foster beat the defence cleverly, the former travelled into goal, the goal-keeper never moving an inch, the inside left tried to lift the ball over his head, but Griffine hit the ball from one hand to the other in mid-air and put it round the post. The game ended as it began—no scoring.

Thistle.—Griffine, goal; Walker and Scott, backs; Buchan and Bromley, halves; Mayette, Hutton, Warde, Garry and McPhate, forwards.

Masseys.—T. Montgomery, goal; Hotston and Blowers, backs; Westlake, Mann and Roberts, halves; J. Montgomery, Laidler, Hodgson, Beggs and Foster, forwards.

Referee.—Alex. McKinley.

Linesmen.—T. Stewart and W. Barry.

BOSTON DEFEATS LEAGUE LEADING CINCINNATI REDS

Game Was Enlightened by Fist Fights Between Coaches.

PENELLI BANISHED

NEW YORK, July 26.—(Canadian Press).—The League leading Reds of Cincinnati were at home to Boston yesterday and lost 8-4 in a contest which was enlivened by a couple of fist fights. Pinelli and Arthur Derlin, who were coaching at third for the visitors staged the first battle which resulted in a draw. Pinelli was banished. In the very next inning Welsh ran into Picinich on the way home and they mingled. Picnich was banished.

At Chicago Jim Cooney's triple in the ninth gave the home team a 5-4 victory over Philadelphia. The most part of the game was played in a drizzling rain. The Phillies drove Piercey off the mound in the seventh but it did them no good.

Jess Petty outsteadied Joe Bush at Brooklyn Sunday and the Robins upset Pittsburgh 3-1. Zach Wheat hit for the circuit while Fournier slammed two doubles and a single.

The Giants were at St. Louis yesterday and lost a thirteen-inning struggle 6-5. It was a tough struggle and a bad break for the New Yorkers who had one more hit than the winners. Bell and Southworth knocked four-baggers.

CLERKS DEFEAT TRENT RIVER

Turnbull's Pitching Was Good in All But Second and Ninth.

TRENT RIVER, July 26.—The Clerks of the Campbellford Softball Association defeated Trent River here Friday afternoon 7 runs to 3.

The visitors were unable to do much with Turnbull's pitching in all but the second and ninth innings, when they bunched their bingles for three runs in the second and Woods' home after McArthur had walked and Blake singled accounted for three more in the ninth. The Clerks gave Thomas good support, a fast double play helping him out of a bad situation in the ninth.

LEAFS LOST BOTH GAMES TO SYRACUSE

Second Game Blew in the Eleventh When Williamson Scored.

WHITMAN FEATURES

NEW YORK, July 26.—(Canadian Press).—The Maple Leafs ran into a horrible fate at the hands of the Syracuse team Sunday and came out on the short ends of two games 8-1 and 2-1. The second game went to the eleventh before Fred Frankhouse bounded a two base hit off the top of a right field fence to score Williamson.

Whitman's homer was the feature of the Newark Park yesterday, the home team defeating Reading 5-3.

The Skeeters shut out the Orioles at Jersey City twice. Slick Parks gained the honor of shutting out Jack Dunn's men for the first time this season 7-0 in the early contest. The second contest went nine innings to a 4-0 verdict.

Buffalo fans saw their team split a double header with Rochester yesterday. The Bison won the first 10-4 and lost the second 6-5.

REUNION WITH FATHER.

NEWARK, July 26.—(Canadian Press)—The joy of Willie Batch, Newark International infielder, on returning to the diamond, after being laid up with a broken leg for almost the entire season yesterday was increased a hundred fold when he was hailed by his father, whom he had believed to be dead, for the past seven years.

The shock was too great for the young second baseman and teammates found it necessary to lead him from the field after the greeting.

Years ago, the elder Batch went to South America and after many letters from his son had apparently failed to reach him, he was given up for dead.

RUTH'S HOMER WINS YANKEES' FIFTH VICTORY

Swat King's 30th Home Run in Sixth Scores Game.

ST. LOUIS DEFEATED

NEW YORK, July 26.—(Canadian Press).—Babe Ruth's 30th home run of the season with Gehrig on base in the sixth gave the Yankees their fifth straight victory over the Chicago White Sox Sunday by the score of 2 to 1. Singles by Mostil and Hunefield and Falk's out gave the visitors their lone run in the first. Harris, Chicago right fielder, featured with a diving catch of Hoyt's low liner in the fifth.

Cleveland celebrated its home coming from its successful eastern trip yesterday by defeating St. Louis, 7 to 4. St. Louis scored all its runs off Smith, both Buckeye and Uhle proving effective relief pitchers.

At Washington, Detroit banged out seventeen hits off four pitchers to take the sixth game of its series with the champions, 14 to 4. None of the Washington pitchers were effective, Detroit getting ten passes. Heilman got four hits, one a freak single, when he threw his bat at a wide throw, the ball landing safely.

UNITED CHURCH HELD EXCURSION

Good Day's Sport Despite Heavy Shower of Rain at Starting.

MILLBROOK, July 26.—The Sunday School of the United Church held its annual picnic at Wallace's Point on Thursday afternoon, the rather heavy shower just at the hour of starting causing some delay in reaching the grounds, but not seriously interfering with the success, or pleasure, of the outing.

A game of softball between the ladies and the men occupied the time and offered plenty of entertainment before the regular sports programme began, such items as foul balls or two on bases being considered of minor importance so long as the game went merrily on.

Mr. W. Fred Fallis, Mr. C. C. Garside and Rev. F. H. Howard had charge of the races, the results being:

Little tots' race—1, Wilma Armstrong; 2, Donald Williamson; 3, Maud Raper.

Girls 6-8—1, Mary Ball; 2, Lois Dawson.

Boys 6-8—Reg. Edmunds and Leon Raper (tie); 2, Arthur Richards.

Girls 8-10—1, Mary Burnham; 2, Janet Dawson.

Boys 8-10—1, Reg. Edmunds; 2, Leon Raper.

Girls 10-12—1, Ruby Cunningham; 2, Helen Dunford.

Boys 10-12—1, Donald Lang; 2, Arthur Howard.

Girls 12-14—1, H. Dunford; 2, Margaret Fallis.

Boys 12-14—1, Gordon Muspratt; 2, Donald Fallis.

Girls 14-16—1, Wilma Fallis; 2, Flossie McMahon.

Boys 14-16—1, Aubrey Todd; 2, Lawrence Rowland.

Girls 16-18—1, Helen Larmer; 2, Florence Fallis.

Boys 16-18—1, Charlie Larmer; 2, Aubrey Todd.

Single ladies' race—1, H. Larmer; 2, Margaret Lacheur.

Single men's race—1, Clarence Ball; 2, C. Larmer.

Married women's race—1, Mrs. Will Armstrong; 2, Mrs. A. J. Henderson.

Married men's race—1, Mr. I. Hatherly; 2, Mr. C. C. Garside.

Fat ladies' race—1, Mrs. O. Williamson; 2, Mrs. C. C. Garside.

Slow race (5 minutes to cover a given space)—1, Mr. W. Fallis and Mrs. Henderson; 2, Mr. O. Williamson and Mrs. G. W. Sayles.

Boys' race 4-6—1, Lloyd McMahon; 2, Freddie Garside.

Prizes were distributed by Mrs. Offa Williamson and Mrs. G. W. Sayles, after which about 200 sat down on the hillside and were served to a bountiful picnic supper, the officers and teachers of the school acting as waiters.

The Knights of Columbus arrived at the Point while supper was in progress with a party of children from the Orphanage, Peterboro, to whom they were giving an outing, and a pick-up team from each picnicking company arranged a softball game, which may not have been played strictly according to rule, but provided plenty of excitement and hilarity as a closing feature of the day's enjoyment. The line-up was:

Peterboro—J. J. Doris, p; Ryan, c; Clancey, 1b; Garside, 2b; O'Brien, 3b; J. Sullivan, rf; C. Sullivan, lf; Peppe, cf; Armstrong, ss.

Millbrook—Ross Edmunds, p; E. Burnham, c; R. H. Edmunds, 1b; W. Sayles, 2b; J. Byam, 3b; L. Ingram, rf; G. W. Sayles, lf; N. Rowland, cf; L. Rowland, ss.

A. Todd acted as umpire and evidently gave satisfaction, but the score being rather unevenly balanced and the home team the victors, it would scarcely be courteous to publish the final figures. Players and onlookers apparently found equal enjoyment as the game progressed.

A permeptory whistle from the boat warned the Peterboro contingent that time was up, the local picnickers gathering on the wharf and giving them a hearty send-off as the steamer began its homeward trip.

Visitor Gets Wetting.

Only one mishap, and that of a minor character, occurred during the outing when a young lady, a visitor in town, who had gone out alone in a small canoe, had an upset near the shore, escaping with a wetting that made an immediate return to the village imperative.

Trucks and cars were provided to convey the picnickers to and from the Point, the drive being, for many, proving not the least enjoyable event in the day's list of attractions.

THE FEDERAL ARENA

CHATHAM, Ont., July 26—(Canadian Press.)—Dr. James W. Rutherford, defeated Liberal candidate in the last Federal election in Kent, was again nominated to carry the standard of the Liberal party at a convention held here Saturday afternoon.

The convention, presided over by J. A. McNevin, president of the Kent Liberal Association, was large and enthusiastic and featured by the presence of a large number of farmers.

During the convention it was announced by Senator A. B. McCoig of this city, that efforts are now being made to bring Hon. Mackenzie King to Chatham to address the electors.

Addresses were given by Angus Gillandera, J. F. Hinnegan, of Walkeeburg, Mayor A. L. Thompson, of Chatham and Senators McCoig and Pardee, the latter two speaking more directly upon the issues confronting the electors in the present campaign.

ing been on the Margaret during a portion of her cruise.

Mr. Lapointe's Denial

"My leader has received a telegram from the former Minister of Justice," said Mr. Doucet, "denying that he was ever on board that vessel. And, as we do in the House of Commons, and as I know Mr. Lapointe, I accept his denial. But I want to say that the logbook of the Margaret shows that she stopped at the wharf at Quebec and took on Mr. Lapointe and party. That Mr. Lapointe might not be the former Minister of Justice I am willing to concede."

Unfit to Print

Mr. Doucet referred to Miss Agnes MacPhail. He spoke of a statement attributed to Miss MacPhail that she had not seen anything of the Duncan report which had not been printed. "She did not see it," said Mr. Doucet, "because it was not fit for a woman to see, and she knows it. During that investigation, Inspector Duncan laid before the committee a partial report. He also had other information, documents and exhibits upon which he had not reported. The sub-committee of the committee decided not to inquire into nor print that portion of Duncan's evidence because—I will be frank with this meeting—it was not fit to be printed."

Mr. Doucet went on that J. S. Woodsworth, former Labor member for Centre Winnipeg and Miss MacPhail had gone over to the Finance Department together to see the Duncan exhibits. But Mr. Woodsworth would not let Miss MacPhail read them. "I think he had a chance of perusing them himself," Mr. Doucet said, "and afterwards he said to Miss MacPhail: 'You cannot read them.' She never read them because Mr. Woodsworth would not let her read them. It is known to every member of the committee, it is known to every member of the Government that what was not produced by Duncan was better left out."

Premier Rhodes

Premier Rhodes of Nova Scotia said that under the leadership of Premier Meighen, there was held out to the Maritime Provinces the one and only hope for the redress of the disabilities of the Maritimes which has become crystalized under the name of Maritime rights.

Premier Rhodes referred to Mr. Meighen's proposal to assist the shipment of Maritime basic products to the Central Provinces. Liberals had criticized this policy, said Mr. Rhodes, but a similar policy had proved satisfactory in Australia and South Africa.

"You may discuss tariff or any other form of government effort you can," said Premier Rhodes, "but you can't place your finger on any one thing which has hamstrung the Maritimes more than freight rates."

Intercolonial Railway

Construction of the Intercolonial was a part of the contract under which Nova Scotia entered Confederation, but the I.C.R. was not constructed wholly on economic lines. Imperial considerations entered into it, with the result that the line was 200 miles longer than it might otherwise have been. Three years ago, Premier Rhodes added, the I.C.R. was added to the National system and its rates became subject to the Railway Commission. Then those two hundred miles were added to the burden on the backs of people of the Maritimes. In some cases rates on industrial commodities had been increased as much as 240 per cent.

During the tour, Mr. Meighen is accompanied by Mrs. Meighen and their elder son.

DOMINION RIFLEMEN WILL BE IN FORCE AT CONNAUGHT SHOOT

D.C.R.A. Meeting Will Draw Sharpshooters From All Over Canada.

MANY FEATURES.

Bisleyites For Next Year To Win Their Places at Connaught Ranges.

OTTAWA, JULY 26. (Canadian Press.—Canada's national rifle shooting meeting, opening August 17, familiarly known as "the D.C.R.A." promises this year to excel any prize meeting held since the year 1913, or before the war, and it is expected that there will be an increase in attendance of competitors of more than 100 from all over the Dominion. Rifle shooting has shown great progress during the past year, and the summer shooting now under way shows a 100 per cent increase in atetndance at the various ranges over 1925. Last winted 477 teams took part in the indoor competitions as compared with 126 teams two years ago. Toronto reports 400 men shooting every Saturday, and similar reports come from all the large cities.

The "D.C.R.A." programme this year has not been changed materially from that of last year, but any of the changes made will meet with general approval, particularly that portion which adds 18 prizes to the tail end of each of the important matches, ensuring for the new shot a good chance of coming into the money more frequently than in the past. The Governor-General's match will be shot this year in the usual two stages, but the final stage will be at 300 and 900 yards, when 15 shots must be fired at each range. Both ranges of the Bankers' Match will this year be in the Grand Aggregate, and aperture sights will be permitted at all ranges of all the squadded competitions in the aggregate.

King's Medal Contest

The King's Medal competition has been taken out of the middle of the week and will be fired on Friday afternoon as a distinct event. The Gzowski and Dundonald matches will be conducted as team events, as they were in the old days at Rockcliffe, and will have no connection with the King's Medal match. The conditions of the King's Medal call for four practices. The first is for deliberate shooting at 600 yards. This will be followed by the Fire and Movement practice, which means that the competitor will start from 600 yards and fire 10 shots at distances up to 100 yards. The target will be exposed for 45 seconds for each two shots, and in the interval between exposure, which is only 15 seconds, the competitor prepares for the next round. When the target appears he must run to the next firing point, 10 yards away, and fire two shots, all within 45 seconds. The third practice is a Rapid Fire competition at 300 yards, and this is followed by a snap-shooting test at the same distance. The Rapid is ten shots at a standard target, in 40 seconds, and the snap-shooting is at a 22-inch disc which is exposed 10 times at irregular intervals.

Some Added Features

An added feature in the King's Medal match will be a team competition, for teams of four men whose combined scores make the highest total. For this match General Sir Arthur Currie is offering a valuable trophy, and the competition for this should be very keen.

In the Service Revolver Match, the .45 Colt has been admitted on equal ground with the .455, as a concession to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who are armed with the .45.

An Egg Pool competition will run continuously throughout the week, and valuable prizes are offered daily, besides a valuable list for the aggregates of the week.

In addition to the above there is the usual attractive prize list of all classes of shooting for cadets, tyros, and senior shots, for which over $12,000 is offered in cash prizes in addition to the $100,00 worth of trophies. There will be shooting with the .22 rifle. Also, an interesting series of revolver matches, concluding with the military revolver championship, for which a gold medal is awarded, and a revolver team match.

What the "King's Prize" is to Bisley, the Governor-General's match is to Connaught Range, the supreme test of the rifleman's skill. While it is important to do good shooting in the Governor-General's contest, consistent scoring is required throughout the whole week in order to win a place on the Bisley team for next year, which after all, is the objective of most men who attend the meeting.

Col. D. R. Street will be executive officer; Lt.-Col. R. J. Birdwhistle, assistant executive officer, and Major R. O. Wheatley, chief range officer.

The Association has provided interesting social amusement features, and the attraction each evening is the free entertainment in the big hangar on the ranges. Sixteen competitors from each of the provinces are given free transportation, and in addition a refund of one-fifth of the single are is made by the Association to all who attend. The prospects for a record meeting are very bright and the week of August 17 should see Connaught Range the scene of the biggest gathering of rifle shots ever asembled in Canada in competition.

LAWN BOWLING

The following games in the doubles competition are scheduled for to-night:

M. B. Chenhall vs. E. Taylor.
I. Cullen vs. J. J. Howden.
L. Bowes vs. J. MacDonald.

Diamond Disputes Decided

Batsman hits fly ball to right field Runner on first thinks it will be caught and takes only a short lead. Ball drops safe. Runner on first is forced at second. How is play scored?

* * *

While it may seem tough on batsman whose fly ball dropped safe, the play is not scored as a base hit.

The rule is very specific. It says; In no case shall a base hit be scored when a base runner is forced out by the play.

Either poor or too cautious base running on part of man on first created a force play at second.

The force removed only chance of the batsman being credited with a hit.

SECRETS OF STARS INSIDE BASEBALL

By Billy Evans

BY WALTER JOHNSON.
World's Greatest Pitcher.

Every pitcher should early in his career learn the value of using his head.

Too many pitchers wait until their arm begins to falter before mixing in smart stuff with their natural ability.

It is the history of most big league pitchers that not until late in their careers have they learned the lesson of conserving their arms by working intelligently.

Pitchers, endowed by nature with great ability, are, as a rule, content to overpower the opposition through sheer force rather than trying to outsmart them.

In a sense, I belong to that class, though, fortunately for me it has in no way affected my career or shortened my length of service in the majors.

In my big league debut, my fast ball got me by very well and for years I continued to rely almost entirely on speed.

Not until it was apparent to me that some of my speed was missing, did I seriously take up curve ball pitching or try to develop a change of pace.

It is also well to always try to have something in reserve. In other words do not put all your stuff on every ball pitched. Remember that you have eight other players in the field, willing and anxious to assist you.

Putting all your stuff on every ball has two drawbacks. First, it takes much out of the pitcher and has a tendency to make him weaken late in the game. Second, he has nothing in reserve to offer the batter in the pinch.

It is always well to be able to show just a little more speed in the crisis than you have been dishing up when not in danger.

WEDNESDAY'S GAME SHOULD BE FAST

Gooderham & Worts Girls' Softball Team Industrial League Leaders.

The Gooderham and Worts "Distiller-ettes" Girls' Softball team will invade Peterborough on Wednesday to play the General Electric Girls an exhibition game and to give the Peterborough fans a demonstration of the fast brand of softball played in the Toronto Ladies' Industrial Softball League.

The G. & W. girls have swept everything before them this season. Only after two league games were played the Toronto Ladies' Industrial executive came to the conclusion that the "Distiller-ettes" were too fast for the Eastern group of that league and decided to place them in the Western group. The G. & W. Girls have since won the Western group by winning every game. The "Distiller-ettes" have somewhat of a ancient traditional reputation to uphold. Old-timers will recollect that Gooderham and Worts have always participated actively in baseball. For a period covering the last forty years their baseball teams have appeared amongst the fastest teams of industrial baseball in Canada. Their 1926 baseball (hardball) team is no exception. They are on the top of the Toronto Senior Industrial League. This is only the second season for G. & W. Girls in softball and it is evident from these two years' records that the traditional G. & W. ideals are being kept up to the standard.

The winning punch of the "Distiller-ettes" belongs to Phil White and Dot Humpage, the efficient battery. Phil White posseses enough sheer talent that will make her one of the best pitchers around Toronto within a few years. "Dot" Humpage, was originally crude at the beginning of the season, has become, by dint of persistent effort, if not a polished, at least a most effective backstop. These two girls are determined to do their best on Wednesday to bring back another victory over an out-of-town team to the distillery.

The "Distiller-ettes" are not only leaders in softball but are equally efficient in other lines of sports. On Saturday last at the Toronto Ladies' Industrial Softball League Field Day the G. & W. Girls won the Willard Trophy, for obtaining the most points in the different events. On Wednesday the Peterborough fans should be able to see a nice exhibition of girls' softball.

Peterborough's C.G.E. team, so successful last week feel they have got going in great shape now, and the game on Wednesday will be hotly contested.

PETERBORO' C. C. PLAYS TIE GAME

Match With Toronto C.G.E. Club Produces Good Batting.

PLAYED IN TORONTO.

The Peterborough Cricket Club journeyed to Toronto on Saturday to fulfil the annual fixture with the General Electric Cricketers of that city. Captain Dyer lost the toss and the Toronto captain elected to let Peterborough bat first.

Thorpe and Dunkerley opened the innings for the locals and a good attendance witnessed the start, the game being played at Trinity Park.

Both batsmen opened cautiously against the bowling of Adams and Lowe. However, it was soon obvious that it was a batsman's wicket and after the first few overs runs came rapidly. Thorpe was the more aggressive of the two batsmen and he was very severe on any loose leg balls, most of his runs coming from well timed hits on the leg side to the boundary.

Dunkerley used a great variety of strokes all round the wicket to compile his total of 41. Despite numerous bowling changes the score rose rapidly. Thorpe gave a chance when his score was 36 which was not accepted. Apart from this neither batsman gave a chance until the score was 101 when Dunkerley made his first mistake, and was caught. Monkman filled the vacancy and 10 runs later Thorpe stopped a straight ball with his pad instead of his bat and paid the penalty. Both Thorpe and Dunkerley received a great ovation on retiring, which they thoroughly deserved. Thorpe had ten boundary hits and Dunkerley six. The century went up after exactly an hour's batting, which is very rapid scoring, and the crowd were entertained to a display of delightful batsmanship. R. Dyer, Stratton, Monkman and Hammond all added useful scores and the closure was applied when the Peterborough total reached 155.

Credit must be given to the excellent fielding of the Toronto team and it should be mentioned that they were deprived of the services of three of their best bowlers on account of holidays. Toronto opened disastrously and three wickets were down for 17 runs, and a Peterborough victory loomed in sight. Warren and Ashley, however, withstood the attack by splendid batting until the score reached 76. Ashley played steadily while Warren did the scoring, and in making a total of 48 Warren had 9 boundary strokes.

Three easy catches missed by the Peterborough players proved costly, and these lapses probably meant the difference between a draw and victory. Apart from these the Peterborough fielding was excellent.

Stumps were drawn at 6.00 p.m. as per arrangement.

After the game the Toronto players entertained the visitors to a sumptuous dinner which was appreciated.

President Stewart in a brief and witty speech thanked the Toronto players for their entertainment, and the Toronto captain replied in a fitting manner.

Three cheers were also given for the ladies, who worked so hard to enable the visitors to have such an enjoyable time.

HOW TO SWIM

by William Cannon

Lillian Cannon shows properway to breathe in water.

After one has the hang of the dog-paddle, the time to learn to breathe while swimming has arrived.

In the dog-paddle the head is held at an angle to the body and the body is in a sloping position in the water. When the right hand goes forward for a stroke, breathe deeply and quickly through the mouth, taking in as much air as possible.

When the hand starts the downward stroke, close the mouth and hold the breath until the left hand goes forward.

When the left hand goes forward, exhale through the nose until the right hand is ready to go forward again. Then repeat the operation.

Go slow at first and do it slowly until it becomes a habit.

G. B. Shaw's After Dinner Speech Barred From Radio

Refuses To Give Advance Copy To Postmaster-General

LONDON, July 26 (United Press Staff Correspondent).—George Bernard Shaw was banned from the radio to-day on the occasion of his seventieth birthday, which will be celebrated to-night at the Hotel Metropole, where Ramsay Macdonald, England's first Socialist Premier, will preside at a dinner in honor of the Empire's foremost Socialist.

Radio broadcasting is a Government monopoly in Great Britain and the only broadcasting agency is the British Broadcasting Company, which is not permitted to put speeches or other matter on the air unless Sir William Mitchell Thomson, the Postmaster General, is convinced that there is nothing controversal in their contents.

The custom with speeches is for them to be submitted to Sir William for examination.

Shaw, who recently denied a report that he had joined the Catholic Church by explaining that there would not be room for two Popes, refused to submit his speech to the Postmaster-General, whereupon Sir William refused to permit it to be boardcast.

Sir William's suspicion that tonight's after dinner remarks of the newly arrived septuagenarian would be controversal is justified, for durng his long life if Shaw has ever chosen the discreet or middle way, that occasion is not recorded. His attitude toward the conventional things of life was illustrated during a passage at the conclusion of a speech before the Fabian Society.

MANY DEATHS FROM ALCOHOL

with rough, dark clothes, brown cap and workman's shirt. He gave no evidence of dejection or brooding over the charge which faces him. While he was being borne swiftly by motor the sixteen miles to the Milton jail he smoked one cigarette after another and maintained a cheerful air.

Though not talkative, he answered questions that were put to him quite frankly, and he skilfully evaded attempts to draw him out about the origins of the deadly liquor.

D'Angelo said that he was not the leader in the operations. He said he was only a sub-agent, who has been handling on a fairly extensive scale, for bigger interests.

"Who did you get this liquor from?" he was asked.

"I got it from different people. I'm not going to tell you who they are. There were lots of them. I guess they got it brought in from the United States already."

"Did you ever bring any across the line yourself?"

"No, I never did. I've only been in the United States once in my life, and that was in 1915. Other people got the liquor for me, and then I handled it."

"Did Gill get this liquor from you?"

"Yes, he did."

"How about Maybee. Did he get his from you?"

Silence for a moment. Then, "No."

"How much did you pay for this liquor?" No answer.

"Was it $14 a gallon?"

D'Angelo nodded his agreement.

Blames Laws.

"There'd never have been any trouble like this at all, if it wasn't for the laws here. Why don't they have it like they do in Quebec?" he went on.

"And what would you do for a living then, D'Angelo?"

"I'd work," he snapped back.

This interesting Italian, who seems to have been about midway up the ladder in the scale of bootleg operations, and who might have met with promotion had fate not decided otherwise, told the story of his life.

"I was born in Italy," he said, "and I came to this country about sixteen years ago. I went to Toronto first, and I was there for a long time. I've worked at all kinds of jobs, laborer, truck driver, fruit peddlar—Oh, all sorts of work."

"But you could make more money at bootlegging than anything else, couldn't you?"

D'Angelo did not reply but laughed heartily.

Then came an interesting sidelight.

"Do you drink much of the liquor you handle?"

"Who, me? Oh, I don't drink any. I don't like it very much."

And this was corroborated by the story told by Billie Gill, his eleven-year-old helper, who declared: "I never saw any liquor around D'Angelo. I don't think he ever drank any."

D'Angelo is well-known to most Oakville residents. He peddled oranges and bananas, as well as other fruits and vegetables, all round the district. Only about a month ago, he had made his application to the Chief of Police for a license. Not once to-day did he reveal either in his conversation or in his action, that he was particularly concerned about the serious charge that hangs over him.

Meanwhile Oakville has been stirred to its depths by the tragedy, the most far reaching and complicated that has ever occurred in this locality. Other victims were feared.

While the actual nature of the alcohol cannot be definitely known until Professor Rogers of the University of Toronto, makes a statement following his analysis, it is thought that the undiluted fluid was wood alcohol. ne doctor de was wood alcohol. One doctor de the unfortunate victims as those of persons suffering from wood alcohol poisoning.

It is known definitely that at least six persons who drank the poison recovered. Strong emetics are said to have helped in these cases.

But in the homes of the dead men to-day there was no evidence of any untimely end. As they lay in their cloth-covered caskets all was peace.

There was none of the excited curiosity that had been evident a day or two ago. Nothing but the silence of death with its overwhelming mystery, and the beauty of the flowers that friends and relatives had sent.

There were many callers today at all of the homes, but none of the crowd of curious onlookers that often gathered at such occasions. Just a handful of sorrowing relatives, and the closest of the friends, who had gathered to mourn with those who were left behind.

At the Johnston's home, are staying Mrs. Maybee and the two sons. They had been held in custody Saturday afternoon, but no charge has been levied against them and on their return to Oakville they are allowed to go.

Funerals To-day.

To-day the last chapter of an epic that has been strangely startling, was commenced. There were three funerals. A double funeral of George Gill and Thomas Lyons took place at nine o'clock in the morning from St. Andrew's Catholic church, to which they belonged, and in the afternoon, a military funeral was given James Johnston from h is late home on John street to St. Jude's cemetery.

Government Active.

TORONTO, July 26. Canadian Press. — Ontario's death toll as the result of alcoholic poisonings which have occurred in the course of the past few days, now stands at fourteen, the figure being increased by one with the death of William Johnson in Hamilton to-day.

Four others are now in hospital suffering from liquor poisoning, two 16-year-old girls in Toronto, and two men in Hamilton.

The bodies of the five Hamilton victims were viewed by the coroner's jury when the inquest was opened at the morgue there at noon to-day.

Determined to trace to its source the poison liquor that has been responsible for 14 deaths so far reported, Hon. W. H. Price, Acting Attorney-General, Ontario, to-day brought together all the departments of the government for a concerted drive on the evil. The Attorney-General's Health, License Board and Provincial Police Departments, have all united with the sole object of cleaning up the situation.

It is intimated that the Ontario Government will engage special counsel to prosecute the investigation in places where the regular officials are not stationed.

The Ontario Provincial Police have been working on the case unceasingly since Saturday morning and are said to be in possession of valuable information that is expected ultimately to result in a a series of arrests at various points in the province. Hon. Mr. Price to-day stated that he has received information from the police of a serious character but that he feared to make it public lets the ends of justice should be frustrated.

In several branches of the government the investigation is proceeding steadily. Crown attorneys have been warned by long distance telephone to leave no stone unturned in an effort to sift the trail of poison to its source. Coroners in places where deaths have already occurred are engaged in post mortem examinations of the remains of the victims. The Provincial police and the Ontario Temperance Act operatives are working together, the former patrolling the border points unceasingly and keeping suspected houses under watch.

Aanalyzing Poison.

Professor J. Rogers, of the University of Toronto is engaged in analysing poison and the Provincial Health Laboratories, are carrying out similar tests on samples secured from St. Catharines and other points.

Hon. W. H. Price to-day had a conference with General V. A. S. Williams, Commissioner of Police, James Hales, K. C., chairman of the Ontario License Board, and Eric Armour, Country Crown Attorney.

Hon. Dr. Forbes, Godfrey, Minister of Health, also attended the conference and placed the Public Health Laboratories at the disposal of the other departments.

The submsision of evidence already in the hands of the provincial police by General Williams, resulted in a post haste trip by him and Chairman Hales to Oakville, Hamilton and St. Catharines, for the purpose of urging the local authorities to sift the matter to the bottom. Chief License Inspector Ayearst and Inspector Stringer of the Provincial Police were also included in the party.

OSSINGTON, N.Y., July 26. — (United Press).—Charles K. Chapin, former city editor of a New York evening newspaper, now under life sentence for the murder of his wife, is actually ill with gastritis and rheumatic complications. Efforts to reach Governor Smith to have Chapin pardoned are said to have been made by Irvin S. Colch.

and later sent to Lindsay. The first body, found on Saturday, was supposed to be that of Heale, but was later identified as Walter Burgess.

Heale's body was found three-quarters of a mile from the spot where Burgess' body was recovered, and in about the same depth of water, thirty-five feet. It was clothed only in a gym jersey, and around the feet were tangled weeds. It was identified by Edward Hills, director of the St. James' Chapter of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, and Ed. Lant.

Memorial Service

Rev. G. M. Barrow, of St. Monica's Anglican Church, Toronto, conducted a memorial service last night in St. John's Church here, attended by people who are spending the summer at the cottages that surround the lake. The minister spoke on "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for a friend."

Many memorial services were being held, he said, but none would be more pathetic than the one in this little Rosedale church, a few yards from the lake, which was combed for bodies, and being held at just the hour at which the lads had started out.

"Our thoughts," said he, "are for the mothers who are breaking their hearts. There is only a little that we can, but we must do what we can.

"Life," he continued, "isn't judged according to the sucess we make of it, but according to the measure in which we serve. This is the consoling thought. This camp was not only for the building up of the bodies of the boys but the building of spiritual life. We don't begin to do our life's work until we go beyond.

"Those who are gone have been promoted to a higher glory. They have been found worthy. The thing that matters with God is whether we have done our best." Those who have gone have done their best.

More Bodies

The better results expected of the dragging operations today have been attained, more bodies being recovered at noon. It is expected by the searchers that others will be found quickly.

SISTERS TELL OF ARMY WORK

Address Meeting of Women in All Saints' Church.

WELL ATTENDED.

Four of the Sisters of the seven women Church Army Crusaders, who spent the week end in the city, with the eleven men who made up the visiting staff which is at present touring the Eastern section of the Dominion, gave a brief, interesting service at All Saints Church, at three o'clock yesterday afternoon, attended by about two hundred women, for whom the service was exclusively designed.

Sister Beniston, leader of the women of the group, conducted prayer and hymn service, and also spoke briefly on the work of the Crusaders in England, where they walk from place to place. There are about 350 Sisters enlisted in the work at present with some 32 in the training colleges and over 200 working in parishes, where they spend anywhere from three to four years at a time. They also operate lodging homes for the the poor and destitute, hostels for business women and girls, hostels for blind girls, clubs for domestic women and girls in domestic service, and holiday homes for girls engaged in many different avocations. Seventy-five trained workers are busy with the rescue work in the Rescue Training College and the Rescue Homes in London and the provinces. A Medical Mission Department also has its workers, to dispense free medical advice and help to those in need of it, and a holiday home for mothers, where women with children can take their families, but where they are relieved of all care and supervision of them, for the time being, is also maintained by the Sisters of the Church Army Crusade.

The preventive side of the work deals with girls who have become unmanageable at home, and these come from all walks of life, according to Sister Shepherd, who was the next speaker, and who gave an illuminating glimpse of the work carried on in homes maintained by the Crusaders, where such girls are taught the elements of housework in all its branches, and where the "Rule of Love" abounds at all times.

A very telling short discourse on the evils of neglect was then given by Sister Meredith, who asserted that the big sins of life can usually be traced to small beginnings, and that these often have their roots in neglect, in indifference to parental admonitions and in neglect of church rule and attedance. "Neglect is a tragedy," she said, likening human life to a garden, which if cultivated properly will abound with lovely flowers, but if neglected, become overgrown with rank and unwholesome weeds.

The Sister, who spoke in complimentary terms of the beautiful appearance of most Canadian homes, and their well kept, trim grounds and gardens, expressing the hope that such signs of external interest were matched by the interest of the owners in a like spiritual life, where the soul "that valuable piece of land, for which Christ died," was not neglected.

Sister Spenceley then closed the service with a finely sung hymn as a solo. The Sisters were garbed alike in a plain uniform, grey in color and simple in cut, with serviceable black shoes and stocking, and black ties, and broad leghorn hats banded severely with black.

LARGE CROWD HEARS NORRIS

Fort Worth Preacher Makes No Reference to Man He Slew.

SPEAKS ON FAITH.

FORT WORTH, Texas, July 26.—Speaking and gesturing emphatically with the hand that took the life of D. E. Chipps eight days ago, the Rev. J. Frank Norris added 29 people to the fold of the First Baptist Church yesterday morning.

"Now the just shall live by faith; but if any man draw back my soul shall have no pleasure in him. But we are not of them that draw back unto perdition; but of them that believe in the saving of the soul.

"Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," he read as his text from Hebrews 10: 38-39 and 11: 1.

It was a sermon on faith that Dr. Norris preached and it was evident that the 4,000 people in the auditorium knew the meaning of faith in their pastor. The auditorium had empty seats in the corners, but the crowd was not greatly reduced from the overflow number that crammed all space on the previous Sunday to see if this sensation of the pulpit would have nerve enought to preach within a day after killing a man in an office only about 50 feet from where the First Baptist Church pulpit stands.

As on the previous Sunday, he made no mention of the killing.

Marie Prevost and Monte Blue are co-starred in "Other Women's Husbands," the Warner picture which is opening next Wednesday at the Regent Theatre. The supporting cast includes Huntly Gordon, Phyllis Haver, John Patrick and Marjorie Gay; and Erle Kenton directed the production.

The story concerns a man who coveted his friend's wife, introduced the husband, to a gay playmate of his, and set about disrupting a happy household. ST. PETER'S CATHEDRAL.
Rev. P. Butler spoke briefly at the morning Masses at St. Peter's Cathedral yesterday, taking his text from the first Epistle to the Corinthians, 10:6-13, "Now all these things happened to them in figure, and they are written for a warning to us, to whom the ends of the world have come." The Jews of that time committed many sins in the desert, o f idolatry and impurity and complaints against God. St. Paul warns those to whom he writes that the punishments bestowed by the Almighty on their fathers were severe, and that the Corinthians should beware lest they also, through such sins, lose their opportunities of entering into the Promised Land. The same writing applies to modern hearers, who, surrounded by every possible means of achieving grace, yet neglect and destroy their opportunities for salvation.
The pastoral letter written by His Lordship, Bishop O'Brien, to the churches of the diocese, with regard to the situation in Mexico, was also read at the Masses yesterday morning. Prayers for the church and for its persecutors, in Mexico, are enjoined by the Holy Father, to be offered publicly in Roman Catholic churches next Sunday, which is also the Feast of St. Peter in Chains, the patron of the Cathedral here.

FOUR BODIES TAKEN

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord," was the text from which Mr. Wrixon spoke, with brief but touching reference to the boys who had been drowned. They had been boys whose lives were dedicated to the work of the Lord, he said; they had come to camp to be trained in that work. They had died bravely, without a cry or a murmur against the tragic ending of their young lives.
Then Mr. Wrixon thanked the people of the district for the assistance they had given in the search for survivors and for the bodies. Toronto had responded nobly to the call for help.
And, closing the short service, there rolled out over the waters of the lake and un through the silent grove where had been the camp, the music of "Abide With Me," sung by the hundreds who gathered around.

Many Rumors

In such a crowd it was inevitable that rumors should spread, of bodies washed up by the lake, of bodies found in the brush on small islands. None of the rumors could be corroborated, and Provincial Constable Hayston Storey and Inspector E. C. Gurnett told The Examiner they then knew of no other bodies being found than those of Burgess and Heale. All the half-dozen islands have been thoroughly searched, and the shore line of the entire lake is being patrolled regularly by volunteers. Like the surface of the lake, it has been checkerboarded off in sections, and volunteers have assumed responsibility for certain parts. Many Peterborough people are among those doing this work.
Rev. Mr. Wrixon has been quietly effective in the search. He has organized the people of the district into search parties that have left nothing to chance, and his wife has undertaken the feeding of those who are out in boats patrolling or dragging. Mrs. Wrixon, securing the co-operation of many willing ladies around Rosedale and Coboconk, has sent out baskets of food for the men on the tug Harwood and in skiffs and launches, enabling them to work through the day with only a halt for noonday luncheon.
While some were discouraged last night by the meagre success attending the efforts of the searchers, hope was expressed that to-day would see progress made.

Other Local Workers.

P. Blade, J. Nixon and Bud Miller, three Peterborough men, proceeded to the scene of the accident on Thursday morning. They were unable to secure a boat at Rosedale and went on to Fenelon Falls. They obtained a boat there and rowed it back to Rosedale, the point from where the operations were being directed.
When they reached Rosedale the man in charge of the life saving crew refused to let them go out on the lake as he did not consider the boat safe. The Peterborough men had the boat sent back to Fenelon Falls and started out to locate another one.
Eventually they obtained a boat in Rosedale and started out on their gruesome task of dragging for the bodies of the victims.
They had been dragging for some time when they decided to go along the shores of Grand Island and seek traces of the victims and finally located a cap which belonged to one of the boys.
They kept dragging until dusk that night, continued all day Friday, finishing up Saturday night.

Inquest Commences.

FENELON FALLS, Ont., July 26 (Canadian Press).—The inquest into the death of Walter Burgess, one of the eleven victims of the Balsam Lake war canoe tragedy, opened this morning. Coroner Dr. Logan stated that the finding in connection with this inquest would apply to all the others recovered. The jury viewed the remains of Walter Burgess and Gordon Heale, the only ones to have been recovered so far, and then adjourned.
Immediately following the inquest the bodies were sent to Toronto by automobile.

AROUND THE CITY.

The Crescents and Raybestos will play the sixth of their series of seven games to-morrow night at the Exhibition grounds. The Crescents have won three of the five already played and a victory to-morrow night would bring the series to a close. A good game is expected and should draw a large crowd.

The fire department had a busy time around 10.30 this morning, an alarm was received for a grass fire near Queen Alexander School and the blaze got to such proportions that the roofs of the Grace United Church building caught fire. While the department were at this fire a second call was received to a chimnew fire at 573 Bolivar Street. The damage in both cases was slight.

The government employment bureau reports for the week ending July 24th; applicants 31, placements 43, on the list 58.

HAS SEEN RECORDS.

The Editor, Peterboro Examiner.
Dear Sir,—I have been out of town for three or four days, and have not had an opportunity of seeing The Examiner to know what had taken place, but I found on my return that Mr. J. H. Burnham had written a letter, which, with his characteristic frankness, he asserts that Mr. Peck did vote against the budget, and that my statement that Mr. Peck voted against the budget is true.
What I declared before was, and which Mr. Burnham admits, that Mr. Peck voted against the budget, which included penny postage, lower cost of automobiles, and reduction of the income tax. The statement of a man of Mr. Burnham's prominence is of considerable value, and Mr. Peck's letter appearing in the same issue of The Examiner is simply a side-stepping, sliding-out excuse.
Mr. Peck dare not assert over his name again that he did not vote against the budget, as he already has once done, because I have seen the records of Parliament, and, notwithstanding Mr. Peck's statement that he did not vote against the budget, the records show that he did, and show that his statement made was not true.
If Mr. Peck's vote had been successful on the budget resolution, and it had been defeated as a result of the vote of Mr. Peck and his friends, this city would have lost the benefit of a decrease in taxation of nearly $100,000.00 a year. In other words the people of this city receive the benefit of a reduction in taxation of nearly $100,000.00 every year, which Mr. Peck opposed in the House of Commons, and voted against.
I have seen Mr. Peck's letter over his signature, in which he denies that he did such a thing, but if he is willing to stand by that denial let him get a letter from the Clerk of the House of Commons, saying that he did not vote against the budget, and I will raise my offer now and give $500.00 to the Saint Vincent's Orphanage and $500.00 to the Children's Aid Society.
Yours faithfully,
G. N. GORDON.

Voice of the people
Peterboro, Ont, July 22, 1926.
Editor, Examiner:
Dear Sir,—Mr. Burnham says the fight between Mr. Gordon and Mr. Peck is an open one, so here is another to the onset.
The question as to how Mr. Peck voted on penny postage and reduction in income tax is not to the point. In my opinion the thing of great importance is that Mr. Peck had an opportunity to vote on these two important bills brought in by the King Government. It is doubtful if he would have had the opportunity to vote on either, had Mr. Meighen and his party been in power at Ottawa. What the people of Peterborough, and of Canada indeed, should bear in mind is that this country has never enjoyed penny postage that was not secured for them by a Liberal government, first under Sir Wilfrid Laurier and now under Mr. King.
And from the manner in which the finances of the country were being handled while Mr. Meighen was at the helm there is room for doubt that he would have the income tax reduction brought down in the last budget if he had not been ousted.
The government of Honorable Mackenzie King was a hard working government. From the day Mr. King completed his cabinet and got down to work there was no grand stand performance, no flag waving, no bluff or bluster to deceive the people; nothing but hard grinding work and the results are quite patent to such as want to check them up in a spirit of fairness.
The national debt has been reduced, business confidence has been restored, tariff adjustments have been made which has boosted the manufacturing industries of the Dominion and not ruined them as the Tory howlers would like people to believe. In fact prosperity has returned to our beloved Canada under the guidance of Mr. King and his advisers. And as to Mr. Peck, he would just vote as he was told anyhow.
A. J. M.

KING COMMENCES ONTARIO CAMPAIGN

Mackenzie King Will Speak in Sarnia Tuesday Night.

OTTAWA, July 26 (Canadian Press)—Hon. Mackenzie King is returning to the capital from his summer home this afternoon and tonight he will leave for Western Ontario where he will hold four meetings during the next four days. There is some rumor of a possible Liberal picnic near Toronto on Saturday but so far as can be learned no definite arrangements have been made.
Next week end Mr. King will start for the west and several meetings are being arranged in Northern Ontario. According to present arrangements Mr. King and Premier Meighen should be in Manitoba at approximately the same time and it would appear as though the western tours of the two leaders may run more or less side by side.
There have been some changes in the western Ontario itinerary of Mr. King since it was first announced last week. As the program now stands, there will be a meeting in Sarnia Tuesday, and a meeting in St. Mary's Wednesday afternoon. On Thursday Mr. King was to have been in Walkerton but this has been changed and now Thursday meeting will be in Chatham. On Friday there will be a night meeting in Windsor.

Stock Prices Are Better But Trading Is Slow

New York, July 26. Canadian Press —Stock prices resumed their upward movement to-day but trading proceeded at a much slower pace with ebbing of the public and professional interest in the markets activities.
Transactions ran at the rate of less than 200,000 shares an hour, the smallest in several weeks.
A revival of the buying activity in railroad shares followed the signs of progress in completing the consolidation plans and the publication of additional favorable earnings reports for June. Numerous gains of 1 to 3½ points included Illinois Central, Seaboard, Union Pacific, Atlantic Coats Line, Chesapeake and Ohio and Louisville and Nashville.
Pending the developments at tomorrow's quarterly meeting the United States Steel fluctuated within a comparatively narrow range but its trend was towards higher ground.
Other prominent industrials such as General Motors, Baldwin, Hudson Motors and Pullman also moved moderately higher.

TORONTO, July 26 (Canadian Press).—Consolidated Smelters led in activity on the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day but its price was weaker, the closing quotation being 1½ lower at 217. The session was only a moderately active one.

MOTOR BOATS ON LONG TOUR

Two Pass Through City at Week-end Bound For New York.

DELIGHTFUL TRIP.

Two forty foot yachts put in to this city Saturday night. One is from Los Angeles and the other is from Detroit. The owners of the boats, Messrs. Van Sycle and Rogers, when interviewed this morning, stated that they had had a wonderful trip down the canal from Georgian Bay and have, since starting out, gone about 900 miles. When asked what they thought of coming through the canal, they said "they had met Frank Stinson, the secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, at the New York Motor Boat Show and it was through him that they took this trip." They also came this way because they wished to tour with their families in a protected waterway.
The two yachts on leaving here headed for the lower Trent and after cruising through Lake Ontario they expect to go on to Quebec, New York, and perhaps Florida.

MOTOR ACCIDENTS.

Woman Hurt and Cars Damaged in Three Smash-ups.

Three automobile accidents occurred in the city last night within a space of two hours.
Miss Brooks was knocked down on the corner of Hunter and Aylmer Streets, about 6.40 p.m. and had her foot injured. The car was driven by W. E. Fanning.
At 7.45 p.m. almost directly opposite the Customs House on George Street a street car ran into a taxicab. The back of the auto was badly dented; the street car had a step broken.
At the corner of George and Charlotte two cars crashed, the only damage being to the fenders.

CAPT. A. G. CASEY GIVES ADDRESS TO ROTARIANS

Church Army Crusader Tells of Improved Prison Conditions.

FEWER PRISONERS.

And Prisons in England Have Been Reduced One Half.

Whereas twenty years ago there were sixty-six prisons in England and an average of 60,000 people spent each night behind the bars, the number of prisons to-day is just thirty-three and the average nightly list of prisoners numbers 10,000, Captain A. G. Casey, head of the Church Army Crusaders, told the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon to-day during a most interesting address on "Humor and Pathos Within the Four Walls of a Prison."
Captain Casey is connected with the short missions branch of the Church Army, among the activities of which is included the duty of holding prison missions, and his stories of prison experiences compromised a talk that closely held the attention of his hearers.
Captain Casey was introduced by Rev. J. L. Hughes of St. George's Church, who gave an interesting explanation of the work of the Church Army.
In commencing his address, Captain Casey referred to the changed conditions in British prisons. The tread mill had gone, to be replaced by useful work, and in the case of convicts serving a long term, this work was designed to learn the prisoner a trade. The food was ample and appetizing, and comparing English prisons of to-day with Canadian institutions he had visited, the speaker felt that the English system was perhaps a little better.
Captain Casey related some most amusing stories that showed that men did not lose their sense of humor behind prison walls. One of these stories is typical of the others. It related the conversation that took place between a prisoner convicted of stealing a watch and another serving a sentence for the theft of a cow. "What time is it?" asked the latter, and the watch thief answered promptly, "Milking time."
The speaker passed on to discuss the efforts of the Church Army in connection with prisoners and to plead for consideration for men who got into trouble, giving illustrations of what had been accomplished in the reformation of old-time convicts. The criminal of to-morrow was in the school to-day, and every chance must be given to the boy if he is to grow up to be a useful citizen.
Rotarian W. R. Morris moved a vote of thanks to the speaker, which was heartily given.

BOOTLEGGERS MUST PAY TAXES ON INCOME FROM THEIR LABORS IS DECISION OF PRIVY COUNCIL

Appeal of Minister of Finance of Canada is Granted.

COSTS AWARDED.

Not Right For Persons To Defeat Taxation Through Wrong Doing.

LONDON, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Bootleggers must pay a Dominion income tax the same as persons engaged in lawful business, according to a decision of the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council given to-day in the appeal of the Canadian Minister of Finance against the decision of the Supreme Court of Canada in the case of Cecil R. Smith of Windsor, Ontario. The appeal was allowed and the respondent Smith was ordered to pay the costs of the appeal.

In giving their judgment Their Lordships said that it did not seem right for persons to defeat taxation through their own wrong-doing.

In 1921 Mr. Smith made a return to the Dominion Income Tax Department, stating his income was $3,500. Not satisfied with the return the Department made inquiries and assessed him on an income of $992,000. Smith appealed to the Exchequer Court against the assessment and the appeal was dismissed. Thereupon he carried his appeal to the Supreme Court, which allowed his appeal, holding that if the definition of income was wide enough to include the profits from bootlegging, it was also wide enough to include the gains from highway robbery and burglary. The Dominion Government appealed to the Privy Council against this decision, with the result that the appeal was allowed.

HOLD CONSULTATION.

Progressives of Frontenac-Addington to Nominate Candidate For Parliament.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 27 (Canadian Press).—The Progressives of Frontenac-Addington will hold a consultation on Saturday of selecting a candidate for the Federal House. The rumor persists that R. J. Bushell, manager of the Kingston Industrial Fair, and a market gardener, will be given the nomination.

John D. Gives "Dimes": Grandsons Give "Tens"

NEW YORK, July 27 (United Press).—There's a difference of just $9.90 between the tips of the first generation of Rockefellers and the third. When John D. 3rd and his brother Nelson, grandsons of the oil king, came home from Europe on Monday, each peeled off a $10 bill for each of the ship's stewards entitled to a gratuity. Their grandfather, it is well-known, favors shiny new dimes for those who receive his largesses.

Little Lemonade Stands Are Found Unsanitary

EVANSTON, July 27 (United Press).—The great juvenile industry of vending "ice cold lemonade, made in the shade and stirred with a spade," has been placed in the same category as outright bootlegging.

Declaring that dirty little fingers and the too casual washing of glasses were unsanitary, health officials here have issued orders closing down all front yard "lemon" stands. Police have been instructed to arrest all enterprising young dealers who are found doing a public business in lemonade without proper pure food certificates.

CONSERVATIVES TO MAKE CHOICE

Convention To Be Held in Victoria Hall To-morrow Evening.

DR. MANION TO SPEAK.

Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Postmaster-General, and Mrs. Howard Fallis, will be the chief speakers at the nomination meeting of the Liberal-Conservative Association to be held in Victoria Hall to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock. V. J. McElderry, president of the Association, will occupy the chair.

Dr. Manion, who represents Fort William and Rainy River, was educated at Trinity College, Toronto, and is the holder of medical diplomas from Glasgow and Edinburgh Universities. He was first elected as a Liberal to the House of Commons in 1917. Previous to the general election of 1921 he entered the Meighen cabinet as Minister of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. He was re-elected as a Liberal-Conservative and has been a consistent supporter of Mr. Meighen during the struggles of recent years.

He served in the Great War, first with the French Army and afterwards with the Canadian Army Medical Corps and was attached to the 21st Canadian Battalion. He gained the Military Cross at Vimy Ridge.

He is the author of "A Surgeon in Arms," and a very fluent and vigorous speaker. It will be recalled that Dr. Manion was the principal speaker at the local Conservative convention last year when Mr. Peck was nominated.

THINK R. ALLAN BODY RECOVERED

A body believed to be that of Raymond Allan was recovered this afternoon and is at present in charge of the Rev. J. D. Paterson. The relatives of the local victim of the Balsam Lake tragedy have gone to the scene to view the remains to make identification certain.

SEARCHERS FIND BODIES FLOATING IN BALSAM LAKE

Total Raised To Eight By Six Recovered Yesterday.

ONE PULLED UP.

Five of Six Found Floating, Mostly Near Scene of Tragedy.

FENELON FALLS, July 27.—Balsam Lake yesterday released its stranglehold on six members of the ill-fated crew of St. Andrew's Brotherhood boys who perished in its depths last Tuesday night.

So with two bodies recovered over the week-end, eight have been taken from the waters — and the search goes on for the other three.

The bodies recovered yesterday were identified as those of Arthur Robert Shea-Butcher, Oliver Mardall, John Wiginton, Joseph Edwards, Jr., Vernon Clarke and Frank Burkitt, all of Toronto.

Found in Marked Section.

With the exception of A. R. Shea-Butcher, who was located two miles from the ill-fated camp at the Kirkfield end of the lake, the bodies were found within three-quarters of a mile of each other in the section of the lake where the other bodies were recovered, the section marked out for the searchers by survivors of the tragedy.

Five of the bodies were found floating. The other, that of Joe Edwards, was recovered from thirty-five feet of water.

The body of Arthur Robert Shea-Butcher, camp director who dropped from the war canoe to lighten it for the other boys, was the first located. At 9 o'clock Mrs. Dr. Law from the Government Farm near Long Point, and a youngster, rowing up the lake in the direction of Kirkfield, about two miles from the scene of the tragedy, saw something floating. Approaching, and seeing that it was a body, they returned to shore near the Long Point camp and notified a cottager, H. J. Johnson, who, with an assistant, went out, and at 10.30 brought in the body, which was drifting rapidly toward Kirkfield, to the site of the camp. Coroner Logan of Lindsay was informed, and the body was removed to Lindsay.

Papers Found in Pockets.

The body was clothed in an undershirt, khaki shirt, shoes. On the little finger of the right hand was a ring bearing the dead leader's initials, R. S. B. In the pocket of the khaki shirt were lead pencils, a fountain pen, a notebook carrying memoranda on affairs at the camp, and papers which Shea-Butcher had signed to clear the war canoe through locks in the trip made from Chemong to Balsam Lake.

Then at 11.10 the bodies of Mardall and Wiginton were located by Toronto life-savers. The boys had died together. Dragging up the lake in the section marked out by survivors Superintendent Lang saw the bodies ahead of the life-saving boats.

Wiginton lay with his arms outstretched. His knees were locked tight underneath Mardall's armpits. From the attitude it might be surmised that Wiginton was swimming with a back stroke, pulling Mardall. But Edward Lant of the camp said that of the two Mardall was the better swimmer. His heroism in attempted rescue work had been cited before. He may have been trying to keep Wiginton on the surface when they were drowned.

Went Down Together.

According to Superintendent Lang of the Toronto Life-Savers, nothing

SOCIAL SERVICE COUNCIL ASKS FOR UNITED ACTION ON PART OF ALL CITIZENS IN CAMPAIGN

Recommends the Summary Removal From Any Position of Public Honor Any Person Guilty of Violation of the Law.

KIND OF GOVERNMENT RESTS ON CITIZENS.

Suggests That the People in Every Community, Regardless of Creed and Party, Organize To Render Non-Partisan Service.

TORONTO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—The Social Service Council of Canada, a federation of social welfare organizations with nation-wide activities, is issuing "An election appeal to Canadian citizens," under the signatures of its president, Rev. L. Norman Tucker, D.D., of London, Ont., and its secretary, Rev. J. Phillips Jones of Toronto.

Declaring "The Council allies itself with no political group, but at the present crisis in the nation's history sends out this manifesto calling on all citizens to united action for the good of the Dominion," it proceeds to review the investigation into the customs department and proceeds as follows: "Because of the intense anxiety of both historic political parties to possess office, and the power that goes with it, the parliament just dissolved has failed in its duty to the nation. Though the session cost the people a very large sum of money, neither of the prime functions of Parliament was fulfilled. There was no adequate provision for public service. Useful legislation was abandoned. Instead of public spirited attention to the nation's business, there was a deplorable spectacle of Parliament engaged for nearly six months in a struggle for party advantage and an obvious jockeying for control of election machinery."

After recording "the evident failure of the Civil Service Commission to free the public service from the pernicious influence of patronage," the manifesto proceeds as follows: "The Council therefore records its conviction that among the measures that are indispensable, if national morality and efficiency are to be assured, are the following:

"1) The summary removal from any position of public honor and trust of any person or official guilty of participation in, or connivance with, violation of the law whether such person is elected by the people or appointed by the Crown.

"(2) Vigorous prosecution and adequate punishment, untrammelled by personal, social, financial or political influence, of all law breakers.

"(3) To eliminate the unseemly jockeying for control of election machinery, there should be set up a permanent non-party organization for the conduct of elections.

"(4) All political organization, as well as candidates for public office, should be required to publish detailed sworn statements, showing all contributions to election expenses and party funds."

Drawing attention to the responsibility of the voter, the manifesto proceeds: "The Council calls the attention of all Canadian citizens to the fact that the ultimate responsibility for the quality of Government rests upon themselves. Neglect or misuse of the subversion of the franchise to party or personal ends is a fundamental cause of much of the political impurity so greatly deplored."

The Council then makes the following suggestions:

"(1) That in each community at the earliest possible moment, the citizens of all creeds and political parties who stand for clean government organize themselves into a citizens' committee to render non-partizan service in this election.

"(2) That where nominating conventions have not been held, members of such committees endeavor to secure the nomination of candidates of known character and ability who can be depended upon to support the principles and measures herein advocated.

"(3) That where candidates are already in the field, the committee should secure from each candidate a definite statement of his attitude to these suggested measures, and his willingness to support them in parliament, even against his own party if necessary.

"(4) That having received the answers of the candidates, the committee consider such answers as well as the character and record of each candidate and take whatever action they may deem expedient."

FRENCH CABINET WILL DEMAND POWER TO SOLVE DIFFICULTY

Ratification of Foreign Debt Postponed Till Autumn Session.

MUST SAVE HERSELF.

Taxation Must Be Increased and Production Intensified Throughout Country.

PARIS, July 27 (Canadian Press)—Premier Poincare's newly formed cabinet, having agreed on its ministerial declaration yesterday, will go before the Chamber of Deputies today and demand that the government be given power to solve France's pressing nancial difficulties, by decrees instead of having its bills debated at length in parliament.

According to several of the best informed members, the cabinet has decided to let ratification of the Washington and London debt agreements go over until parliament reconvenes next autumn. This also is accepted as meaning that Premier Poincare will not seek foreign credits in rehabilitating the franc.

Meanwhile, the slogan of the ministry of "National Reconciliation" is: "France Must Save Herself by her own means." This is accepted in political circles as indicating that direct and indirect taxation must be increased and that production must be intensified throughout the country.

The ministerial declaration which was agreed upon at yesterday's meeting of the cabinet, will be short. Minister of the Interior Sarraut and of Pensions Marin will ask the Rules Committee of the Chamber today to accord urging treatment to government measures which are designed to increase the influx of taxes and thereby to help in improving the exchange.

The sudden arrival, before the end of the cabinet council of General Gouraud, Military Governor of the Paris Area, gave rise to numerous alarmist rumors. These persisted until it was given out officially that he was merely paying a courtesy call on the new premier before going on a month's leave and that it was only an accident that he happened to arrive before the cabinet meeting had adjourned.

Both the ministers of the Interior and of Colonies denied that his call was concerning the question of reinstating General Gouraud as High Commissioner in Syria to replace High Commissioner Henry de Jouvenel, as was reported in the afternoon papers.

Premier Poincare's financial plans for the redemption of the franc and the restoration of the French treasury, which the cabinet council for three successive days has been elaborating, omprise ten principal clauses according to semi-official information available after the ministers separated at 7:30 o'clock last evening.

The advice of the experts committee has been followed in many respects, notably regarding the necessity of additional indirect and direct taxation. From these sources alone, the government expects to obtain 2,500,000,000 francs, during the second six months of 1926.

Railroad, freight and passenger rates will be increased; a readjustment will be made in taxes on imports of foodstuffs from the colonies, such as coffee, rice and vanilla; the tax on the business turnover will be made uniorm at two per cent. and customs tariffs will be increased. These four items are expected to bring in about two billion francs additional.

Concerning the changes in direct taxation the new schedule is left in the hands of M. Bokanowski, Minister of Commerce, who will report to the cabinet in due course. The other clauses have not yet been announced either semi-officially or officially,

It is reported on good authority however, that the changes in direct taxation comprise revision of the income tax and a levy on inheritances, and the exepected revenue from these will be devoted to a sinking fund.

The cabinet intends to make a strong effort to reduce the expenditures of the administration. The premier on this point alone will require power to legislate by decree, with the probability that many employes will be discharged.

The behaviour of the franc on the Paris Bource today was interpreted as indicating a general belief that the cabinet will receive a good majority in the chamber and practically unanimity in the senate. Opening at 49.40 to the dollar and 196.50 sterling, the franc rose steadily until it was quoted at noon at 38.87 and 188.50. A slight reaction then sat in. The official closing figures were 39.075 to the dollar and 190 sterling.

An official statement announced that there had been no intervention in the market on the part of the government in behalf of the franc. Its improvement was due solely to the changed political situation of the country, it was averred in Bourne circles.

Rods Franklin Installed Are Replaced At St. Paul's

LONDON, July 27 (Canadian Press).—New lightning rods are being installed on St. Paul's Cathedral, which Benjamin Franklin originally equipped with lightning conductors.

In 1770 he was in England in connection with the difficulties Great Britain was having with her American Colonies, which were becoming very restless, and it was at this time he helped to instal the conductors.

The original rods were iron. The engineers, who are now adjusting copper rods, have a fragment of the original iron conductor which the American devised.

ALCOHOL CAME FROM BUFFALO BURIED IN COAL

Discovery of Mode of Entry Claimed By Provincial Police.

HOT ON TRAIL.

TORONTO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—More than 100 gallons of wood alcohol which is said to have been the "liquor" that caused the deaths of 18 persons in Ontario in the last few days, arrived at an Ontario town from the United States, secreted in a car of coal, according to information secured by the Provincial police, it is declared on good authority to-day. The police have been able to gather valuable information at Oakville and other points where deaths have occurred. It is said that several Italians are implicated in the importation of the death-dealing fluid.

While Government officials are loath to display any information they may possess, fearing that it will injure the case they are building up, it is learned that the alcohol was probably loaded into the car at Blackrock, near Buffalo, N.Y., and later removed from the car in the Ontario city where the car was unloaded on a siding. With the discovery of the mode of entrance, Provincial police are said to be hot on the trail of those responsible for the shipment. In fact it is admitted in two official sources to-day that a Hamilton man is held responsible by the police.

Although the Hamilton Chief of Police is said to hold the opinion that the alcohol arrived in that city from Kitchener, Government authorities are confident that their theory is correct and all operations are being carried out on that basis.

ATTACKED BY CATS SERIOUSLY INJURED

Tom Cats Turn on Child That Was Playing Nearby.

NORTH BAY, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Attacked by a pair of tom cats the little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marquette of Callander, is suffering from terrible scratches and only the timely arrival of her mother in answer to her screams prevented her receiving much worse injuries. The cats were fighting in the back yard of the Marquette home when the child ran past them. Turning their attention from the fight to the child, both animals sprang on her. Her screams brought her mother to her assistance, but it was only after she had also been badly scratched that she was able to beat off the felines.

DISSOLUTION SECURED IN 1911 SAME AS THIS YEAR'S CLOSING MEIGHEN DECLARES AT SYDNEY

If Conservatives Have Insulted House, Laurier Did Same, He Adds.

WAS KING'S PLANS.

Prime Minister Promises Policy of "Reasonable Protection, Fairly Applied."

SYDNEY, N. S., July 27.—(Canadian Press.)— "On constitutional matters the late Prime Minister enjoys bad health," declared Premier Meighen here last night, dealing with the campaign keynote speech of Mr. Mackenzie King. "He loves to rave about usurpers and to be doubled up with constitutional pangs," Mr. Meighen added. "Whenever Mr. King is out of powder the constitution is in danger."

"Mr. King complained," went on Mr. Meighen, "that we insulted Parliament by securing dissolution without completing the business of the session and having formal prorogation. If this is so Sir Wilfrid Laurier insulted Parliament also in 1911, for the dissolution then was just as sudden; there was no formal prorogation, no finishing of business— the members learned of dissolution in the corridors and on the streets. No one then complained of Parliament being insulted because there was no one in politics at that time who had chronic constitutional phlebitis. Sir Wilfrid Laurier's course was perfectly proper, so was ours.

"Had Mr. King got his dissolution when he asked for it on Monday, June 28, the result to Parliament would have been exactly the same and Mr. King and everyone who has the slightest knowledge of Parliament affairs knows it. Mr. King would like the country to believe now that all he asked the Governor-General for was assurance that some time later he could get dissolution; that is, after the session's work had been completed and formal prorogation had taken place. This, in face of the record, is just chatter and nonsense. In the first place a Prime Minister would scarcely resign because he couldn't get a promise of what a Governor-General might do at some later time and under some other circumstances. If a Prime Minister could be found who would resign on that account he would not likely choose the moment between a debate on a vote of censure and the vote itself to announce his resignation.

"A Mere Formality"

"In the next place, Mr. King told Parliament on June 28 that he had asked His Excellency that day at noon 'to grant a dissolution,' and that His Excellency had refused. He told Parliament also, on June 20, that he had the day before presented to His Excellency an order-in-council dissolving Parliament, which order-in-Council His Ecellency said he was unable to assent to. If His Excellency had assented to such order-in-Council His Excellency said Mr. King, and delivered it to Mr. King, Parliament would by that act have been immediately dissolved. Mr. King told Parliament that he resigned because His Excellency refused to do this. It is a little late now to be telling us that he really did not intend His Excellency to sign and deliver the order, but that it was only presented as a mere formality.

"The proof adduced that Mr. King's Government intended to formally prorogue is amusing. He says he had the formal order prepared. So had we. Indeed, the speech from the Throne to be delivered at prorogation was also prepared by myself and completed. Those things are always prepared in advance of prorogation. But when later dissolution was decided on, whether by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, by Mr. King, or by the Government of which I am the head, this superseded all else, and the assent of His Excellency thereto immediately dissolved Parliament.

Mistaken Often

"Mr. King assumes a low level of intelligence on the part of the people of Canada. In this he has proven himself mistaken more than once in the past.

DISSOLUTION SECURED

"Very suddenly Mr. King has become exceedingly solicitous that no one shall think he would attack the Governor-General. His first word in Parliament on the famous June 28, just before he announced his resignation, was to complain of His Excellency for having refused his dissolution. Those who will read Hansard of June 30 and July 1 will have no difficulty in understanding the character of the campaign Mr. King then intended to conduct. He has learned a lesson since and now seeks to convince the people that he intended to only attack myself. It seems a pity that he gave the wrong direction to his lieutenant, Mr. Bourassa, and to many another Liberal who is now ringing the charges against the Governor-General wherever it is thought that such a campaign can safely be waged."

Would Remove Discrimination

Premier Meighen emphasized his policy of "reasonable protection fairly applied." He declared that, under his Government, tariff discrimination against the Maritimes would be removed, and that there would be protection against depreciated currency.

"We are asking for a mandate," exclaimed the Prime Minister. "When we get that mandate then a policy will be put into effect of reasonable protection, not for one section, not for one industry, but for every section and every industry of this Dominion. And this statement I make: It won't matter whose vote we need to stay in office; if we can't get it on the faith of our protection policy then we won't have the vote. We will go out of office and appeal to the people of Canada. The whole nation knows now where we stand."

G.A.U.V. MEETING IS ANNOUNCED

Dominion Convention To Be Held in Kamloops Next Month.

TO DISCUSS UNITY.

TORONTO, July 27.—H. McLeod, Dominion Secretary of the Grand Army of United Veterans, announces that the seventh annual convention of the organization will assemble at Kamloops, B.C., on August 9, for a seven-day session. Branches from all provinces in the Dominion will be represented, including fraternal organizations and representatives from branches of the G.A.U.V. operating in the United States from Michigan to Florida.

Considerable interest is being taken in this convention, which may be the last in which the association will figure, in view of the inauguration of the Canadian Legion of the B.E.S.L. An important question to be decided will be relationship to the Legion, and whether the association shall enter it as a body, and lose its identity, or seek an affiliation, cooperating in every way with the legislation and other proposals put forward by the Legion in the name of all veterans.

Whatever policy is adopted, the G.A.U.V., it is announced, will speak in no uncertain voice, and make its decision known. The G.A.U.V., it is claimed, have been pioneers on the question of unity and amalgamation. The association, as it is known today, is a composite association made up of the Grand Army of Canada and the United Veterans' League.

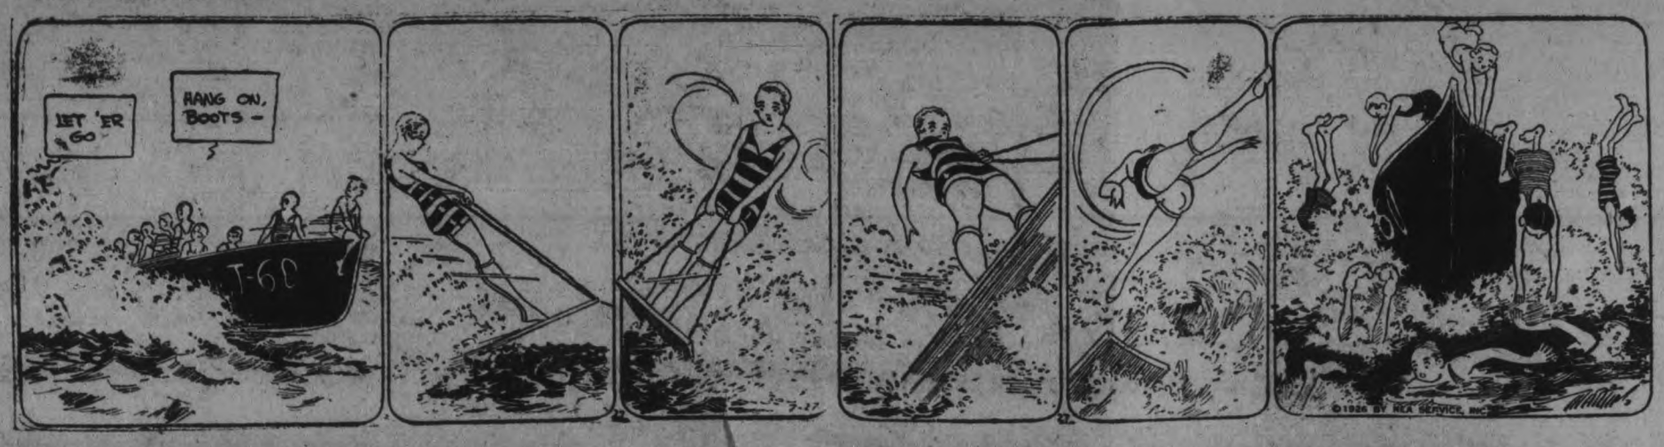
"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"



POINCARE WINS CONFIDENCE BY LARGE MAJORITY

Chamber of Deputies Votes in His Favor After Hearing Statement.

ANOTHER VICTORY.

Chamber Agrees To Give Extraordinary Procedure on Bill.

PARIS, July 27 (Canadian Press) —Premier Poincare's new government was given a vote of confidence in the Chamber of Deputies this afternoon. The vote, which came after the reading of the ministerial declaration of policy, was made on the question of adjourning all interpellations until the financial bill had been discussed and passed. The Premier asked that this be done, and made the matter one of confidence in the Government. The vote was 358 to 131.

The Ministerial declaration said the Government was profoundly convinced that it is possible to improve the conditions of French finances rapidly and raise the value of the national currency. It stated that the Government has decided in order to avert fresh dangers of inflation, to vote indispensable supplementary receipts and make important economies.

Poincare won a second victory when the chamber voted 418 to 31 on his request for extraordinary procedure on the financial bill which was referred to the finance committee.

HAVELOCK LADY GETS BIG TROUT

Mrs. Holdcroft Gets Three Fish Weighing Over Two Pounds.

OTHER BIG ONES.

It has fallen to the lot of few fishermen to catch a brook trout weighing four pounds two ounces, but the feat was accomplished by a lady, Mrs. Holdcroft, of Havelock. Mrs. Holdcroft was also successful in landing two others of the same species weighing respectively three pounds seven ounces and two pounds fifteen ounces.

Dr. Holdcroft has to his credit one trout weighing two pounds fourteen ounces.

These fish were all caught with a rod and line in Beloporine creek, near Havelock.

Russell Green, of Havelock, caught a trout weighing two pounds seven ounces in Plato creek, which runs through the centre of the village.

The size of these can readily be estimated when it is considered that the average brook trout is from half a pound to one and a half pounds.

The five fish have been mounted and are on exhibit in McLeod's Drug Store and Fowler's Optical Parlor windows.

Peterson Cobalt Mines, Limited, have received a substanial cash payment under financial contracts recently entered into with the underwriters, Engineer Russell has been advised to prepare for any early reopening of the property. In the case of this company, the task of pumping our the old workings will be as expensive as is usual in such cases. While the underground development has been considerable—on the West side of the Lake at least—the management were far-sighted enough, before last operations were concluded, to erect substantial bulk heads at strategic points. It is thus possible to pump out one section of the mine at a time and at a comparatively trifling cost. It is understood that work will not commence in the northern section of the mine, in what is known as the little Nipissing lease. The workings in this section have been driven close to the Diabase and as the adjoining O'Brien is understood to have secured phenomenal values in similar Diabase, the hope of the management to locate ore bodies seems to be well founded.

Unique Location

According to Cobalt authorities, the outlook is most promising. Peterson Cobalt is the second largest single property in Cobalt and the major portion of its claims have never been developed nor adequately explored. The property is entirely surrounded by the big Nipissing, which has been the largest silver producer in the camp, while the rock formations appear to be identical with many of the adjoining large producers of silver. It is well-known that one of the major faults in the Cobalt camp lies north and south under the bed of Peterson Lake. This is a Keewatin-Diabase contact from which series of rocks the greater amount of Cobalt's recent silver production has been drawn.

Up to date the property has been operated almost entirely by various leases. Large amounts of silver have been produced from a comparatively small portion of the claims, but so far, the Diabase has not been adequately developed. On the adjoining O'Brien mine, the Diabase is given credit for approximately 75 per cent of the production. The Diabase on the Peterson-Colbalt seems to be similar and as it lies in contact with the Keewatin, all the conditions appear to exist for the discovery of ore bodies. The real present underground workings have been driven practically up to the contact. The company is fully equipped with mining plant and mill. The effort to re-establish it as a large silver producer is being watched with interest.

Cool Weather In Canada Causes Setback In Wheat

CHICAGO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Prospects of less intense heat in Canada tended to ease down the wheat market during the early dealings to-day. On declines in price, however, aggressive buying quickly developed. Opening at 3-8c off to ¼c up, wheat underwent a moderate general set-back. Corn showed relative firmness, starting unchanged to 5-8c lower, but soon rising in some cases to well above yesterday's finish. Oats were inclined to sag. Provisions held about steady.

New Records Reached By New York Stocks

NEW YORK, July 27 (Canadian Press).—New high records for the year were established by nearly a dozen issues on the resumption of the upward movement in to-day's stock market. Trading was extremly dull. Call money rates continued relatively easy.

The sudden upturn in General Motors, which carried that stock to a record high above 172 1-2, was characterized in some quarters as a stock market coup by professional operators sponsoring the rise in that stock. Other motors, particularly those believed to harbor big interests, rallied.

Rail shares continued to respond to the excellent characters of most of the June earnings reports now being published.

Small Price Changes In Mine Stocks To-day

TORONTO, July 27.—(Canadian Press.)— Trading was inclined to be dull and featureless on standard mining exchange to-day, with only slight fluctuations in prices recorded.

Noranda gained 15 cents to 16.85, Gold Hill dropped a half cent to 68, while West Dome was up 3-4 at 15, and Kirkland was 1 1-4 higher at 15. Hollinger was off ten cents at 19.40, McIntyre was up 10 cents at 25.70. Lake Shore gained five cents to 12.35, and Wright Hargraves lost ten cents to 8.40. Keeley Silver advanced two cents to 1.67 and Mining Corporation three cents to 4.00.

Fishing Leader To-day In Dull Market Session

TORONTO, July 27. — (Canadian Press.) — British Columbia Fishing shares led the market in strength and activity on the Toronto stock exchange to-day, the session being dull and featureless. Fishing closed a half higher at 76.

Massey Harris common showed considarble strength with a two point gain to 63, while the preferred ranged from 95 to 95 1-2 as compared with the previous close of 95 3-4. International Nickle was up 5-8 at 38 1-8 and Smelters advanced 3-4 to 217 3-4. Imperial Oil was a quarter higher at 35 1-2, while Standard Bank showed strength with a gain of one to two points at 193 to 194. Brazilian was unchanged at 99 7-8. Dome Mines was weak at 10.20 to 10.30, as compared with the previous close of 10.40.

Daily Short Story

IN SPITE OF P.

Probably if Will Hamilton's father and mother had not died and left him a battered old homestead just before he became engaged to Elizabeth Morton, they would have been happy.

Elizabeth had a hobby which was both absorbing and practical. She made marionettes, wrote little plays in which to cast them and built the stages and equipment. Then, for a percentage of receipts, she gave entertainments in her own and adjoining villages. She was more than ordinarily clever at this work and the character she managed to express in moulding the features of the puppets bespoke a future for her genius if she would but pursue it seriously.

At home she had only the use of her own room for her work. There was a large family and she could not usurp their rights. Therefore, perhaps further in the back of her mind than she realized, was the ideal of the studio she would some day have in her own home.

Elizabeth and Will Hamilton had been village children together, high school comrades. Later on there seemed to be no necessity for declaring their love. It was a sort of take-for-granted alliance and they were both happy, being young and busy.

But when within two years Will's parents were taken away, and he found himself the sole occupant of an old-fashioned, gloomy homestead, he began to feel the need of Elizabeth.

He spoke to her and they became really engaged. In their newly acknowledged relationship they found much joy—for a time. And then, when serious discussion of marriage ensued, there came the disagreements. Will could not quite see why a girl would not be happy coming into his old house. How could he know of her dreams of a far, far different nest, a home in which she could continue her work, surround herself with all the things she felt she needed, and, at the same time, be all that he needed, sweetheart wife, homemaker?

One tiny disagreement led to another. They were growing far apart, and at last they had decided that they were not meant for each other. At least, this is what they told each other.

Will, being the sort of man who had never made a serious study of human beings, much less women, finally had taken Elizabeth at her word and had seized the golden opportunity in his field, that of real estate, to go to Florida. Before going he had disposed of the old house that had been the original bone of contention, and it was torn down by housewreckers.

Weeks passed. Elizabeth was lonely. Will, even though he had met success in Southern ventures, could not fill the vacancy left in his life by the passing of Elizabeth. He was about to decide on a bold plan.

A letter from one of his friends back in the home town put the final decision on his tentative venture. The letter merely remarked that Elizabeth was looking a trifle pale wistful, he thought.

Nothing had so stimulated Will since he went to Florida. This carelessly dropped bit of information about the girl he loved gave him hope. He went about with all his energy trying to get enough material and workmen to put up a lovely bungalow in the new city by the sea.

Everything in the way of lumber and building mediums had been contracted for, so great was the rush to this Florida spot. And Will found himself telegraphing to a big firm of housewreckers whom he knew in a city near his home town. He asked them to send him, specifically, doors, windows, a couple of mantlepieces—anything that they could, at once.

In a very short time he had built a home as nearly like the one he had fancied Elizabeth wanted as it was possible for a mere man to reproduce from fragmentary remarks.

When he was ready he wired to Elizabeth: "I have a home for us—a new one with a studio for my girl. Will she come?"

Her reply was merely: "Yes—will write."

But instead of her coming down to Florida, Will went back home to be married, and when they entered their new house together the first thing that caught the eye of the bride was a familiar mantlepiece.

"Why—Will!" she cried.

"Yes, dear. Let me tell you about it. It is a romance indeed. I could get no materials here of any sort so I sent back to a house-wrecking firm and asked them to send me what they could to help out with the building of this home. To my wonderful surprise there were several bits that had been taken from my own old home. The people I sold it to had it torndown by a wrecker, and he, in turn, sells it where he can. It is like a fairy tale that the doors and mantlepieces of the very home you didn't like, but which I loved out of childhood association should have been picked out to send here for our new house. Do you mind?"

Elizabeth tried to tell him that she had never dreamed of anything so charming as the home he had built for her.

"And I shall love it all the more because it will seem a part of you—the boy I have always loved."

"It is compromise, by Fate, of our silly misunderstandings, dear."

DIVER AT BALSAM LAKE.

A. Skinner, an experienced diver, this week joined the large party of searchers in quest of the bodies of victims of the war canoe tragedy, where eleven were drowned in Balsam Lake, Ont., last Tuesday. The diver is working from the government tug Harwood, at depths ranging from 25 to 45 feet. One picture shows the heavy plate-glass and netal headpiece adjusted by his assistant Robert Macdonald, prior to the descent to the sandy bottom of the lake. The other picture shows a group of workers aboard the tug, who have actively prosecuted the search for five days.

FOUR MORE DIE FROM ALCOHOL

Men From Hamilton and Lockport Succumb To Poisoning.

LIQUOR FOUND.

TORONTO, July 27. — Poison liquor, responsible for over 30 deaths in the past few days in Ontario and points just across the border, has led to a co-ordinated drive between the police of Toronto, Hamilton, Oakville, St. Catharines, the Provincial police and the O.T.A. enforcement squad being organized by Col. Hon. W. H. Price, acting Attorney-General, with the result that a thorough combing of border haunts of the bootleg ring is under way, in collaboration with the police of New York State.

Meanwhile poison liquor continues to take its toll. Four more men died yesterday afternoon or evening. They were:

Thomas Johnston, Hamilton; Robert Little, Hamilton; Earl Russell, Lockport, N.Y., and Robert Neville, Lockport, N.Y.

The death of Little occurred at Bridgeburg, Ont., where he had been staying.

General V. A. S. Williams, Chief of the Provincial police, returned to Toronto at 11 o'clock last night after visiting Oakville, Hamilton and St. Catharines, with information which he was to lay before Colonel Price this morning. The latter stated that it looked as though the poisonous concoction sold for whiskey came from Buffalo. General Williams was accompanied on his organization trip by James Hales, chairman of the Ontario License Board, and Inspector Ayearst, who was left at Oakville. Inspector Marsh, of Toronto, was sent to Hamilton, and Inspector Stringer to St. Catharines.

Discovery of two one-gallon tins of bootleg liquor hidden in a clump of bushes at Oakville, near the home of George Gill, one of the poison victims, will be of value to the police for analysis purposes, and for tracing the liquor to what is believed to be its common source.

News of the four further deaths was received last night, Thomas Johnston, of Hamilton, dying in hospital there; Robert Little, of Hamilton, dying at Bridgeburg, and Earl Russell and Robert Neville succumbing in Lockport, N.Y.

It is hoped that further poisonings will be avoided now that the general public is apprised of the terrible toll taken by the moonshine.

Since 1909 the gold mines of northern Ontario have produced $200,000,000 worth of gold.

BE SURE OF YOUR FRANCHISE.

The registration of voters for the Federal election is to commence in Peterboro next week, and while as yet the campaign has not caused any great stirring of interest, The Examiner hopes that those who have reason to believe that their names will not appear on the voters' lists will protect themselves by applying to the registrar in their respective districts.

It is the duty of every elector to see that he has a vote, and that he uses it, and the first step is to take advantage of the registration sittings to have names added that would otherwise not appear on the lists.

It is much simpler to make the additions during the registration than it is to appear before the revising officer later on, and it is to be hoped that this fact will be impressed upon every elector.

The result of the coming election may carry with it very weighty consequences, and it is a matter of vital importance that every person who is entitled to a vote should have his or her name on the list.

No elector, worthy of being given the privilege of the franchise, should throw upon the political organizations the responsibility of seeing that that franchise is protected.

That should be regarded as a personal duty and discharged willingly and gladly.

DEADLY POISON.

The probe started by the Ontario Government into the poison liquor tragedies should be, and doubtless will be, as complete and thorough as possible.

The location of the source of supply and the apprehension of the parties responsible for the manufacture and sale of this deadly beverage are all that will satisfy the public, shocked by the terrible toll that has been taken within the past few days by bootleg whiskey.

In the meanwhile the warning of Hon. W. H. Price, Acting Attorney-General, against the danger of drinking liquor obtained from unauthorized sources should be generally acted upon.

While most illicit manufacturers in using denatured alcohol put it through a process of refining and redistillation to remove the poison, a section of Ontario has apparently been flooded with poisoned stuff that has not been so treated.

How big this shipment of deadly alcohol was or how extensive has been its sale have not yet been determined, and the public is warned to be on guard against drinking alcoholic beverages about the origin of which there is any doubt.

The "poison hootch" blinds its victim and they die in agony within a few hours after imbibing; in fact, one drink is usually enough to cause death.

SHOULD BE A GUIDE.

The inquest into the circumstances surrounding the death of the eleven victims of the Balsam Lake tragedy should be exhaustive, in view of the desirability of making the sad affair a guide and a warning to protect the public.

In spite of the horror caused by the sudden taking of eleven young lives, boys' camps will continue to be a feature of summer activities in this country.

Young Canadians respond naturally to the outdoor life, the spirit of adventure and the call of woodland and lake, and boys will continue to fill the camps in spite of the tragedy at Balsam Lake.

Because that is so it is of the greatest importance that everything that can be learned about the causes of that accident shall be available for the guidance of those who will have the responsibility of protecting the lives of many young people.

Particularly should there be a full investigation into the qualities of the craft used, the manner in which it was loaded, the amount of paddling experience possessed by its crew, and other factors of the same nature, inasmuch as it is along these lines that camp directors should have the most complete guidance available.

Out of it should come assurance to mothers everywhere that any mistakes that may have caused this terrible tragedy will be impossible in other camps.

NOT A SHOOTING-BLIND FOR SNIPERS.

Inadvertently a letter appeared in "The Voice of the People" column of last evening's Examiner which, although it dealt with political matters, was signed merely with the initials of the writer.

The letter got into print through a mistake, and its appearance must not be taken as a precedent, because in the present campaign, as in the last one, The Examiner's policy is to refuse to publish any communications of a political nature unless the full name and address of the writer are also published.

While we are anxious to do our part in providing an avenue for the free discussion of political issues, for our own protection and to preserve space for the news of the day, it is essential that the flood of correspondence on such topics should be kept within bounds, and experience has taught that the simplest and most effective check is to insist that the names of the writers must be published.

There are in every political party men who would take a supreme delight in filling newspapers with their views on the issues provided they could do so from the safe shelter of a nom de plume.

So long as their identity remained hidden they could be counted upon to burn the midnight oil in search of scorching criticism of their adversaries.

The Examiner, however, declines to act as a shooting-blind for the rival snipers, and will refuse to print any letter in regard to politics where the writer will not allow his name and address to appear in print at the bottom of his communication.

BRAVERY.

The public has been greatly shocked to read of the terrible tragedy on Balsam Lake, in which all but four of a party of fifteen young men from a summer camp were drowned by the upsetting of a canoe. The story of how they clung to the upturned craft hour after hour, slipping off one by one as strength gave out, is too harrowing to repeat in this place, but there are features of the catastrophe which will be remembered as long as deeds of heroism are recorded. Many of these young men sacrificed themselves in the hope that they would thus improve the chances of others being saved. Alas! that their hopes should have been in vain! One boy left the canoe to try to swim ashore and summon help. He was unsuccessful and perished in the attempt. Another deliberately swam off to make room for another. The full story of how those doomed young people helped and encouraged each other during those awful hours, when death claimed victim after victim, has not yet been told; but enough is known to prove that the spirit of Canadian youth is essentially heroic. It is noble deeds like these which establish the tradition of a nation, and this Dominion has the very highest traditions to live up to. We must forever honor the memory of the brave and try to emulate their example.

There was another case, which occurred a day or two ago, on Lake Scugog, fortunately unattended with fatality, when a young fellow of sixteen rescued an older boy from drowning, by paddling, at great risk, a long distance in a leaky canoe to his assistance, helping him into the boat and bringing him to shore. Other rescues by young people under equally courageous circumstances are recorded in the press almost daily. One account concerns the action of a Boy Scout who not only dived after and brought to the surface a four-year-old boy who had fallen out of a boat, but restored life to him by methods of resuscitation he had learned in the course of his Scout training. These accounts serve to teach two important lessons—first, that danger lurks in being too venturesome in the water; secondly, that, when an accident does occur, a manly part should be played. Avoid all dangerous situations; but also be prepared for what may happen. Learn to swim. It not only increases your own chance of escaping disaster, but it gives you the power of helping and it may be saving the lives of others. And under all circumstances play the man, like a true Canadian.—Hamilton Spectator in an editorial for young people.

UNIVERSITY EDUCATION COSTS MORE.

Our claim that university education is available to all who want it and not merely an opportunity for the rich and well-to-do seems likely to lose strength in the not distant future. Educational costs have risen greatly since pre-war days due to a variety of reasons, and in spite of endowment campaigns and Government assistance, university authorities everywhere are being driven to consider the need of asking the student to pay more of the cost of his education.

In a statement just issued by the Board of Governors of the University of Toronto the announcement is made of an increase in fees for medical students from $150 to $200 per annum, to apply to all years except the first, and to take effect at the 1927-28 session. With it is considered that within the last few years the length of the medical student's course has been increased from a general average for the medical colleges of four years to six and seven years, it is readily seen that the cost of a doctor's training has increased greatly in a decade or so.

"It is a well-known fact that the fees paid by a university student do not nearly meet the cost of his education," the statement reads. "Indeed, careful computation has shown that the student in medicine pays less than forty per cent. of the cost of his education. While it is true that the Province should meet the cost of a large part of the student's education in the liberal arts and science, the same argument does not hold to the same extent for students in the professional faculties such as medicine, engineering, forestry and dentistry. There is a growing feeling that, in these faculties, those who benefit by the educational advantages provided should pay a larger share of the total cost."

The increase in costs, the statement points out, are a resultant of new buildings, new laboratories and increased equipment which has become necessary to maintain a standard of instruction in keeping with medical progress.

"The work of the physician and surgeon is so important to the health and welfare of the people of the Province and Dominion, and new discoveries are so numerous and so epoch-making, that nothing but the very best of instructional facilities will serve present-day needs."

With regard to the contention that the increase in fees means the shutting out of some students lacking in funds but possessing brains while others with wealth but lesser mental capacity will find entrance, the university authorities, according to this statement, feel that the scholarships and system of loans will overcome such disadvantages.

In conjunction with the increased cost of university education there is undoubtedly less inclination to consider its possession as a crowning mark in personal achievement. That attitude is a slowly dying legacy of the days when the schoolmaster, the minister and the doctor, products of the university, stood solitary in the community as the possessors of learning. To be engaged in trade or business in those days was to belong to a lower social order. To go to college was to be destined for a profession and a profession meant social eminence.

It is partly due to the cheapening of education with its consequent increase in the numbers engaged in professional occupations and partly to the realization, as business widened from a local affair towards its present wide ramifications, that it also required brains that this social eminence of the college-bred man has disappeared. We appear today to be getting to a saner view of the advantages of university education as a means of training the student to be an efficient member of the community rather than as a mere possessor of book learning. And it seems not improbable that in the future the decision for or against a college education will be based chiefly on the value of that training for a specific work in life and that the entrants within university halls will be persons who have demonstrated that they have the capacity for such work and are not mere seekers after an academic degree.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, Ill., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Scorching temperatures and rainless skies over Canada more than offset as a wheat price influence yesterday news of enormous domestic receipts. The wheat market closed unsettled, 5-8 to 1 5-8 net higher. Corn 1-2 to 1 3-4 up; oats showing 3-8 to 3-4 advance, and provisions varying from 15 cents decline to a rise of 5 cents.

Although there was heavy selling to realize profits when wheat prices bulged, the market was tending upward again toward the last, despite 40,159,000 bushels increase of the U. S. visible supply total. Advances, too, were in the face of knowledge that this country's primary arrival of wheat yesterday aggregated 6,722,000 bushels against 3,121,000 bushels a year ago.

Buyers, however, continually eyed reports that a hundred degree hot wave prevailed in the Canadian Northwest, and that no rain appeared on the map.

Crop damage reports from Canada, together with fears of further deterioration led to a buying rush here as soon as the wheat market opened. Besides, Liverpool stocks were decreasing and a wet harvest in parts of Europe was noted as well as 30,000,000 bushels smaller world's visible supply than last year. On the other hand, huge receipts yesterday at Kansas City, 2,121 cars compared with 695 a year ago, attracted notice, but demand from millers remained excellent, and cash prices were but little lower relatives to futures either at Kansas City or Chicago.

Corn and oats rose with wheat. Unfavorable crop advices relative to corn were received from Ohio and Indiana and likewise from parts of Iowa and Nebraska. Oats threshing returns were disappointing.

Commission house selling tended to weaken the provision market.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE

MONTREAL, July 27 (Canadian Press). — Sales on the Montreal grain market yesterday were confined to small lots. The foreign demand was extremely quiet and the local trade was only fair.

Prices for Spring and Winter wheat grades of flour were well maintained, but the volume of business transacted in both cases was small.

done in most lines of millfeed and the undertone was firm. Trade in standard grades of rolled oats was dull but prices were steady.

Extreme dullness marked the butter trade, but prices ruled steady. The receipts were 2,173 packages.

The cheese market continued inactive and Western grades were offered at 16 3-4 to 17 cents per pound. The receipts were 15,406 boxes.

Owing to the warm weather prevailing, the trade in eggs was quiet but the feeling was steady. The receipts were 1,114 cases.

WESTERN GRAIN REPORTS

WINNIPEG, July 27 (Canadian Press).—While many districts in the West were visited by hail during the past week, damage to crops was comparatively slight, and crop conditions, if any different, are a trifle better than a week ago, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian National Railways issued yesterday.

Rye cutting is now proceeding in Manitoba and will be general in ten days, when barley cutting will also begin. In Brandon district it is expected wheat will be ready for the binder in ten days.

Many points in the three provinces which had been suffering from drought received much-needed rain, which will do much toward filling the grain. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan wheat and coarse grains are now headed out, and in Alberta they are in process of heading.

Summary by Provinces

Manitoba.—Most of Portage division is in splendid shape with indications of heavier yields than usual. In Brandon division, crops are picking up as the result of rain during the week and prospects are for a fine crop. There has been some hail damage in isolated spots. In Dauphin division an average crop is expected, some parts requiring moisture.

Saskatchewan.—In Melville division many points require rain, although crops on heavy land are coming along nicely. Saskatoon division reports crops on summer fallow holding their own, but stubble lands require rain. Districts in which crops are poor and a yield of only ten bushels to the acre is expected would appear to make up about half of the division and are scattered. If rain falls soon a good harvest will be taken off in the remainder of the division. In Regina division rye cutting has started, and all grain are headed and filling well. Harvest is expected to begin August 10th. Warm days, cool nights and scattered showers account for the health condition and the best yield in years is anticipated. In Prince Albert division wheat is nearly all headed and filling rapidly.

Alberta. — Heavy rains, while not generally, did much good to crops in Edmonton district and prospects are bright for a heavy yield. Only a comparatively small portion of the division is now in need of rain. In Calgary division grain is heading out and filling nicely. Good rains fell over a large part of the division, although Drumheller, Oyen and Mantario districts need moisture, a few places reported slight hail damage. In Edson district wheat is headed out and looking well, but more rain is required.

IS THERE CAUSE FOR ALARM?

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Sir: The Belgian government met the sharp decline of its currency by selling the government railways to private companies. The effect was immediate. The confidence of the people was restored and the price of the Belgian franc rose. There is nothing like an emergency and a fact to knock fads to smithereens. No government has any capital. It borrows when it wants money. The earners of money are not the government, but the people, and to take away the ownership and management of large concerns from the people, and then borrow their money to keep them going, or to build them up in the first place, is to lessen the control of the money. Do you know of anybody who has more confidence in governments than in great well-managed private corporations? I don't. Belgium is surely a case in point, and while rabid partisans of political parties will shout for anything that will give glory and political power to their favorites, the earners and lenders of the money will not, and it is money that does the talking, not the partisans.

If you want to kill a locality take away its water powers and give it high priced power instead. That is one way. Another is by high taxes. Another is by failing to complete a canal. There are so many job-hunters and climbers nowadays who want to get up aloft by hanging on to the tails of fads and popular cries that people do not stop to think until it is too late. Money to complete the railway into the wilderness of Hudson's Bay, but no money to complete a canal that serves over a million people, and the finest manufacturing and farming district of Canada!

Where are the men, I ask, who will get us out of this hole? Peterboro needs men, not fads.

Every time some politician or political wire-puller (for other places) orders us to lie down and roll over, we do so. Apparently we have not got brains enough to hold what we have, or rather had. We are the victims of a huge confidence game. Have we the pluck of the Belgians? Time will show.

But there is one thing we can't bluff, and that is those people to whom we promised a canal open at both ends—a real canal—that could bring down grain from the west and which until it is opened has no effect on freight rates and consequently entails enormous loss. Not one tiny word in the House of Commons in favour, but a whole battery of abuse of the canal, and the battery won the day. In the past there was never a dollar got from any government for the canal, without a strenuous fight in the House against its eastern and western opponents.

And do not think we have struck bottom yet. Peterboro can easily lose much of what she has. Vital agreements must be kept with large and powerful corporations. They say so, and they mean it. Let us wake up before it is too late.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

Shall We Call Our Language "American?"

Writing a letter to the New York Herald, Thomas W. Moore makes a declaration in favor of calling our national language "American" instead of "English." He says:

"Today there are as many reasons why American editors, authors, actors and publicists should declare name independence as there were reasons in 1776 for declaring political independence. It is proposed to secure popular, literary and official use of the word American' as the name of our national language.

"In 1840 the Americans who spoke our language began to outnumber all who spoke it, or spoke 'near American' elsewhere. From statistical equality we steadily ascended a scale of preponderance, until now at least 71 per cent. of all who speak our language are geographically American, and of that 71 per cent at least 90 per cent are nationally American. The American percentage of the whole has steadily risen."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

MA ON CHANGING THINGS.

If men could only have their way,
The only way they know,
The house would look the same today
As twenty years ago.
Well, if I didn't stay at home
No more than does your dad,
If I could travel, I could roam,
I'd maybe be as bad.

For husbands rove all over town—
It's different with wives
Inside a house they settle down,
And there they spend their lives.
They'd like to have a little change,
The same as any man,
And so the chairs they re-arrange—
The only way they can.

A crayon portrait on the wall
Quite beautiful appears,
But I don't want to see it all
Of my declinin' years.
Yes, women move their things around,
And this is why they do
It's just a simple way they've found
To make the old look noo.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

KNOWLEDGE AND PREJUDICE.

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Chaplain Raymond C. Knox, in an address at Columbia University, said that men and women are needed to interpret the discoveries of modern science and to overcome prejudice against them.

The principal business of a college is a continual war upon prejudice. A college is an institution to defend the open mind.

It has a hospitable attitude toward every question and is willing to receive and weigh any kind of evidence.

Most of our alleged information is really prejudice. It consists of judgment which we have not formed outselves, but which we have taken from others ready made. A college is an institution whose purpose is to train us to form our own conclusions and examine our own evidence.

A university does not stand for the war of knowledge upon ignorance so much as it does for the war of knowledge upon prejudice.

The uneducated mind is not empty. It is quite as full as the educated mind. The only trouble is that it is full of weeds, and education is quite as much the pulling up of these weeds and clearing the ground as it is the planting of useful crops of information.

The ignorant mind is not a blank, but it is full of all sorts of tomfoolery. The effort is to get rid of this and to substitute that which is reliable.

The greatest enemy to progress is not ignorance and vacuity: it is wrong information.

BERNARD SHAW READS ADDRESS AT CELEBRATION

Says There Are No Great Men and No Great Nations.

LARGE GATHERING.

Get Rid of Both, Then We Shall Be Happy.

LONDON, July 27 (Canadian Press).—None of the smaller rooms in the House of Parliament was large enough to accommodate Bernard Shaw's seventieth birthday party yesterday, except, perhaps, the House of Commons itself, and as the members could hardly be expected to adjourn their debate on the national coal strike, G. B. S.'s friends and admirers, headed by the former Labor Premier, Ramsay MacDonald, gathered at the Metropolis Hotel.

Mr. MacDonald, with Mr. and Mrs. Shaw seated on either side of him, presented the guest of honor to a distinguished company of Labor movement leaders, literary figures and intellectuals. Mr. MacDonald voiced a strong protest against the British Government's refusal to permit Mr. Shaw's speech to be broadcast unless a pledge was given that it would not be controversial on public topics.

Speaking with marked vigor and vitality, after a tremendous ovation, G. B. S. said that the dreadful fate of being treated as a great man seemed about to overtake him.

"The Labor party," he went on, "has discovered the secret that there are no great men and no great nations. All that kind of humbug was left to the nineteenth century, where it properly belongs. Get rid of the great men and you will get rid of the great nations, and then perhaps we shall all be happy."

Early in his speech Mr. Shaw referred to the fact that his remarks were not being broadcast. Ramsay MacDonald had explained how the British Broadcasting Company desired to cancel its musical program in order to get Shaw on the air. But Government permission was not forthcoming, unless Mr. MacDonald gave a guarantee that the speech would not be controversial.

"I am willing to stand bail for Bernard Shaw any day at Bow Street" — London's best known police station—"but never at Downing Street," said Mr. MacDonald amid laughter.

"The right of free speech is not the right to state that there are milestones on the road to Dover, but the right of speaking controversially. It is the basis of all parliamentary governments, and the present British Government does not even know that."

Mr. Shaw imagined Trotzky saying with great emphasis: "You talk of parliamentary institutions and freedom of speech, but the very moment any very serious use is made of these things the proper-tied classes throw over those institutions."

He declared that the British Government on this occasion was doing everything in its power to bear out Trotzky's assertions, adding: "As indeed it is almost always unintentionally doing." His listeners applauded with delight as he followed this with the typical Shavian shaft: "It is a wonderful government for doing the things it does not intend to do, and the very last things it would do if it knew what it were doing."

G. B. S smilingly remarked that he would dearly like to believe that the broadcasting ban meant he was one person who could terrify the British Government into putting the muzzle on. But it was impossible to believe it.

With prominent Laborites as his hosts, he largely devoted himself to the aspects of domestic politics in this country, advising the Labor party to work out the technique of government so that it might be ready to take over the administration after the next general election which he hoped would make him feel very much holier than in his whole seventy years.

The menu of the dinner made no concessions to his vegetarian diet, necessitating the rejection by him of several courses.

Among the one hundred and fifty attending were Lord Olivier, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Webb, T. P. O'Connor, J. H. Thomas, Arthur Henderson, John Robert Clynes, Ben Tillett, John Galsworthy, Margaret Bondfield and Belfort Bax, one of Shaw's earliest Socialist comrades.

Human beings now eat three to four times as much as their stone-age ancestors, according to a British scientist.

ACUTE CRISIS BROUGHT ABOUT BETWEEN RELIGIOUS FACTORS

Present Mexican Government Active in Restricting the Roman Church.

MAY CAUSE WAR.

Have Broken Away From Catholic Church—Deny Pope's Authority.

MEXICO CITY, July 27 (Canadian Press).—For more than fifty years there have been acute periodic differences between the Mexican government and the Roman Catholic church. The Government's determination to strip the church of power and property in this country caused six years of civil war—the Reform War, 1855-1861—and has been a contributing factor, historians say, in others of the succession of wars and revolutions that have given Mexico so much turbulence and bloodshed.

Wars have been waged in the name of religion in Mexico for all recorded time. When Cortez, the Spanish conquistador, came here 400 years ago, he found native tribes fighting each other, both for territorial aggrandizement and for the glory of their various pagan gods. The Spaniards wiped out all these religions and substituted Roman Catholicism. During subsequent centuries, the Catholic church became tremendously rich and powerful in Mexico. When Mexico won independence from Spain in 1821, the church is said to have owned one fourth of Mexico's wealth. Opposition to that wealth and power, long smouldering, was fanned and fostered under independence. Beginning in 1855, the government of the Mexican republic began to curb the power of the church by laws and decrees and to confiscate property. This caused the Reform War, a struggle between clericals and liberals, the latter supporting the government's anti-Catholic policy. The Liberals won and the church in Mexico has never regained its previous power or been able to retain its former wealth.

The constitution of 1857 and the laws and decrees of the Reform War period declared all church property confiscated for the benefit of the state, curbed the activity of the church and its orders and placed strict limitations upon the activities of priests, nuns and clericals. Subsequent constitutions have affirmed these policies, although there have been periods when enforcement was lax or lapsed. The 1917 constitution which is the present organic law specifically proclaimed them and the administrations of Presidents Obregon and Calles have from time to time enforced various of these religious limitations. Beginning about six months ago, the Calles' government has been very active in such enforcements.

During these years of controversy the governments have expelled from Mexico papal nuncios, Catholic bishops, priests and nuns, have seized and sold church property and closed Catholic churches, convents and schools. As a result, there was organized in 1925 the Schismatic church, or Mexican Catholic church, which declares itself separate and independent of the Roman Church, and denies the Pope's authority. Most Mexicans, however, continue to be members of the Roman Catholic church.

This apparent anomaly of an anti-Catholic government policy being tolerated in a country where most persons are Catholics is difficult to explain, or even to theorize about, without entering the field of controversy. Few of the president's or government leaders of Mexico, since independence have continued in adult life to be in practice devoted Catholic, although as children they may have been taken into the church. Most of them have shown that they believed the Catholic church had attained a power, material and political, too great for the good of Mexico. One explanation given of the toleration of an anti-Catholic policy on the part of those in political power is that Mexico is largely populated by rural Indians utterly ignorant of world affairs. With unshakeable intensity, they adhere to the devotions and ceremonials of the Catholic church. They are unswervingly loyal to that church—but to them the church means just their village place of worship. Rome is not even a name of most of them. As long as the government does not close their local church, does not interefere with their own individual devotions, they know little and care less of what the government is doing. Opposition in the cities alone, is not strong enough to swerve the government, according to the theory.

AIRPLANE HIT BY LIGHTNING

Three Killed When Passenger Plane Encounters Electric Storm.

ONE SURVIVOR

BERLIN, July 27.— (Canadian Press.)—A graphic story has been told by a dying man of an airplane being struck by lightning in a great storm and its fall to the earth. The plane, carrying four passengers from the Island of Berkum to Norderney, in the North Sea, encountered a storm Saturday night and fell in flames on the Island of Juist, which lies between the two.

The pilot and three passengers, including a woman, were killed outright and the sole survivior, a manufacturer, was seriously injured. He died soon afterward in the hospital, but was able before his death to give an account of the tragedy.

"The machine was flying at a height of 1,000 feet when the storm broke," he said. "Thick clouds encircled us, while lightning flashed incessantly and torrents of rain tossed the machine in all directions.

"Suddenly we were blinded by a dazzling flash, a blast of terrific heat and suffocating smoke rendered us half unconscious. The airplane began to drop with increasing rapidity. Horror stricken, we seized the hand straps. Everything seemed to happen in a few seconds. I remember just about the moment we struck the ground; I attempted to jump, and I only recovered my senses in the hands of the doctors."

JAMES DREWRY

STIRLING, July 27.—The Grim Messenger has been busy in our midst again. On Sunday, Mr. James Drewey, a well-known citizen was stricken and died very suddenly.

Mr. Drewry was a mason by trade having learned bricklaying with the Crowe Brothers of Trenton over 50 years ago, and many buildings in this section stand as monuments of his ability as a competent tradesman. He was born on a farm on the 4th Concession of Rawdon. After learning his trade he worked in Toronto for some time, but has been a resident of Stirling for a great many years. He was in his 73rd year, and still working every day, having been busy on Saturday building a cement walk for Mr. Harlow. His wife predeceased him four years ago. He is survived by his widowed daughter, Mrs. May Nolan, and one brother, Mr. John Drewry of the 3rd Concession of Sidney near Gilbert's School House. In religion he was a Presbyterian and a regular attendant at the services in St. Andrew's Church.

Want sparkling teeth, gums like coral?
Here's simple new way to gain them

Please accept full 10-day tube free. Note the great difference in the color of your teeth and gum firmness when dingy film is removed as dentists urge

RESTORING dull, off-color teeth to polished whiteness is a recent dental achievement.

It's been found that dingy teeth come simply from a film that forms on teeth. A stubborn film old-type dentifrices did not successfully clear off. That's why brushing fails you.

Run your tongue across your teeth and you can feel that film now—a sort of slippery coating. Beneath it are the dazzling white teeth you envy.

It keeps your smile unattractive because it absorbs discolorations from food, smoking, etc. It invites tooth decay, gum troubles and pyorrhea because it breeds bacteria by the millions.

Now, in a new-type dentifrice called Pepsodent, a scientific combatant has been found. Leading dentists widely urge it. All druggists have it. Works wonders on dingy teeth. 10-day test sent free.

DISTRICT PICNIC HELD BY A.Y.P.A.

Rain in Morning Keeps Down Attendance at Annual Outing.

AT SOUTH BEACH

LAKEFIELD, July 27.—The sixth annual picnic of the Peterboro District Council of the A.Y.P.A. was held on Thursday afternoon and evening to South Beach. Owing to a steady downpour in the morning and a very threatening early afternoon, the weather prospects were far from being propitious and kept the delegates from Millbrook, Omemee, Cavan and Perrytown away altogether. The fatality at Balsam Lake materially affected the attendance from Peterboro city, for on the occasion of the last meeting of the District Council in Lakefield Ray Allen was present with the All Saints' delegates.

In spite of its many handicaps, the picnic was very successful, with an attendance of about forty. Rev. and Mrs. R. T. C. Dwelley of Young's Point were present and were heartily welcomed to the district picnic by Rev. Walter Cox of Lakefield.

A game of softball was played by two mixed teams, styled respectively, Hope's Hustlers and Stenner's Steamrollers, with Rev. Walter Cox taking the part of umpire. The game was very close for the first four innings, after which the Hustlers obtained a lead and won the game by the score of 7 to 5.

The batteries, for the Hustlers, were, pitcher Spencer Hope, catcher Jack Hope, and for the Steamrollers, pitcher C. C. Stenner, catcher Roger Stenner.

After the ball game supper was served by a committee, and the group gathered round the tablecloth which was laden with a profusion of good things of every variety known to picnics.

Following supper the sports programme was run off, which the Lakefield branch had drawn up and arranged according to the decision of the last meeting of the District Council.

Mrs. T. Waldon and Mr. C. C. Stenner were starters, and in every race the number of entries was remarkably good, and while the prizes were won by a small number, each event was won after a real contest.

Rev. W. Cox of Lakefield announced that St. John's branch, Lakefield, was presenting a pennant to the branch winning the greatest number of points at the picnic each year, and which after being won three successive years by a branch becomes the permanent property of the branch. This year All Saints', Peterboro, is the winner, and the pennant will be presented at the next meeting of the Council to be held in Millbrook in September.

Mr. A. Hope of All Saints', President of the District Council, addressed the young people for a few minutes, bespeaking their hearty support for the Crusaders who were in Peterboro on Sunday, and urging them to take the fullest advantage of this great opportunity to bear witness for Christ and His church.

Shortly after nine o'clock the young people dispersed to their homes after a very pleasant afternoon and evening, for the late afternoon and evening were ideal and the trip home by moonlight was delightful.

FIRE DESTROYS TWO BUILDINGS

Stable and Garage Behind Millbrook Home Burned Down.

ON SUNDAY NIGHT

MILLBROOK, July 27.— Fire broke out, about 7.30 on Sunday evening, in the stable on Mr. Matt Todd's premises, Tupper street, destroying that building and the adjoining garage, but fortunately the house was saved.

Mr. Todd was home all day but the family had been at Cobourg and had scarcely returned half an hour when the alarm was raised and flames were seen bursting from the stable. The origin of the fire is unknown. Mrs. Todd had been in the building not fifteen minutes previously feeding her fowl, and no sign of fire was then seen.

The firemen were promptly on the scene and in a quarter of an hour had a good stream playing on the house, and the burning buildings. A bucket brigade had carried water and wet the roof at the rear of the house thus helping materially in saving the home from destruction. Mr. Todd is line inspector for the Hydro Company and the tools and other equipment, kept in the stable, with the harness, blankets, and feed for the horses used in the winter season, were all burned. His car, Mr. Todd backed out as soon as the alarm was raised, the top partly burned being the extent of the damage to it. There is some insurance but not enough to cover the loss.

Mr. Todd has just recently finished putting a cement foundation under his stable.

Two little girls were the first to notice the smoke, and Mr. Jack Vance rang the fire-bell. The churches were rather promptly emptied by the ringing of the fire alarm. Some of the fire company, including Fire Chief J. J. Clarke, were out of town, but there was no lack of workers and once a supply of water was secured the engine did good service.

Missionary Address.

The quarterly missionary session was held in the United church Sunday school on Sunday at 10 a.m., Dr. B. Douglas Avison, of Seoul, Korea, giving an instructive talk, prefacing his address by singing "Jesus Loves Me" in the Korean tongue.

Everybody goes to Sunday school in Korea, the speaker said, so, because of limited accommodation, two sessions, morning and afternoon, are necessary in the school of which he is superintendent, and four are held at another station, with two church services. To call Sunday a day of rest for the busy workers, under these circumstances is somewhat of a misnomer.

Boys and girls are separated in the Sunday schools, and men and women sit in separate sections for the church services, a curtain being the dividing line.

The attendance at Sunday school mounts highest as Christmas approaches, a custom not unknown in the schools of western lands. The boys' record is marked in red chalk, and the girls' in blue, the figures, on the boys' side, being considerably lower when a national baseball game, or a skating tournament, is listed to take place on Sunday.

Korea is well called "Topsy Turvy Land," the people doing things the direct opposite of the way of this side of the world, and Dr. Avison gave some examples of their methods—the Sunday school record of attendance, offering, etc., being from right to left; the address on an envelope having first the country, then the city, street, and lastly the person's name.

It is rather surprising to learn that in this far eastern land they have six weeks of good skating, with plenty of frost and snow, in the winter season, the speaker having burned twelve tons of the native coal in his furnace last winter. The city stores away ice that is over twenty inches in thickness. The rainy season in July and August is a very damp and uncomfortable time. Shoes left out overnight will be covered with mould, and this happens also to some of the clothing such as silk dresses, the mould being a rusty deposit impossible to remove.

The New Year is the time for "turning over a new leaf", so the people sometime write their sins on one of the kites so popular in that land, cut the string, and let the wind carry it away for miles, believing that they have then a clean sheet with which to begin the year.

Dr. Avison showed a number of dolls as concrete examples of the manner for dress for mourners, farmers, a mother carrying her baby on her back, a gentleman in silk garments, and others. A native woman, he explained, may be seen carrying a water jar on her head, her baby on her back, and a basket of vegetables in each hand, with no danger of a fall for any article.

A baby's coat was also shown, its bright green color, with red ribbon ties, and sleeves with all the colors of the rainbow running in rows from shoulder to wrist, giving it a gaudy appearance. A little girl's winter bonnet, with fur lappets tying under the chin, and open at the top, while odd in shape, was a really pretty article of dress.

In conclusion, the speaker urged filling any Christmas bales sent from the Sunday school or other organization, with toys, dolls, books, picture cards, etc., in good condition. The children are just as bright and appreciative as Canadian boys and girls, and are keenly disappointed if a gift from a Christmas tree proves shabby, torn, scribbled over, or broken, and the missionary has to pay as much duty as though the bale contained only actually new articles.

The missionary offering taken up on Sunday amounted to nearly twenty dollars. Dr. Avison was given a hearty ovation at the conclusion of his interesting address.

SEARCHERS FIND BODIES FLOATING

definite could be pictured from the positions of the bodies. "It might have been that going down they just grabbed each other," said he.

Both lads were clothed in shirts, pants and boots. Mardall wore a ring initialled M. This was the ring worn by his father when he perished in the Empress of Ireland tragedy, and given to Oliver by Mrs. Mardall.

On Wiginton was found a watch which had stopped at 8.05, evidence of when the boys had gone into the water. In a pocket was a handkerchief, and his body bore the scar of an appendix operation which completed the identification.

Hardly had these bodies been taken to Rosedale to be carried on to Lindsay, when, at 1.40, the body of Joe Edwards, Jr. was recovered by the Toronto Life-Savers. It was raised from the bottom of the lake on a heavy line, but was not in the first attempt brought to the surface. Finally the body was recovered at a spot three-quarters of a mile from the camp.

Found by Cottagers

At 4.30 Frank Burkitt's body was sighted by Rev. P. M. Lamb of St. Cuthbert's, Toronto, in a boat with Robert, Leonard and Leslie Train of Toronto. These Toronto men are cottagers in the district. It was floating near where the others were located. Shortly before it was sighted the Government aeroplane had been up, but it was reported nothing had been located. Burkitt was clothed in pants, shirt and shoes. When the body was first taken to Rosedale it was reported to be Vernon Clarke. But Ed. Lant, who with Swan and Hills viewed the remains, positively identified it as Burkitt.

With the exception of Shea-Butcher's remains, which were sent from Long Point to Lindsay, the bodies were first taken to Rosedale by boat, and from there taken on to Lindsay by undertakers.

From the number of bodies found yesterday the searchers expect to recover all today. Toronto Life-Savers yesterday received by truck further grappling equipment from Toronto.

Until dark last night the search continued, but without further discovery. It was resumed this morning at dawn. Nature aided in the recovery, weathermen state, with heavy winds over the week-end stirring up the depths.

Yesterday afternoon the remains of Burgess and Heale were sent to Toronto. The other bodies will go to Toronto today.

Outstanding Jury

The jurors who will probe this tragedy are representative Lindsay business men, and the jury differs greatly in personnel from other juries empanelled in the town.

The jurors are: James Boxall, who operates a large hardware store foreman; F. W. Sutcliffe, owner of a departmental store; C. E. Weeks, bank manager; W. W. Staples, manager in a departmental store; G. R. Allely retired business man; R. T. Adams, grocer; Ford Moynes, newspaper man, and W. D. Stevens shoe store man.

Following action by Lindsay's Mayor, more men from that town arrived at the lake to take part in the search yesterday. Further aid came from Peterboro'.

Plans were made to bring a "steam alligator," a flat-bottomed boat used in lumbering work, from Gull River over the rapids at Coboconk. Last night these arrangements were cancelled and three smaller boats will be brought down in the steamboat's place.

Sermon Subject.

KINGSTON, July 27.—(Special.)—Addressing students of Queen's Summer School, at their annual service held in the First Baptist Church on Sunday night, Rev. Dr. Bruce Taylor, Principal of Queen's University, made a touching reference to the recent sad tragedy at Balsam Lake. Dr. Taylor chose for his text the words, "Launch out into the deep and let down your net for a draught," Luke, 5th chapter, 4th verse.

Referring to the tragedy Dr. Taylor said that boys should not be kept back from these things even though they are dangerous. "Get back of them," said the speaker. "Teach them that this is God's own world and that they must be prepared for all risks of life. Teach them to be prepared to "launch out into the deep."

Dr. Taylor stated that one's whole life is a risk and although one can buy insurance for almost everything, one is never insured against the things that really make up life; one cannot buy respect and joy.

PRINCIPALS AT INQUEST

Evidence of relatives and neighbors of the late Patrick Fogarty, Toronto florist, who murdered his family of five and then suicided, failed at the inquest to shed any new light. Two witnesses swore that about 1.45 a.m. on July 9th they heard sounds like shots. Other people who saw Fogarty on the day before the discovery stated that he seemed unusually quiet. Left is shown Crown-Attorney Eric Armour, K.C., who conducted the inquest, as he left the building, and right O. B. Stanton, handwriting expert, who swore that the handwriting on the letter addressed to the deceased man's sister was that of Fogarty.

OBITUARY.

JAMES RAINNIE

STIRLING, July 27—James Rainnie, who has resided on the Sixth Concession of Rawdon near Wellman's Corners for a great many years, passed away on Sunday. His health has not been very good for several years and, taking to his bed recently, his death was not unexpected. Mr. Rainnie was a progressive and prosperous farmer. His wife, who was a daughter of the late John Morton of Rawdon, had predeceased him several years ago. Surviving are a son and daughter, John and Emma, at home, and Mrs. Blake Totton, and several grandchildren all of Rawdon Township.

B. R. WRIGHT

STIRLING, July 27.—Mr. B. R. Wright, in his 65th year, and a resident of Stirling all his life, was suddenly stricken on Monday morning while at his work.

He was carrying a bag of oatmeal from the car to his wagon, and fell, expiring instantly. Mr. Wright worked with his father, the late Urial Wright, as a tanner, but of late years his principal business was the delivering of freight around town.

He is survived by his wife and two sons, Carleton and Roscoe, both of Stirling; a sister, Mrs. Bates in Kingston, and a brother, Clark Wright in Watertown, New York. Mr. Wright was a member of the United Church.

JAMES McALPINE.

HAVELOCK, July 27.—There was laid to rest at Rylestone Cemetery on Monday afternoon one of the pioneers of Seymour Township, the late James McAlpine, whose death occurred at the family residence, 14th Concession of Seymour, on Saturday, July 24, after several months of illness. The funeral was held under the auspices of the Stanwood L.O.L., Rev. Mr. Gardner of Springbrook conducting the service which was held in Rylstone Church.

The pall-bearers were six grandsons, members of the Orange Order, namely: Kenneth McAlpine, Carman McAlpine, Ernest J. Leeson, Robert Peoples, Stanley Aikens and Robert Aikens.

The deceased, who was born in Glasgow, Scotland, in 1836, had been a resident of Stanwood for 72 years. When he was five years old his parents came to Canada, crossing the Atlantic on the ship Constitution. The trip lasted seven weeks, and the family landed at Bath, near Kingston, later moving to Camden Township. In 1854 they moved to Stanwood and settled on the farm which Mr. McAlpine has occupied ever since. In 1858 he was married to Miss Sarah Jane McKeown of Camden Township, who passed away in February, 1923, at the age of 83.

Mr. McAlpine had the distinction of being the oldest Orangeman and Mason in the district. In his early days before the Stanwood L.O.L., which he was instrumental in founding, was organized, he belonged to the Lodge at Marmora, and used to walk alone ten miles through the woods to attend the meetings. He was a staunch supporter of the Conservative party all his life.

There are left to mourn his loss, five daughters: Mrs. James Peoples and Mrs. R. J. Bonar of Belmont, Mrs. Charles Bakes of Bonar Law, Mrs. David Aikens of Stanwood, Mrs Wesley Oakley of Hastings, and two sons, Robert J. at the homestead and Thomas of Niagara Falls, Ont. There are also twenty-seven grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

Copyright, 1926, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

UNCLE WIGGILY HELPS MR. CHEER UP.

High in a cherry tree, not far from Uncle Wiggily's hollow stump bungalow, lived Mr. Cheer Up. Lest you wonder at his strange name, I shall tell you, now, that Mr. Cheer Up was a bird with a red feather vest. Some people called him Mr. Robin, but he best liked to be called Mr. Cheer Up.

For that was what he sang each evening as he sat near his nest in the cherry tree—a nest in which Mrs. Robin was hatching out her second family of little robins. Mr. Cheer Up would perch on the topmost limb and whistle and sing with his head cocked on one side.

"Cheer up! Cheer up! Cheer up!" he would sing. "What if it rained today? What if your heart's filled with sorrow? Tomorrow is another day! The sun will shine tomorrow!"

Thus sang Mr. Cheer Up, and Uncle Wiggily was very fond of listening to the robin. For, though the rabbit gentleman could twinkle his pink nose, he could not sing a note. He could hum two songs; one was "Yankee Doodle" and the other wasn't, but Uncle Wiggily could never tell which was which, so he seldom ever hummed.

"Sing another verse, please."

"But I love to hear you sing, Mr. Cheer Up," said the bunny. "Sing another verse of your song, please."

"I am a bit too bothered to sing very sweetly just now," whistled the bird, flying down to sit on Uncle Wiggily's porch.

"What are you bothered about?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"About a big worm over in your garden," went on the robin. "For two days I have tried to pull that worm out of his hole, but I can't."

"Why not?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Well, either because he is too big and fat a worm for me to pull, or because he is too deep down in the ground," said Mr. Cheer Up. "Two or three times I have had hold of him and pulled him partly out of the earth, but he holds fast, and I can't get him up. I wish you would come and help me pull that worm."

"I should like to help you, for you have given me pleasure by singing to me," said the rabbit. "But how about the worm—does he want to be pulled up and eaten—I suppose you intend to eat him?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"Oh, yes," sang the robin. "Worms are made for birds to eat. In fact this worm ought to be very glad to act as our family dinner. It must be that he is just teasing me, not letting me pull him out of the ground. Come on and help me, that's a good bunny!"

"All right, I will!" said Uncle Wiggily. "As you say, worms are made for birds to eat, so the birds will grow up and sing songs. In this way, making a meal for the birds, worms really sing."

"You might call it that," chirped Mr. Cheer Up, and he flew over to the garden where he pointed the tip of one wing toward a little hole in the ground.

"Here is where the worm lives," said the bird. "Stick your head up and let me pull you!" chirped the bird. "Uncle Wiggily is here to help me now."

Then the rabbit gentleman saw something dark red and round, sticking up out of the hole in the ground. He caught hold of it in his paws, crying:

"Come on out! Come up! Mr. Cheer Up wants you, my friend!" The rabbit pulled hard, and, all of a sudden he fell over backward, for the round, red thing he was pulling on popped out of the ground quickly.

"There's a worm for you, Mr. Cheer Up!" cried the bunny as he got on his feet.

"Alas no! Ha! Ha! It isn't a worm at all!" sang the bird.

"Not a worm. What is it, then" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"A piece of round, red rubber," chirped the bird. "Some boy must have buried it in the ground, with the end sticking out, so it looked just like a worm. I thought it was pretty tough!"

"It's too bad, to disappoint you," said Uncle Wiggily. "All the while you thought this was a worm, and it wasn't."

"Oh, I am used to disappointments," sang the robin.

"Come over to the bungalow and I'll give you some rice pudding that Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy just made," invited the bunny. "And I'll take this round piece of rubber and make a spring for the screen door."

So something good came of it after all, you see. And if the lady bug doesn't go to sleep in the match box and burn her wings, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's lemonade straws.

HEAVY DAMAGE BY FOREST FIRE

Thousands of Acres in Western States Swept By Flames.

OUT OF CONTROL.

MISSOULA, Montana, July 27.—(Canadian Press).—Fires continue to ravage valuable timber stands in Western Montana, Northern Idaho, and Eastern Washington, more than 55,000 acres having been covered in two days, with several blazes out of control. Forestry officials say the situation is the worst in 16 years. California and other coast states report the situation generally improved.

LONDON, July 24.—A police dog led to the capture of a man caught in the act of robbing a newly built home at Kingston recently. The dog was out for a walk with his master, a constable. He rushed into the house, growling angrily, and the constable followed and found the man.

AVIATOR KILLED.

Plane Hits Windmill When Flying Low—Neck Broken.

TORONTO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—William Stephenson, son of Dr. Stephenson, of Bradford, Ont., was killed this morning when the aeroplane in which he was making a flight from Toronto to Camp Borden, crashed to the ground near Richmond Hill, Ontario. The machine was flying low at the time, and one of the wings was caught and ripped off by a windmill, causing an instant descent. The airman's neck was broken in the fall.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

EFFIE.

From the quaint old-fashioned Euphemia, so rarely heard in these days, comes the popular name of Effie. It is not a diminutive as is generally supposed, but a full-fledged name with an interesting history. Originally Euphemia meant both fair speech and abstinence from the reverse, so that from an ironical standpoint it signified silence, and was applied to the stillness that prevailed during religious rites.

The first Euphemia who gave vogue to the name was a virgin martyr of Bithynia, whose legend of constancy made her popular in both the East and the West. Russia called her Jevfimija; she was Jema in Servia, and Bema and Pimmie in other lands. Scotland however, adopted the name and straightway called her Effie. Phemie was also Scottish, but did not attain the popularity of the former.

However, neither Effie nor Phemie, which have been prevalent since those early times, can ever be forgotten because of the finest works of Sir Walter Scott. Heroines of fiction, written by the masters of literature, find their names as immortalized as heroines of history and Effie is no exception to this general rule.

It was once thought that the Scottish name Euphame was one of the Greek names brought from Hungary by Queen Margaret. Others believed that it came from the Keltic Aoliffe which has fostered so many of our present-day feminine names. Indeed, those so inclined may take their choice of possible sources, though general credence is more often given to the first derivation, since it concerns a religeuse and in olden days, it would seem that being martyred was all that was needed to perpetuate one's name through the centuries.

In the Scottish Highlands, Effie is called Oighrigh, a name which seems to have no derivation whatever. The Church of Santa Eufemia at Rome gives title to a cardinal and through it, the name has spread in popularity in Italy and France.

Effie's stone is the topaz, which has the power of the sun to put to flight all evil and dark forebodings, but it must be set in gold to accomplish its purpose. It promises that no harm shall befall its wearer. Tuesday is her lucky day; 2 her lucky number, and the chrysanthemum is her flower.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1926.

This is a day not important in planetary direction and should be devoted to routine tasks, according to astrology.

There is a sign of big promise for editors and publishers, who should reap great profits in the coming months.

Advertising will be in demand as never before, it is foretold, and it will be more scientifically conducted than formerly.

Authors are to benefit from new demands for creative works and motion pictures are to be profitable for artists of high aspiration.

The aspects today are most promising for financial settlements or agreements.

Contracts or leases signed today should be lucky, making for profit and steady incomes.

There is a sign today supposed to encourage research and investigation. Science will make great strides at this time when public health is to receive special attention.

Again the seers warn against giving way to anger or to emotional expression, for the planetary government is still unfavorable to continued harmoney in corporations or political parties.

Lawmakers and lawyers should avoid combats of opinion which may lead to personal encounters.

Women may be oversensitive and inclined to imagine slights or discourtesies under this direction of the stars and they should shut out the recognition of all that is not pleasant.

Suicides will be numerous in large cities, owing to nervous strain, which should be overcome by frequent vacations.

A national scandal of far-reaching effect is foretold and it will uncover corruption in a great corporation or political organization.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the forecast of happiness and success in the coming year. The young will court and marry, while men and women of all ages will be especially susceptible to romance, it is probable.

Children born on this day have the augury of domestic happiness and the sort of success which brings stable incomes.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

JEM SMITH.

"Do you think that Lela will want to see us, Judy," Joan asked. "I think, my dear, she will be glad to see anyone that can help her just now. But whether she wants to see us or not, you and I must find out if she has that tell-tale page of the register."

At my mention of the hotel register, Joan's tears drenched her eyes afresh.

"Do you know Lela's address," I asked.

"No, but I am sure that they have it at The Circle."

"Let us get a taxi, then."

"My car is here, Judy. We can take that."

"No, my dear. We must not take your car. It is very probable that there are a number of reporters hanging around Barry Cornwall's place and it would cause a lot of talk if your expensive car rolled up in front of it.

"I have an idea that we will even have to dismiss the taxi or keep it waiting for us on some side street a block or two from his home and walk over. I expect we will find it is a boarding house or an apartment.

When we arrived at The Circle we encountered many curious glances from those who had already come for an afternoon dance.

Very ostentatiously the man who owned the place came forward.

"Have you heard the news about Barry, Miss Meredith," he asked in the most obsequious manner.

I answered before Joan could say anything.

"Miss Meredith saw in the morning papers the deplorable accident that happened to Mr. Cornwall. She asked me to come over here with her to get the address of his home—"

"Yes, I wanted to see if I could help ——"

"Miss Meredith wants to know if she can be of any help at this time," I put in before she could say anything.

I knew that if she told this man that we knew that Barry was married he would keep the address from her as long as he could, hoping to get to Lela first and with her permission carry out some blackmailing scheme.

The moment he spoke my surmise was correct, for in his most oily tone he said

"I don't think I have Barry Cornwall's address here, but if you will come back this evening I believe I can give it to you."

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

ARIOSTO AND ALESSANDRA

Ariosto was the great Italian poet of the sixteenth century. He was a genius in the days when literary geniuses were few. Forced to live on the bounty of princes, Ariosto did not have a pleasant time during his career and proved to the world the moral of "Put not your trust in Princes." He was treated shabbily by the powerful men whom he served as poet and diplomat for a mere pittance, but his recompense was the respect and admiration he aroused in everyone whose esteem was worth having.

Ariosto disliked the idea of marriage and put off that fatal ceremony till nearly the end of his life. He had, however, the most profound admiration for beautiful women and enjoyed the favors of three. The last one was the beauty who eventually led him to the altar. She was Alessandra di Francesca Berucci, the wife of a small office holder in the service of the Duke of Ferrara.

Alessandra was a divinely beautiful Florentine young woman and knew how to dress attractively. She was an old acquaintance of the poet's and he had resisted his feelings for her until, visiting Florence on one occasion, he capitulated, and thereupon both proceeded to put the husband out of their thoughts. To celebrate the realization of their love, Ariosto wrote a rhapsody to her in the form of a poem breathing passionate grandeur. This epistle, in the translation made by Edmund G. Gardner, follows:

"In the Tuscan city that honors this day most reverently its fame, had gathered to the pageantry its neighbors near and strangers from afar. Even I, desirous to witness, came hither. Of what else I saw I remembered little and little do I reck; only there remained to me an immortal memory, that in all that fair city I saw no fairer thing than you. . . . Gates, windows, ways, temples, theaters I saw full of ladies bent on sport or society or hearing Mass; old and young, daughters and mothers adorned in finest robes; some at banquets some gracefully dancing, but in fine, I saw no, nor perceived that others saw, anyone who could equal you in beauty, in modesty, in courtesy and noble semblance, much less surpass you.

"Ah, tell me, how falls it that you have deprived me of every liberty and led me captive and yet I grieve no more than another would at release from long and cruel captivity? I grieve indeed that I knew not long before the infinite sweetness of gentle fetters and how much better it is to be your prisoner than another's king!"

Alessandra, to some extent, inspired and aided Ariosto in the composition of his great narrative poem, "Orlando Furioso" and after remaining together in Florence for six months both went to Ferrara, where Ariosto lived. In Ferrara, however, there lived too, one of Ariosto's former mistresses and the mother of his son Virginio, and to ease his conscience, Ariosto found a suitor for her in the person of a petty official and saw her respectably married, his fatherly interest going even to the extent of providing her with a dowry of money and property to the amount of six hundred lire.

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The possessor of an emerald is especially fortunate today, since this lovely stone is its talismanic gem. It has the power to protect from deception—particularly the deception of a business acquaintance and give keen insight into financial relations with others. A friendship made today will be sincere and lasting.

The opal is today's natal stone. It should be set only in gold and worn around the neck, or as a brooch, if the wearer is to benefit by its powers.

Gray is today's color, and brings peace of mind to those who wear it.

The lily of the valley is today's lucky flower. It is dedicated especially to brides.

corns removed at first soaking

No matter how long you may have suffered from corns or how deeply embedded they may have become, Radox Bath Salts will remove them without trouble and without pain. To cut a corn is but to prune it, and for the temporary relief you suffer increased agony a little later. A Radox foot-bath is the certain way to be rid of a corn. Read what this Radox user says:

"As an agricultural worker, I have suffered agonies, and have tried all sorts of 'patents.' We got a packet of Radox, and the result was marvellous. The first soaking fetched out two large corns that nothing else would touch. One is about half an inch round, and stood out from the foot a good quarter inch like a button." A. L.

When you put your feet into a foot-bath containing Radox, the salts soften the hard outer layers of the corn and the dead skin (of the corn) combines with the Radox Bath Salts to form a protein salt of the actual corn itself. This dissolves in the water and so loosens the corn that it can be lifted out bodily.

We know of no other salt that will do the work of Radox in removing

Gratitude

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

I SAW a mother, a lady and a child shopping. The lady bought the child a new pair of mittens for a gift. The child put them on, happily enough, and walked on a The mother prompted, "Don't you want to thank Aunt Peggie for these nice mittens?" Quickly the lady interrupted, "Oh, don't make that child be grateful for everything—they aren't much, anyway." I read, too, that it gives a child poise to simply assume that things are his by natural right. I wonder. When children are no longer grateful for the things they have, when they are not taught to appreciate that everything costs someone effort or sacrifice, aren't things going to depreciate in value to them? Isn't there a great danger of breeding downright selfishness and disregard of others? I don't care how much or how little looks may have, they are surely robbing a child of real happiness when they fail to teach him appreciation and gratitude.

Pitchers' Duel in the Major League Series

CHEMONG WINS OVER JOPLING'S

Both Teams Played Tight Ball—Fast Infielding Wins Victory.

SCORE 7 TO 5

In one of the fastest games ever witnessed on the Chemong Park diamond the Chemong Pavilion defeated Jopling's All Stars by a score of 7-5. The game was replete with thrills from start to finish and the large crowd which turned out were well satisfied with the performance.

Both teams played good ball and had few errors, although three of the four errors made by Jopling's team figured in the run-getting. Seven put-outs were registered by Jopling's outfield and four by the Pavilion. Only one error was made by either outfield, an overthrow by LeBarr, which accounted for a run.

The work of the infields was a sensation, Runyon, the Toronto boy at short for Jopling's turning in a great card. His fielding was of high caliber, his fast pick up of a ball erroed by Cowan, and throwing Lowe out at first base was a feature.

Holyman was on the rubber for the winners and although touched up for more hits than Dormer, turned in a nice game. Dormer dished them up for Jopling's and swirled a good game. He was touched up for nine hits, which he kept well scattered, but errors by his teammates at critical moments lost him the game.

LeBarr was the batting hero, having three hits in four times up, one of them a double. Bradshaw was the heavy hitter for Jopling's, getting a triple and a single in five times up. He came right home on his triple when Lew LeBarr heaved the ball in the crowd in trying to nail Bradshaw coming home.

A feature of the game was the freak bets by the rival managers. The losing manager had to roll a peanut from the ball grounds to the pavilion. Of course Fred Jopling got the job and the crowd had a great time watching the feat. The peanut was rolled by a toothpick. Another bet the managers had on was that every time the orchestra played "Horses" the losing manager had to buy the ice cream. On arrival at the pavilion Manager Forler could not locate Ken Blood. Manager Jopling was all in smiles figuring he would not get stuck, but Mr. Forler located Roy Nickrenz and when he struck up "Horses" Fred bought the ice cream for the crowd.

Gordon Matthews and Dr. Woods umpired the game to the satisfaction of both teams.

The Scoring.

The Pavilion registered one in the first on a hit by Holyman and two sacrifices and an error.

Jopling's scored one in the second by errors and a hit.

The Pavilion rung up two in the third on an error by Bradshaw which let Johnston on first. Lou LeBarr sent him home on a ringing double to right. He trotted home a minute later when his brother Dan singled to centre.

Jopling's evened it up in the fourth when Baker led off with a hit. He was forced at second by Hall. Hall stole second and came home on Bradshaw's single. Cowan singled to centre and Bradshaw pulled up at second. Runyon hit sharply to right and Bradshaw scored. Gillespie and Dormer flied out to retire the side.

The Pavilion scored their last runs of the game in the seventh when they counted four. Johnston was safe on Hall's error. Holyman singled off Dormer's shins. Both scored when Bradshaw lost Lowe's fly after a good try. LeBarr singled to right and Lowe pulled up at third. Dan LeBarr hit to Dormer and everybody was safe, Lowe still holding third. Forler flied out to Jimmy Hall. Breyfoygle flied out to Hill in centre and Lowe scored. Lou LeBarr came in on a wild pitch. Kimmel flied out to Cowan to end the inning.

Jopling's tried hard to even it up in their half. Baker hit to Johnston, and went to second. Bradshaw hit a long triple to left, scoring Baker. He came home himself when LeBarr heaved the ball in the crowd, trying to get him at the plate.

There was no further scoring although Jopling's had a man on the ninth with none out.

PETHERICK'S TEAM GIVEN FIRST DEFEAT

Mount Pleasant Boys Win Decisively at Lawn Social.

PETHERICKS CORNERS, July 27.—The local softball team met its first and not unexpected reverse at the Rylstone lawn social last Thursday evening, when the Mount Pleasant team handed it a 11 to 3 defeat. A large crowd witnessed the game and showed interest by encroaching on the playing field on every possible occasion.

The Mt. Pleasant boys presented a team of snappy fielders and strong batters. Coggins, Joblin and McAdam were exceptionally strong in the infield. Joblin's jumping catch of Roy Barnum's hard hit liner in the first was sensational.

For four innings both teams showed how softball can and should be played, the only score for Mt. Pleasant being the result of a short passed ball blocked by a spectator. In the fifth the Rawdon boys broke loose with six runs, coupling heavy hits with local errors. While the Petherick's squad could hit Pierce's offerings, the fielders robbed them of every chance of scoring.

Kerr pitched a very steady game for the home boys and fielded his position well. He deserved a win on his performance showing more control than his opponent Pierce, who had difficulty in controlling his fast delivery.

The Rylstone garden party held on Mr. Herbert Spencer's lawn on Thursday evening was a wonderful success. The lunch was served, cafeteria style, while the well decorated refreshment booths were well patronized. The Northumberland Regimental Band furnished excellent music for the occasion. Total proceeds exceeded $360.

That the narrow roads in this locality are a menace to the safety of visiting motorists was clearly shown on Thursday night when Mr. K. Weaver, one of the Mt. Pleasant ball team, almost upset his car in the ditch while meeting another vehicle. The car settled into the mud by the roadside and a tow-rope had to be used before the car could be removed. Strangers are well advised to take no chances around these parts, as accidents might easily result.

Fishing is still a popular pastime at the local picnics. When St. John's United Sabbath School visited Crow River on Friday afternoon, a number engaged in fishing. Mr. Charles Stephens, a Campbellford angler of some renown, succeeded in landing a 4-pound bass, one of the beauties for which these northern streams are famous.

HAVELOCK, July 27.—An inquest was held by Coroner Dr. J. NORWOOD LODGE DECORATION DAY

Oddfellows Place Flowers on Graves of Departed Brethren.

NORWOOD NEWS

NORWOOD, July 27.—Norwood Lodge, Independent Order of Oddfellows, No. 262, held its annual decoration day on Sunday afternoon. The members met in the lodge room shortly after one o'clock and were joined later by a number of visiting brethren. A Peterboro band was in attendance, and about three o'clock a procession, headed by the band, was formed and marched to the cemetery, where the beautiful memorial ceremony of the order was given and the graves of departed brothers were decorated.

The famous novel, "Hearts in Exile," now showing in picture, was presented in the Town Hall, Norwood, on Saturday evening, under the auspices of the I. O. D. E. The attendance was very small, but those who did attend were well rewarded as the picture is a really good one.

Mr. Sam McGee of Asphodel plucked from a field of wheat grown on the farm of his son-in-law, Mr. Stephen Elmhirst of Otonabee, several stalks of wheat. One measured six feet high and several of the others were within a few inches of that mark. The wheat is of the Clauson variety and Mr. Elmhirst has five acres of it. It was sewn on land that had been used for pasture for nearly a hundred years. The farm is the old Beckett homestead and is situated some seven miles west of Norwood.

A game of softball was played on the United Church lawn on Wednesday evening between the boys and girls of the Sunday School.

LINE-UP FOR GAME TO-MORROW EVENING

C.G.E. Ladies' Softball Team Will Meet Visitors in Fine Shape—Game at 6.15.

The following is the line-up for C.G.E. Ladies' team in their game tomorrow night against the Gooderham and Worts team, leaders of the Manufacturing section of the Ladies' Softball League in Toronto:

C. Taylor, 2b; V. Langton, lf; A. Logan, m; D. Mortimer, c; D. White, 3b; H. Plunkett, 1b; B. Vincent, p; E. Greenhalgh, ss; A. Janeway, rf; M. McLaren, M. Nixon, M. Mortimer, G. McCarthy, F. Greer, spares.

In the practice last night, the girls were all going fine. The men in the factory say it is all very fine for the Ladies to go on the Highway and meet the different teams, but the men think it is their turn to go out and meet the Distiller-ettes.

This should be a cracker-jack of a game, and the fans will no doubt be out in large numbers.

TWO LEAFS

Cecil "Babe" Dye, star professional hockey sharpshooter and diamond outer-gardener, who has been unconditionally released by the Toronto Baseball Club. Dye had been used very little, and for part of the season had been under suspension. An injury to his back, which may have been received while playing hockey, gave the player a good deal of trouble. At the top of his form, Dye is a very useful player, fast in the field and on the bases, a good hitter and thrower. In 1924, with the Buffalo team, he hit .310 in 164 games, while in 1925, with the same team, his average was .293 in 125 games.

Vic Sorrell, young right-hand pitcher, who despite the fact that it is only his first year in organized baseball, has shown great form with Toronto in the International League. He is being given quite a bit of attention by major league scouts.

HOW TO SWIM

by William Cannon

Exhale Under Water.

If difficulty is experienced in breathing, and there very probably will be, go ashore to shallow water and try it lying on the stomach.

Count one, as the right hand goes forward, and inhale.

Count two, as the right hand comes downward and the face goes under water.

Count three as the left hand goes forward.

Count four as the breath is exhaled under water and the left hand comes down.

Repeat this until it comes easy. There will be difficulty at first, but in swimming the difficulties are overcome by getting used to doing them, and a day or so in the breathing practice will be of more value to the swimmer than almost anything else.

SECRETS OF STARS INSIDE BASEBALL

by Billy Evans

While there are certain fundamentals that most ball players employ at the bat still nearly every one has an individual style.

Thus it is rather difficult to put down any definite set of rules that could be followed by all batters with much the same success.

Here is the system that I employ at the bat. It is merely my idea of how to bat. It may not fit into the general scheme of many players yet it may enable others to ncrease their batting average through the use of some of the suggestions offered. That will be worth-while.

I like to have the weight of my body equally distributed on both legs.

This stance allows the batsman to adjust himself according to the style pitch. He can step in if the ball is a trifle outside. If the ball is hugging the inside of the plate he can step back.

However many of the best batters in the game carry the weight entirely on the back foot.

My reason for favoring an equal distribution of the weight is that it makes it easier to shift and prevents lifting up on the ball to some degree.

Always change your style at the plate to suit different pitching that you go up against.

For a right-handed hitter when facing a southpaw I favor standing far back in the batter's box and vice versa. A curve ball must break in and a position far back in the box gives the batsman a better chance to follow it and helps his timing.

With a pitcher who depends largely on a slow ball or change of pace I prefer standing well up in the front of the box.

And always remember you can't make any base hits with your bat on your shoulder. You must take your cut.

Diamond Disputes Decided

by BILLY EVANS

Seeing he will be unable to catch thrown ball, first baseman hurls glove at it, deflecting it into right field. Batsman who hit ball reaches third base. What is proper ruling?

* * *

Until this year, contact of thrown glove at thrown ball entitled all runners to two bases. The ball becomes dead.

The change in the rule makes it possible for the runner to advance more than two bases.

While still entitled to two bases, if he chooses he can try to advance farther at his peril, the ball now being considered in play, not dead.

The batsman in this case was entitled to third.

SPORTING LADIES BEAT SIXTH LINE

Sporting Ladies—Misses Naish, p; Foster, c; Fowler, 1b; Muir, 2b; Johnson, 3b; Ferguson, ss; Edwards, mf; Cononrs, rf; Cranon, lf.

Misses Foster and Naish particularly distinguished themselves.

SCOTT WORN OUT; WELCOMES DEATH

Tells Wife Only Two Reasons For Wishing To Escape Noose.

CHICAGO, July 27. — Russell Scott, condemned murderer of Richard Maurer, clerk, killed in a drug store robbery, has written to his wife that he is so tired mentally and physically that but for two reasons he would welcome death by the rope, now set for October 15. In the nine-page letter to Mrs. Scott, given to newspaper reporters for publication before being mailed, Scott set down one of his reasons for lack of entire readiness to die as innocent of the slaying and the other as reluctance to leave Mrs. Scott and their children.

"It is like a swimmer in the middle of the ocean, so tired that every effort and movement is increasingly harder, who at least gives up to the irresistible impulse to seek peace and rest by just sinking."

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

FILM VERSION OF "YELLOW FINGERS" CLOSELY FOLLOWS SOUTH SEA NOVEL.

"Yellow Fingers," Fox Films version of Gene Wright's enthralling story of the South Seas, which is now showing at the Regent Theatre, follows the book with startling accuracy. The characterizations leave nothing to be desired—in fact those who have read the novel will see the people step out of the book just as they imagined them to be.

Beautiful little Olive Borden is Saina—a fiery half-caste girl, who has been reared to believe she is all white and who, heartbroken, tries to turn all native when she discovers what she is. From this point on there is something proudly pathetic about the little girl who had maintained her social prestige on the island because of her white parentage.

Not even the fact that she discovers herself to be the granddaughter of the old Rajah can quite make up to her for her loss of caste. When she assumes the throne and becomes the queen of the Island on the death of her grandfather there is a tragic droop to her body as she watches the boat with her guardian and the girl he loves sail out into the ocean.

Ralph Ince is cast as "Brute" Shane, guardian of Saina. Nigel de Brulier is the old Rajah; Edward Piel, the Chinaman, who brings about the tragedy through his plot to make away with Nona, the lovely English girl, played by Claire Adams.

Others in the cast are Otto Matieson, Armand Kaliz, John Wallace, Charles Newton, Josephine Crowell and May Foster. Emmett Flynn directed the production.

OTHER STRANDED.

KINGSTON, Ont., July 27. — In the act of aiding others in distress, William Henry Smith, assistant superintendent of the Collingwood Shipbuilding Companies plant of this city, was drowned on Sunday night about half a mile out from the shipbuilding drydock. Mr. Smith in company with his wife had gone out to give aid to a stranded boat in midstream. In attempting to bring the boat ashore, he was drowned, and while giving out more line he fell into the water and in sight of his wife and the two people in the second boat, went down in about 75 feet of water.

CROP CONDITIONS SLIGHTLY IMPROVE

Hail Fell in Many Districts, But Little Damage Was Done.

WINNIPEG, July 27 (Canadian Press).—While many districts in the West were visited by hail during the past week, damage to crops was comparatively slight, and crop conditions, if any different, are a trifle better than a week ago, according to the weekly crop report of the Canadian National Railways, issued yesterday.

Rye cutting is now proceeding in Manitoba, and will be general in ten days, when barley cutting will also begin. In Brandon district it is expected that wheat will be ready for the binder in ten days.

Many points in the three Provinces which had been suffering from drouth received much-needed rain, which will do much toward filling the grain. In Manitoba and Saskatchewan wheat and coarse grains are now headed out, and in Alberta they are in process of heading.

Honey bees seldom live more than six weeks.

Last Survivor of President's Children Dies Quite Suddenly.

IN 83RD YEAR.

MANCHESTER, Vt., July 27. — Robert T. Lincoln, son of Abraham Lincoln, was found dead in bed at his summer home here yesterday.

Mr. Lincoln, who had served as Secretary of War, Minister to Great Britain, and for years as President of the Pullman Company, of late has been in feeble health. He would have been 83 years old on August 1.

He was the eldest of the martyred President's five children, and he outlived the others by many years. His only son, John, died many years ago while attending school in France, and his daughter is married.

LIQUOR SALESMAN YIELDS TO POLICE

James Voelkner, Sought in Buffalo, Comes To Station.

BUFFALO, July 27 (Canadian Press).—James Voelker, sought as a distributor of the poisonous liquor which has left a trail of dead and blind along the Buffalo-Niagara frontier, to-day appeared voluntarily at police headquarters in company with his lawyer and surrendered.

The attorney who accompanied Voelker was Frank Freedman, well-known in local political circles. Voelker was immediately questioned by detectives concerning his alleged activities as an alcohol vendor. He was named as the source of some of the fatal liquor by owners of the soft drink places where the victims purchased it.

Voelker is reported to have amassed a fortune from his illegal business in recent years.

Police said they found in the garage in the rear of Voelker's home, white sticks of a chalk like substance which is used in removing poison from wood alcohol.

Voelker refused, on the advice of counsel, to make any statement to the police. It was said he would be given an opportunity to plead to a charge of manslaughter, first degree, later in the day. Police and Federal authorities on both sides of the border were running down clues to day concerning the origin and movement of the poison which took 34 lives and made others blind and ill.

One theory was that the liquor originated in Germany or Belgium, was shipped to New York, and from there to Buffalo. Here it was unsuccessfully redistilled and was smuggled into Canada, where it was used in the production of cheap gin and whiskey. Some of this liquor found its way back to Buffalo soft drink places falsely labelled as good Canadian liquor, and the remainder was disposed of in Canada at very cheap prices.

AGREEMENT ON RUM REACHED

British and Americans Confer in Attempt To Stop Running.

WORK STARTING.

LONDON, July 27 (Canadian Press). — Anglo-American anti-rum running discussions were ended today with complete agreement on eight far-reaching recommendations to hinder liquor smuggling to the United States. The task of setting up machinery to administer the recommendations which emanated from both sides will be started by Washington immediately.

Godfrey Locker Lampson, Under-Secretary of State for Home Affairs, read a statement in the House this afternoon, outlining the agreement. Replying to a question as to whether the Dominions had been consulted, he stated that a representative of the Colonial Office had been present at all conferences.

Being Kept Secret.

WASHINGTON, July 27 (Canadian Press)—The rum smuggling agreement reached between Gen. Andrews and the British Government is to be kept secret for the present.

CANOE MAKERS' ANNUAL PICNIC

Employees of Peterborough Canoe Co. Visit Wallace's Point.

SPLENDID OUTING.

One of the most delightful outings of the season took place on Saturday afternoon, July 24, when the employees of the Peterboro Canoe Company and their friends, visited Wallace's Point, on the Otonabee. The pleasures of the much talked of event were now to be realized. Tom Taylor and his associates had made every effort to make the trip an enjoyable one with dancing, sports, etc., and everyone in the large crowd of two or three hundred joined in an effort to make the event a memorable one. Taylor and Bridgewater had the lower deck a whirling jolly bunch fox trotting and waltzing. Even the genial Harry Morgan and Joe Collins could not resist the roll licking timely music played by T. Taylor's orchestra. The very young were not forgotten. Bags of candy were given to all. Soon the fine grounds at Wallare's Point hove in sight and the sports began. Races for boys and girls, young and old, and right good prizes bought with care and good taste, everyone worth while and useful.

The events and winners were as follows:

Boys, 6 and under: Clare Fairbairn, Harvey Cheel.

Girls, 6 and under: Jean Hendry, Winnie Record.

Boys 6 to 9. B. Gilbert, H. Vallery.

Girls 6 to 9: Marjorie Oliver, Jean Scholey.

Girls 9 to 11: Marjorie Gilbert. Margaret Morgan.

Boys 9 to 11: M. Murdock, George Scholey.

Boys 11 to 14: J. Richardson M. Murdock.

Girls 11 to 14: Pauline Gilbert, Lena Cheel.

Girls, free for all, Margaret Simpson.

Boys, free for all: Ira Dundas.

Girls free for all: Grace Mongraw.

Men, 35 and under: G. Mongraw.

Ladies: Mrs. C. Scholey.

Men, 35 and over: W. A. Richardson,

Men 50 and over: T. Sexsmith.

Cigarette race: Jean Cameron and T Taylor

Three legged race: Jean Gillespie and George Mongraw

Special mention is made of the race between Bill Richardson and Charlie Gilbert Charlie got the idea he could beat Bill and he nearly did it. Bill won by an inch but Charlie says Bill's waistline did the trick.

It was now time for supper and there was no scramble for baskets as the management, W. A. Richardson and C. H. Rogers had taken care of that most important part by providing loads of eats served by T. H. Hooper in his very able manner

Harry Morgan in his usual humorous way thanked the management for the splendid supper and the boat trip, which they so generously had given, and made the suggestion that they make it an annual affair.

The return journey was for the hour of 7 p.m. and everyone was wishing it was the start instead of the finish. First of all came the counting of votes to decide the most popular lady on the picnic. The prize of a beautiful cake plate was presented to Mrs. Joseph Collins. This being over the orchestra struck up the music and were once again all set fo the square dance. In this there was one set of the real old timers and the other set consisted of the younger people.

The boat reached the George street wharf winding up one of the best picnics of the season. Thanks of the party is extended to the Stoney Lake people for their usual courtesy.

LAMBDEN JOINS SEARCHERS FOR FRIENDS' BODIES

Senior Survivor of War Canoe Tragedy Assisting Workers.

NO MORE FOUND.

Additional Equipment From Toronto in Use— Men From Peterborough.

FENELON FALLS, July 27 (Canadian Press).—Arthur H. Lambden, Galt, one of the survivors of the Balsam Lake war canoe tragedy, in which eleven young men lost their lives, to-day assisted in the search for the bodies of the remaining members of the ill-fated party. Early this afternoon no additional bodies had been recovered from the lake.

Led by Superintendent Hilliard Lang of the Toronto life-saving service, searchers were out on the lake dragging again to-day, assisted by five additional deep-sea drags which were sent from Toronto.

The Government airplane was up twice this morning but failed to locate any of the bodies.

More From Peterborough.

Acting Mayor Nagle Phelan, in response to the demand for men to assist in searching for the bodies of the boys who were drowned at Balsam Lake, sent two men up this morning who would be capable of rowing. They have had men able to hold the ropes of the drag net, but men to pull on the oars all day long have been very scarce.

NARROW ESCAPE FOR YOUNG LAD

Falls Across Whiffle Trees of Wagon as Horse Bolts.

DRIVER SHAKEN.

Residents in Reid Street at the Chemong Road end were horrified to see a horse bolt this morning with a lad lying on the whiffle-trees attached to the rig. The driver, Lief Krough, who had been delivering for J. T. Braund, in attempting to turn in the narrow road had pulled the horse too sharply round and locked the wheels hard against the side of the rig.

The horse which is usually a very docile animal started off in a panic dragging the vehicle along until the front wheels were pulled off. The lad, who was riding with Krough, was thrown from the seat, falling on the whiffle-trees in dangerous proximity to the heels of the running animal, where he lay until the horse was stopped and he was rescued from his perilous position. Krough was thrown to the ground, being fortunate in escaping with only a slight injury to his face. The boy was quite uninjured. The fact that the wheels jammed against the sides acted as a brake to the progress of the terrified animal prevented a much more serious termination to the affair.

AROUND THE CITY.

About twenty of the local members of the Independent Order of Oddfellows motored to Norwood on Sunday, to take part in the annual decoration day of the Lodge there.

The Maple Leaf Baseball team will practice Wednesday evening at the Exhibition Park at 6 o'clock sharp. All players are requested to turn out to this practice.

GREAT WINDS SWEEP COAST

Gale Reaches Velocity of 80 Miles an Hour This Morning.

AT PALM BEACH.

NEW YORK, July 27 (Canadian Press—By Telephone).—The wind that attained a velocity of 80 miles an hour at 9.45 o'clock this morning still was sweeping over West Palm Beach and vicinity at 1 o'clock today. No lives have been lost, and no injuries have been reported.

Many roofs have been blown from houses, trees have been uprooted, and the seas, lashed by the fierce winds, are running over the ocean boulevard.

It is estimated that the greatest damage so far done by the storm was caused by these seas, which have damaged the boulevard for several miles.

Communication with Palm Beach has been partly severed, but several persons were able to drive there by automobile before the wind reached its maximum. It was headed for the west coast, where it is feared even greater damage will be caused.

Barometer Rising.

ATLANTA, Ga., July 27 (Canadian Press).—Miami and West Palm Beach, Fla., were cut off from wire communication with the outside world to-day, due to a hurricane which swept up the lower east coast from the Caribbean Sea. A message from the oil tanker Charles M. Everest, off the east coast, intercepted at Tampa, said the barometer at Miami at eight this morning was 29.50, and steadily rising.

OFFICERS OF PARTY RE-ELECTED FOR YEAR

Only One Name Submitted to the Convention — Mr. White Says Conservatives Would Have Cut Taxes Lower.

(Examiner Correspondence).

WARKWORTH, July 28.—Twice victorious in the Federal arena, and also undefeated in the minor contests of municipal skirmishes toward political prominence and achievement, Milton E. Maybee, M.P., of Brighton Township, has launched upon his third successive campaign with the unanimous nomination by Northumberland Conservatives at their convention here to select a candidate for the Dominion elections. Although the choice of Mr. Maybee had been unquestioned in all the recent party gossip and acclamation for him was a predetermined certainty, the meeting in the Town Hall Tuesday was enthusiastic and spirited in spite of the sultry, midsummer weather. The hall was filled, the county was represented from all of its sections, women were notably numerous, and not only had the promised speakers arrived, but there was also the fortuitous acquisition of R. S. White, M.P. for Mount Royal constituency in Montreal, who was collector of Customs at the port of Montreal for 21 years, former editor of the Montreal Gazette, and native son of Peterboro, where, it is understood, he began his newspaper experience. His quiet, senatorial style was in sharp contrast with the breezy, thumping attack of Fred. McBrien, M.P.P. for South Toronto, but both shared the felicitations of the responsive audience. For Mr. Maybee was reserved the real demonstration of the convention, an ovation that cheered him into the political lists once more. And he concluded his speech of acceptance with the statement: "I don't know who my opponent will be and I don't know that I care, but I have every confidence in the electors, and I believe we will roll up a far larger majority than we've ever done before in this riding."

With Col. Fred Boggs, K.C., of Cobourg, president of the Northumberland Conservative Association, on the platform were: Sam Nesbitt, ex-M.P.; Major Belford, M.P.P.; Harry Walker, Warkworth, Geo. Van Volkenburg, Harry Phillips, Brighton; Dr. Hess, Hastings; Robt. Lowrie, Campbellford; C. H. Davidson and G. A. Kingston, Campbellford; Harry McGuire, Cobourg; W. W. Porte, Dr. Wilson, A. R. Wilmott, secretary, Cobourg.

The business of the convention was quickly effected. The officers of the association were re-elected, on motion of Alex. N. McColl, Campbellford, seconded by Jas. H. Ross, and Mr. Maybee's name was called from the body of the hall in response to Col. Bogg's call for nomination. His appointment as candidate was sealed with a swelling applause that reached its full force when he stepped to the front of the platform.

Mr. Maybee's Reply.

"It is with a great deal of appreciation that I accept this token of your respect and confidence," Mr. Maybee began. "I accept in the interest of the Conservative party, both of Northumberland County and the Dominion of Canada. It is not because I feel any great qualifications but because you unanimously select me to represent you. I realize the responsibility you have placed upon me and I shall do my best to prove myself worthy. I have endeavored to serve the people regardless of party, and to-day I want to thank again all the workers of the Conservative party for the assistance they have given me.

Reviewing events of the late Parliament, Mr. Maybee said Mr. King had obtained Progressive support by barter and log-rolling. "We waited for six weeks for the Government to bring down their programme. Finally some business was brought in, and after that it was tragedy all the way. Whenever we were about to take a vote the lobbies were crowded with log-rollers, and even Agnes MacPhail was not above approach. On one occasion she had denounced the King administration, but a few hours later, and after a conference with a gentleman from Eastern Ontario, she came in and boldly registered a vote of confidence in the administration."

Mr. Maybee said Miss MacPhail was seen in conference with this Ontario man more than once. Continuing, he said the Customs enquiry was one of the most colossal exposures ever brought to light in this country. It was the first time a Minister of the Crown was found guilty of such gross violation of the responsibility placed in him. Mr. Maybee traced the work of the Commercial Protective Association, of which R. P. Sparks was chairman, in investigating the activities of smugglers. Receiving no assistance from the Customs officials and Mr. King after certain violations had been discovered, Mr. Sparks laid his information before Hon. H. H. Stevens, who moved for a committee of investigation, which was eventually done. Hon. Mr. Boivin sent Walter Duncan to investigate, and he brought in his report. Hon. Jacques Bureau, in the meantime, was placed in the Senate in accordance with King's idea of reforming the Senate, and he is there to-day as a Minister of the Crown. The committee's findings were so convincing that even R. L. Calder, the prosecuting attorney, who was a Liberal candidate in the last elections, is willing to offer his services to the Conservative party if wanted.

"There has been lost to the Dominion of Canada $35,000,000 annually through the Customs Department, enough to pay the pensions and have some millions to the good. Hundreds of thousands were lost in some instances. There was smuggling of silks and jewels, tobacco and narcotics, with the sanction of the Department of Customs, and with the knowledge of Mackenzie King. You've heard of Moses Aziz, who was kept out of jail six months because a Liberal wrote Mr. Boivin that Aziz was a great aid to the Liberal party. I think it was coined by Dr. Kaiser of Oshawa that the difference between Moses Aziz and Moses (As was) is that Moses (As was) led his people out of bondage and Moses Aziz led his in. To show what was being done and the power that was brought to bear, Mr. Sparks was approached by a Liberal and offered $15,000 not to make the exposure. He was threatened that if he didn's dry up he would be bumped off. You'll probably realize the significance of that. The only thing he did was to double his life insurance. Mr. H. H. Stevens deserves a great deal of credit for the way he conducted the prosecution."

Mr. Maybee sketched the episodes culminating in the dissolution of Parliament.

"After that took place Mr. King went about with a loud voice, crying "unconstitutional." What right has a man who hid himself in the confines of the United States when the future of this country was hanging by a cord, what right has he to say 'unconstitutional' to Lord Byng, who stood shoulder to shoulder with the Canadian boys at Vimy. I want to ask those boys who were with Byng of Vimy whether they will vote for Mackenzie King or for the Conservative party that has always stood for the British connection, a policy of protection and prosperity for Canada and for our workers of the soil."

R. S. White, M.P., for Mount Royal constituency, Montreal, said his presence was due to the accident of his holidaying in Cobourg. He had gladly accepted the pressing invitation of Col. Boggs, partly because of the opportunity to say a word in behalf of M. E. Maybee.

"I wish to testify to you the popularity of your member in Ottawa, with whom I was associated in the last session. Mr. Maybee has gained and held the respect of every one of his colleagues on the Conservative side. I feel sure that you are going to send him back to represent you again, and I give you my word you have a member of whom no constituency in Canada need be ashamed."

After referring to his Peterboro nativity and his old connections with this district he continued: "You have read the recent speech of Mr. Mackenzie King in Ottawa last Friday night, and what I wish to say in that regard is this: that if you will recall the speech he delivered at Richmond Hill on Sept. 5th last, and compare it with his speech at Ottawa last Friday, you will inevitably reach the conclusion that a more unprincipled, a more inconsistent public man never existed in Canada. At Richmond Hill he gave as the main reason his government was unable to put its policies into effect that it hadn't an adequate majority. There was reason and force in that statement. In the House elected in 1921, Mr. King had a majority of one over all. That was not large enough to ensure stability of government. Yet after the election of 1925 Mr. King was in a minority of 43, and he attempted to carry on. That great mathematician and logician Euclid, laid down as a postulate that the whole is greater than its part. Mackenzie King has reversed that, and would lay down the principle that the part is greater than the whole.

In the speech from the throne every paragraph was the result of concessions to the Progressive party and only by those means was he able to survive for six months.

Referring to the "so-called constitutional question," as he described it, Mr. White said the Liberals in Quebec were determined to make it the only issue of the campaign. Mr. King, Hon. Mr. Cardin, late Minister of Fisheries and Marine, insisted that they are not striking at Lord Byng, but that their target is Mr. Meighen.

"Byng is a fine gentleman," they say, "but Meigher is the culprit. My point is that if any responsibility rests on Byng, I'd place it there, and endeavor to prove Byng acted properly and strictly within the constitution. It is mere camouflage when they say in Quebec Meighen is the man they are after. Their ultimate object is to have in the future not a Governor-General named by the British government, with the consent of the Crown, and after consulting the government of Canada, but a Canadian, and there by still further weaken the ties to the Old Land and the British Commonwealth of nations. If Lord Byng manifested any partizanship what would be the partizanship of a Canadian placed in the position of Governor-General?

The Speaker of the House is presumed to be, and generally is, impartial. But when it comes to a critical situation, and if the condition should arise that there is a tie vote, the Speaker will every time vote with the party with which he had previous affiliation. And so it would be with a Canadian Governor-General."

Mr. White recalled that Mr. King was out of Parliament until about the middle of February when the writs were returned from Prince Albert.

"Yet within three months Mr. King made this speech: (Quoting from Hansard) "I had in my mind a vision of the spectacle we see to-night.

A member: What spectacle?

Mr. King: An attempt to carry on government without the Prime Minister in the House.'

"Imagine," said Mr. White, "he had

City Burns Cigarettes Rather Than Pay Taxes

The cigarettes had been donated to the jobless of Erfurt by a prominent banker.

MEIGHEN ENDS N. S. CAMPAIGN

Addresses Four Meetings in Cape Breton—Leaves For P. E. Island.

TALKS ON UNITY.

NEW GLASGOW, N.S. July 28.—With meetings at Orangedale, at Point Tupper, at Antigorish and at New Glasgow, Premier Meighen yesterday closed his campaign tour of Nova Scotia. To-day he goes to Prince Edward Island and thence, with meetings at Bathurst and in Bonaventure County, Quebec, he returns to Ottawa. But his stay in Ottawa will be but for a few hours only. After a meeting in North York, Ont., the premier will proceed west.

In the agricultural district of Antigonish, as in the industrial centre of New Glasgow, Mr. Meighen pressed his policy of protection.

"The progress of agriculture in this province," he said at Antigonish, "depends more than anything else on the development of industry in this province.

Farmers Bound to Prosper.

"Agriculture in Nova Scotia is bound to prosper just as much as industry expands.

"The first thing that should be done in the revision of the tariff of this dominion is to bring the agricultural schedules of Canada right up to the level of the United States, and let them find it as hard to get into this Dominion as they make it to get into theirs." He sketched the growth of the United States under its policy of "consistent protection."

"Let us adopt a Canada first policy," urged the Prime Minister, "and our future will be even more glorious than that of the United States.

"It is essential for us in this Dominion," he said at New Glasgow; "it is a matter of life and death that we get to the stature where we can decide on points of policy, in the light of what we know to be best for the whole Dominion considered as one. If we are not able to do that as a people then the sooner we raise the white flag of secession the better. If we cannot regard Canada as one for fiscal policy it is better we sever ourselves into our original parts and each conduct its own affairs. But I believe the people of Canada are big enough to think in terms of the whole country; are big enough to find out what is best in order to enable the Dominion of Canada to gather to itself the greatest volume of employment, the greatest volume of wealth —in a word to take the course which enables our country, in the great world competition, to have the greatest possible advantage over all its rivals. Unless we are able to do that I say again we are not really a nation at all.

Nothing was so important to Nova Scotia, Mr. Meighen added, as the restoration of the iron and steel industries. "You have our pledge," said Mr. Meighen that the discrimination against you in the tariff, which the King government fathered, will be swept away. A protective system we must have it or surrender our commust have it or surrender our sommercial identity."

Commenting on the Robb Budget, and the reduction in automobile duties, Mr. Meighen declared that to 9 out of 10, automobiles were a luxury and that it would surely have been better to reduce the tax on workmens clothes than the price of automobiles. He charged that the Customs inquiry had revealed a condition of mouldering rot in the administration of the department.

Replies to Bureau.

A. J. Doucet, who was a Conservative member of the Customs Inquiry Committee, referred to a statement by Senator Jacques Bureau, former Minister of Customs, denying charges made by Mr. Doucet in regard to the cruise of the Customs preventive steamer Margaret. Mr. Doucet declared that the log of the Margaret for the "joysail" showed that "Mr. Bureau and party" and "Mr. Lapointe and party" had been on board. The "logbook" did not say the "Minister of Customs," but who else can it be," asked Mr. Doucet, "but Jacques Bureau, Minister of Customs? The log book showed also that the Margaret called at Quebec and took on 'Mr. Lapointe and party. Whether that was the ex-Minister, I do not know," added Mr. Doucet, "but you can infer from that who it can be.

POLICE SEEKING 'MASTER MIND' OF LIQUOR RING

Search Has Narrowed Down and is Centred in Hamilton.

ARREST EXPECTED.

Woman Charged With Manslaughter Following Latest Fatality.

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—The Ontario Government's quest for the importers of the poison liquor which has proved so disastrous in the Province in the last few days, has settled down to-day to a grim search for the "master mind" whom the police believe to be back of the alcohol smuggling ring. The centre of the alcoholic drive is in Hamilton, and there is a strong possibility that an arrest of importance will be made shortly. Information given to the police by one of the persons now under arrest is expected to be valuable in locating the "king" of the bootleggers.

Provincial police officers are completely convinced that the source of supply is at Buffalo, N.Y., and this is the feeling of the Buffalo police. All investigations so far have confirmed the story that the alcohol came into Ontario by the coal car route, and that its retail distribution point was Hamilton. Some alcohol was also removed from a car of coal at Niagara Falls on the Canadian side.

Woman Remanded.

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Following an ante mortem statement by Richard Atkinson that she had supplied him with the liquor which caused his death last night, Mrs. Fannie Shulman appeared in the Women's Court this morning, charged with manslaughter, and was remanded in custody for a week.

More Murder Indictments.

BUFFALO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—At least two more murder indictments will be sought as the result of disclosures in connection with the investigation, it was announced. It was intimated that the men who will be charged with murder are residents of New York and "higher ups" in the ring from which Voelker obtained his supply of alcohol. Voelker's counsel stated to-day that his client felt he was a victim of those who sold him the alcohol which he distributed. The lawyer said Voelker would reveal the source of supply and would tell all he knew about the distribution of the poisonous shipment.

Woman Dies

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press) — With the death today of Mrs. Irene Colesnik, aged 30, and the mother of four young children, police believe they have found still another victim of alcoholic poisoning. The total number of victims in Ontario during the last few days has now reached eighteen. Mrs. Colesnik is the fourth to die in Toronto from that cause.

Governor-General Acted As Judge, Says R. Forke

BRANDON, Man., July 28 (Canadian Press) — Discussing the constitutional question at a meeting here last night Robert Forke, former Progressive House leader, and party nominee for the Brandon constituency said that Arthur Meighen never would have been premier "if all the circumstances had been known." Mr. Forke stated that the Governor-General had constituted himself a judge between Mr. King and Mr. Meighen in granting dissolution to the latter after declining to the former.

KING'S CAMPAIGN OPENS IN SARNIA

Takes Up Constitutional Question in His Opening Meeting.

OTHER SPEAKERS.

SARNIA, Ont., July 28.—(Canadian Press.)—At his first Western Ontario meeting here last night, Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King returned to the constitutional issue of the campaign. "The constitutional issue is not of my choosing," he declared. "It has been created and it must be faced. You can't evade it, you can't escape it," he told his audience.

Had the Governor-General granted dissolution to the Liberal Government an appeal to the country would have been made on the Robb budget. That budget with its tariff changes and its reductions in taxation was still before the people.

"Mr. Meighen said in Hamilton and again in Bagot, that if war comes to the forefront he intends to call Parliament and appeal to the people while the war is on," said the Liberal leader. "I think that is wrong. It is for Parliament to decide these matters. I cannot see how he can defend such a course. How can he dissolve Parliament if he is in the position I was in and he goes to a Governor-General who says 'I will settle that question.' Do you see where we get to by a departure from the rules and customs of Parliament?" Not for one hundred years had a British King refused a dissolution to a Prime Minister and not since Confederation had a Governor-General refused a dissolution in Canada. "Are we going to change all that and go back to the status of a colony?" asked Mr. King.

Address By Candidate.

W. T. Goodison, former Liberal member for West Lambton and present candidate, reviewed his record in the last Parliament, referring particularly to his service on the Customs Committee. "There was proved nothing of a shocking or immoral nature against any member of the Liberal Government," he said in reply to statements made by Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Defence, earlier in the campaign. The Government had been attacked for keeping Bisaillon in office, but the evidence showed that this dismissed officer had been engaged in the illegal sale of liquor under a Conservative Administration. Hon. H. H. Stevens, who made the customs charges, had received his information after it had been stolen. Mr. Goodison reviewed the Aziz case and the circumstances surrounding the delay in the excution of the three months' sentence. The man had since served his sentence of three months. The Aziz case was compared with a Quebec City case in 1920 when a Conservative Administration returned the fine and cancelled sentence of a convicted bootlegger.

Hon. J. C. Elliott, former Minister of Labor, emphasized the progress and prosperity of Canada since 1921 under the Liberal Government. Canada had to-day the greatest favorable trade balance of any country of equal population in the world. In the Customs and Excise Department alone, the revenue for 1925 was $19,000,000 greater than in the preceding year.

Under the last Government there had been seventeen departments. "Isn't it rather flattering that our opponents in this campaign can only find one department to criticize?" asked Mr. Elliott.

Senator F. F. Pardee declared that Mr. King came before the people as the leader of an Opposition who had never been defeated by a vote of want of confidence in Commons; he was succeeded as Prime Minister by Arthur Meighen, who was defeated twenty-four hours after he took office.

Raymond Allan's Body Recovered From Lake; Funeral On Thursday

Peterborough Men Were Active in Search — Fred McNeely Does Good Work in Handling Dragging of the Lake Bottom—Operations Are Continuing.

PETERBOROUGH BOY'S BODY FOUND WITHIN SHORT DISTANCE OF POINT

(By Examiner Staff Reporter)

ROSEDALE, July 28.—Raymond Allan's body has been recovered. The hope that lingers in the mind of every friend until the recovery of the body shatters it, is gone. Expectation that some of the boys might have reached shore and might still be wandering in the bush has proved to be a false hope. A few friends have viewed the body, now hermetically sealed for ever in its metal case. It is the body of Raymond Allan.

Peterborough men have been indefatigable in their efforts to recover the bodies of the eleven boys who were drowned eight days ago in Balsam Lake, but they have been looking especially for the body of the boy whose mother, they knew, waited here for a ray of hope or for a word of dreadful confirmation, Fred G. McNeely, Boys' Secretary of the Y.M.C.A., has been working like a galley slave. Eighty-five foot drags are being used, hauled by two boats. In one of these Mr. McNeely has been rowing, pulling the boat and drag up a stretch of three miles and then back, and back again. The party leaves Rosedale, at 8 o'clock every morning, lunches in the middle of the lake, and returns only at 8.30 at night. Mr. McNeely's crew was responsible for recovering five of the bodies.

Rev. J. D. Paterson, of All Saints' Church, has been working for the recovery of Raymond Allan since Wednesday last. He has made several trips to Balsam Lake, to Long Point, and to Rosedale, and spent Monday and Tuesday in the search. Boats were scarce, and Mr. Paterson went to Coboconk to obtain a launch, in which he scoured the lake yesterday with Rev. W. Wrixon, a Provincial Constable, and a representative of The Examiner.

Yesterday's Search

The last day of the search, as it affected Peterborough, was the most strenuous. Fear was expressed that the bodies would come to the surface in some part of the broad expanse of lake, and would there become unrecognizable, so that every effort was strained to watch constantly every part of the lake surface and every part of the shore line.

We started early in the morning, circling Grand Island to the south, examining every yard of the rough shore with the use of binoculars. A log floating on the water; a rock breaking the ripples, anything that might be a body, deflected our boat for an inspection. Sweeping around the western shore of the island, we sighted the boats of the Toronto lifesaving crew and others dragging the bottom of the lake where other bodies had been found. Strong, steady pulling by the men who manned the oars gave no evidence of the fatigue that might be expected to result from long hours of rowing. At the stern of each boat sat a lifeguard who held the rope supporting the drag, constantly tugging on it to feel whether anything had touched its sharp barbs. We hailed Fred McNeely, who told us nothing had been found.

Along the western shore of Grand Island we sailed, stopping now and then to examine more closely a log that lay submerged, a log that might have been the body we sought. For a mile or more the rocky shore slopes outward at the top, offering no landing place, and then there is a break, with a gravel slope up into the trees. Here a cairn of stones marks the spot where the four survivors landed after their five or six hour struggle while their comrades dropped from the canoe to their death.

At nine o'clock the seaplane circled over our heads and flew down to the end of the lake where was situated the camp from which the boys sailed. We followed, and saw a marker drop from the plane, which then circled back to the life savers. We speeded toward the spot, and converging on the same place as fast as they could

LADY SKETCHES HUNTER STREET

Art Student Seated at Corner of George Street Attracts Attention.

ONE OF CLASS.

A lady seated on a camp stool near the corner of George and Hunter Streets, engaged in making a sketch in oils on canvas of the view of the north side of Hunter Street as seen from the south side of the street west of George, was a spectacle that provoked a great deal of interest among the passers-by this forenoon.

The picture was almost completed about noon and was a very faithful reproduction of the scene.

The artist is one of a number of pupils of McGilvray Knowles, a well known New York painter and teacher of art, who has been in Peterborough since the middle of the present month. The party is boarding at the Y.W.C.A., where the gymnasium is fitted up as a studio. One of the reasons that induced Mr. McGillbary to select this district for the summer studies of his pupils was the abundance of sylvan scenes in the neighborhood that form admirable subjects for sketches for the artistic aspirant.

THAW CONFERS WITH EX-WIFE

Urges Miss Nesbitt To Sell Her Home in Atlantic City.

DANCER WON'T TALK.

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J., July 28 (United Press).—Evelyn Nesbitt and Harry K. Thaw, her former husband, have had another conference. The outcome was quite as definite as other previous recent meetings. Thaw, in his rambling incoherent way, admitted that he had urged Evelyn to sell her present home in Atlantic City and occupy one he had partially arranged for on what is known as Tudor Terrace.

"Miss Nesbitt is heavily in debt," Harry is quoted as saying. "I'm not buying a home for her, but she will be better off if she moves and doesn't sign any contracts for a while."

The dancer said brusquely that "Mr. Thaw will answer all questions" and declined to discuss her plans. Recently she admitted she would be glad to give up the cabaret game if provided with a home for herself and her boy.

YOUNG WOMAN SLAYS PEDLAR

Tragedy Follows Persistent and Unwelcome Attentions.

DEAD MAN AGED 60.

WIARTON, July 28.—A shooting fatality occurred north of Wiarton yesterday afternoon when Kate Hardman, 25 years of age, is alleged to have shot and killed Edward McCoy, a man of 60 or 65 years. McCoy was walking along the road leading from Mar to Red Bay, when he was shot near Sky Lake. He had been in the neighborhood of Mar for the last few months selling woven rugs, and was boarding with some of Miss Hardman's people.

McCoy was discovered lying on the road by William Ketteringham of Toronto, a summer visitor at Red Bay. He stopped his car to see what was the trouble, and the man died in his arms, having been shot through the chest. He at once got into his car to go to Wiarton for the authorities. About a quarter of a mile down the road he came upon Miss Hardman carrying a gun. She admitted shooting the man and surrendered the gun, Mr. Kitteringham states.

Mr. Ketteringham then put her in his car and delivered her to the Wiarton police. The woman appeared very unconcerned over the affair. No reason can be assigned for the shooting.

The police and Coroner went out to take charge of the body, and an inquest will be held at once.

Had Come From New Jersey.

According to information given the police, Miss Hardman had worked down at Newark, N.J., with the dead man in the employ of the Newark Felt Rug Company. While there, it is alleged, he persisted in following her around, and she complained to the police that his attentions were unwelcome. In April she came home, and McCoy is said to have followed her north. He boarded with her two brothers, and had been selling rugs around the Bruce County Peninsula for the company.

Evidently, according to police information, he persisted in his shadowing tactics, and once again Miss Hardman complained, this time to the Wiarton police, and is alleged to have then said that if his attentions did not stop she would shoot him.

Was on Fishing Trip.

Tuesday afternoon McCoy had secured from an older brother of Miss Hardman some fishing tackle, and went to Skye Lake to fish. It was near the shore that his body was found about 4.30 p.m., and whether or not he had been fishing and the girl met him coming home, or whether he was on his way to fish, the police have not yet determined.

While Miss Hardman is being held at Wiarton at present, there is no official lock-up there, and it is thought that she may be taken to Walkerton for safe custody.

Charged With Murder.

As the County Police Magistrate, who ordinarily resides at Wiarton, happened to be at Walkerton Tuesday evening, Miss Hardman was taken there, and appeared before him, when a formal charge of murder was laid against her. The Magistrate granted a remand of the case until Wednesday, August 4, and the accused was removed to the Walkerton Jail.

County Crown Attorney J. W. Freeborn is in charge of the prosecution. As yet, the accused has not retained counsel. It is understood that she has made no statement to the police.

The Hardman family has resided north of Wiarton for many years. The two brothers of the accused are well-known farmers.

FRANCE SEEKS HOME FOR KRIM

Cheapest Place That Is Secure Will Be Selected.

CAPTIVE IS "BROKE."

FEZ, French Morocco, July 28. —Ab-el-Krim, the erstwhile Moroccan chieftain, is "broke," and the new French government, embarked upon a programme of strictest economy, in earnestly seeking a suitable Saint Helena in its warm climate colonies where the former war lord may be securely guarded, and he and his family maintained with the least cost to the state.

Krim has confessed to the French authorities that he has only between 500,000 and 600,000 paper francs left out of the contents of the two iron-bound cases with which he departed from Targuist, most of his Spanish "pieces of eight" having been exacted as ransome by tribesmen during his pilgrimage to Taza.

The stories about his formidable bank deposits in Italy and England and other places, are described by Krim as pure legend. He has shown acount books to prove that he is far from wealthy.

Increase Of Noise In London Streets Will Cause Voices Of People To Becom e Like Those Of Americans

LONDON, July 28 (United News).—Voices of London people are doomed to become Americanized, due to the increasing noise here, Miss Margaret Mowrer, an American actress believes. "Owing to the racket of elevated street cars and automobiles in American cities, it is necessary to pitch one's voice high," said Miss Mowrer. "One develops a high nasal sound in an effort to make the voice carry. I notice a similar tendency on the part of London people."

London is having every opportunity now to catch American accents, too, due to the presence of so many American stars in the leading stage successes here. Among those American actresses now appearing are Jane Cowl, Peggy O'Neil, Dorothy Dickson, Edith Day, Vivian Osborne, and Miss Mowrer.

SCHISMATICS ASK CATHOLIC CHURCHES

Request to Government From Independent Mexican Catholic Body.

MEXICO CITY, July 28.—The schismatic Catholic Church, or so-called Mexican Catholic Church, which rejects the authority of the pope and believes in "a Catholic Church for Mexico governed only by Mexicans," has sent the Government a request that the principal Roman Catholic churches in Mexico City be turned over to the schismatic church, including the cathedral, if the Roman Catholics "abandon" these churches on August 1.

WIND AND STORM HAMPER FIREMEN

Fighters Hindered in Efforts To Check Western Forest Fires.

MISSOULA, Montana, July 28. —(Canadian Press.)—With wind and lightning hampering their efforts, the fire fighters are making little headway in checking the flames that have consumed large stands of timber in the national forests of Montana, Idaho and Washington.

Numerous fires are burning in the vicinity of Olney, near Columbia Falls, and a crew of fifty men left here late yesterday to combat the flames.

All the fires were started by an electrical storm. At Hay Creek, in the same section, the heavy wind pushed the fire into Glacier National Park in five places and unofficial reports say that 5,000 acres have been burned over.

Forest headquarters deny that any lives have been lost, although they report there ranches burned out and two fire fighters injured.

THE DIAMOND JUBILEE.

Kingston is reported to be enthusiastic over the proposal to stage a fitting celebration of the diamond jubilee of Confederation next year, and other municipalities are falling in line.

The Examiner would like to be able to report similar enthusiasm here, but so far there has been no move to co-operate with other centres in planning a worth-while celebration of the sixtieth anniversary of the birth of the Dominion.

The national holiday has been so consistently neglected in Peterboro that it would be a pity indeed were next year's opportunity to be thrown away because of indifference and lethargy.

A diamond jubilee committee, thoroughly representative of local interests, is the first step toward a successful celebration.

How can action along that line be secured?

The Examiner would be glad to publish letters from citizens who are interested in the proposal.

THE CHURCH ARMY CRUSADERS.

The visit to Peterboro over the week-end of the Church Army Crusaders, representing the Church of England, was an unusual event that produced some unusual and impressive features.

The climax came with the service held in Victoria Park on Sunday evening when Peterboro was afforded the striking spectacle of several thousand people making public testimony of their belief in Christ and whole-heartedly and unreservedly taking part in an open-air religious service, distinguished alike by the simplicity and sincerity with which it was conducted and by the reverend attitude of the crowd.

Peterboro people as a general thing are reserved. Attempts to promote community singing have usually crashed in failure against the rock of this aloofness.

The Church Army Crusaders, however, succeeded completely in breaking down this wall of reserve, and the only feature of Sunday evening's unique service that was more impressive than the singing of favourite hymns by that large open-air congregation was the sight of hundreds of people kneeling reverently on the green sward of Victoria Park as the benediction was pronounced.

Peterboro is a better place because of the brief sojourning here of the Crusaders.

THOSE FARM WORKERS.

A Toronto newspaper speaks approvingly of the fact that in the month of May over 11,000 immigrants entered Canada as farm labourers or farmers.

If we were sure that all these immigrants were carrying on at the present time according to their classification upon being admitted into this country The Examiner would join heartily in this expression of approval.

Unfortunately, there is no assurance that such is the case.

In fact, the evidence seems to indicate that many of these so-called "farm labourers" have no intention of going on the land once they get into Canada.

Some indeed, as labour leaders have pointed out, do not even plan to remain in this country any longer than is necessary to arrange for their entrance into the United States.

This condition is known to everybody who has given any thought to the matter, and among those who know the facts it is impossible to arouse much enthusiasm over the arrival of 11,000 "farm workers" when it is realized that the majority of them will be found in Canadian cities soon after their arrival, and that a certain percentage are merely using Canada, as The Examiner intimated recently, as a stop-over station on their way to the United States.

DECLINE OF LACROSSE.

It was a happy idea which included in the reunion programme a game of lacrosse, says The Brockville Recorder and Times. The popularity of this item was amply attested by the large crowd at the match. It was, indeed, a mixed crowd in its knowledge of the points of the game, but it was an interested crowd. And there were among the spectators many old-timers, who had worn the pads and carried the sticks in the days when lacrosse stood head and shoulders above baseball as a summer sport, who could not resist the itch in period intervals to test their long-disused skill.

There has been lengthy discussion in sporting columns over the decline of lacrosse and repeated efforts to revive interest in this, the most truly Canadian sport. But its revival has made little headway, and it is played today almost exclusively in a few old-established strongholds.

All former devotees of this sport cannot fail to feel regret over the widespread way in which baseball has displaced lacrosse. It is a game essentially of youth and a game requiring an abundance of endurance, stamina and good temper quite beyond the demand of baseball. It may be partly due to this requirement of good athletic condition that interest has fallen away, for the average modern youth is seldom prepared to make the sacrifices necessary to attain such condition. In standards of skill in stick-handling, generalship and team play, lacrosse has as many claims to the interest of the youthful athlete as baseball but more strenuous in a physical way, its chances of revival in these days of softer living appear very slight.

A NON-PARTISAN APPEAL.

The Examiner's recent contention that no matter what issues the rival political parties attempted to name as all important and what explanations they gave of the events of the last session, the public was quite likely to select its own issues and form its own opinion of the political history of the last few months, is confirmed by the election appeal issued by the Social Service Council of Canada.

The Council brushes aside, just as The Examiner believes many electors are doing, the charges and counter-charges of the embattled politicians, and goes right to the root of the trouble in the following statement:

"Because of the intense anxiety of both historic political parties, to possess office, and the power that goes with it, the Parliament just dissolved has failed in its duty to the nation. Though the session cost the people a very large sum of money, neither of the prime functions of Parliament was fulfilled. There was no adequate provision for public service. Useful legislation was abandoned. Instead of public-spirited attention to the nation's business, there was a deplorable spectacle of Parliament engaged for nearly six months in a struggle for party advantage and an obvious jockeying for control of election machinery."

With that summary of the situation only deep-dyed partisans can quarrel.

The outstanding features of the last session, The Examiner repeats, were the lust for office displayed by the two old parties and the unedifying spectacle of the newer groups, Progressive and Labour, bargaining for class benefits.

Nor can there be anything but hearty endorsation among Canadians who are thinking in terms of Canada and not of party of the measures suggested by the Social Service Council as indispensable.

They are, first, the summary removal from any position of public honour and trust of any person or official guilty of participation in or connivance at violation of the law.

Second, vigorous prosecution and adequate punishment, untrammelled by personal, social, financial or political influence, of any law-breakers.

Third, the setting up of a permanent non-party organization for the conduct of elections, as a means of eliminating the unseemly jockeying for control of the election machinery.

Fourth, all political organizations as well as candidates should be required to publish detailed sworn statements showing all contributions to election expenses and party funds.

No candidate worthy of representing any constituency in Canada should have any hesitation in endorsing such proposals.

THE FINANCIAL POSITION OF FRANCE.

With the franc now down to $.02, the French Government is making drastic efforts to restore the nation's financial and currency position. Unofficial reports of the experts' plan for stabilization of French finances, include the balancing of the budget through economies and through tax increases totalling 4 000,000,000 francs, of which 3,000,000,000 are from indirect revenues; a special fund for amortization of short-term issues, with an initial fund of 4,000,000,000 francs to be obtained by means of a foreign loan; current resources for this fund to be annuities from the budget, tobacco receipts and proceeds from the Dawes plan, with eventual voluntary consolidation of the debt by means of a loan guaranteed against exchange depreciation; stabilization of the currency under the experts' plan to be obtained through the Bank of France by the accumulation of a supply of exchange and by means of foreign credits, with exchange purchases and sales conducted at a fixed rate; after the preliminary period, an ultimate legal devaluation of the franc would be effected, the committee suggesting a theoretical level of 162.5 francs to the pound sterling; a reduction of bank advances to the state and prevention of further advances.

The program emphasizes the fundamental necessity for a strict observance of state obligations and a settlement of foreign debts. Advances to the state by the Bank of France now stand at 37,350 000,000 francs, while the maximum for such advances fixed by the French Parliament on December 4, 1925, was 39,500,000,000, reduced at the end of the year to 38,500,000,000 francs by a repayment of 1,000,000,000 francs to the bank.—The Monetary Times.

EMPIRE AND AIR.

According to Sir Samuel Hoare, British Secretary for Air, the world will see within the next ten years the establishment of air routes which will cut down the time required for trans-Atlantic and other journeys to an incredible degree. To travel from London to India only four days will be needed; from London to Cape Town six days. Australia will be reached in ten days, and the passage to Canada will be accomplished in a little over two days. This is the solemn pronouncement of an authority on the subject, and not the fantastic prediction of a sensationalist. In preparation for the anticipated travel, two enormous airships are now under construction in England, one by the Government and the other by private enterprise. The Mother Country has in view a most ambitious scheme of Empire communication by air which, if carried out, will "make easier the field of imperial trade, and make firmer the tie of imperial intercourse," and incidentally, "make cheaper the problem of imperial defense."

The plan is to set up in each country a central air station, from which branch lines will radiate to form a local series of international communications, all connected with each other and the great common system joining the Empire from end to end. It is hoped that the Dominions will cordially co-operate in the scheme, and the Australian Premier has already pledged his Government to full support of the project. It is a fascinating prospect, and one which must appeal strongly to every loyal citizen of the Empire. The British Commonwealth is bound together in the firm bonds of sentiment, but modern conditions require that communication between its component parts should be made as easy and rapid as possible. The sea has hitherto been regarded as an imperial highway linking up the British possessions one with another, but the achievements of science have introduced another element into the calculation, and air routes, because of their speed, may easily become of more importance than sea routes. Scarcely a start has as yet been made in this form of travel, and it is certain that the next few years will witness great developments. Canada should join whole-heartedly with the other Dominions in furtherance of the plan of inter-imperial air travel as proposed by the British Government.—Hamilton Spectator.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

Any candidate who makes long speeches in hot weather should in the interest of a long suffering public be automatically disqualified.

George Bernard Shaw says that if we get rid of great men we get rid of great nations, and then perhaps we shall all be happy.

The Privy Council has decided that bootleggers must pay income tax on their illegal revenue, a finding that indicates that as a means of quashing a nonsensical ruling an appeal to the Privy Council has its usefulness.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28.—(Canadian Press). — Owing to the failure of foreign buyers to respond to the higher prices asked by local exporters, the export trade in Canadian grain on the Montreal market to-day was again extremely dull. The trade in the domestic market was also quiet and prices for oats were fractionally easier.

The market for spring wheat grades of flour was again quiet but values were unchanged. In the absence of offerings from millers, the winter wheat trade was inactive but firm.

Prices for all grades of millfeed were well maintained under a quiet demand from all sources. The trade in standard grades of rolled oats was dull but prices ruled steady.

A moderate amount of export business was transacted in baled hay but the domestic demand was small.

Butter prices suffered a fractional decline under a quiet inquiry. The receipts were 42 packages.

The export and local trade in cheese was practically at a standstill but prices were unchanged. The receipts were 13,434 boxes.

The turnover in eggs was small but prices remained unchanged. The receipts were 1,026 cases.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 28.—(Canadian Press). — Set-backs in wheat values contrasted today with bulging prices of corn. Expected better weather for Canadian wheat tended to ease the wheat market, whereas persistent speculative buying gave corn quotations a lift. Wheat closed irregular, 1 1-4 net lower to 108 advance, corn 3-8 to 1 3-4 up, oats 1-8 to 3-8 off and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 2 cents.

Heavy selling brought about an early break in the price of wheat but commission house buying developed volume later, and a good deal of the loss was overcome. Indications pointed to a falling off in the big marketing of winter wheat southwest. Besides, elevator interests were conspicuous buyers of cash wheat and the highest temperatures yet this season were reported from Canada. Nevertheless, the dominating influence was a forecast of cooler weather and thunderstorms likely to improve prospects for the Canadian wheat crop.

July delivery of wheat here displayed relative strength throughout the day and at one time went to a premium of a full cent a bushel over September as against 1-4c above at yesterday's finish. One of the reasons for this was month end evening up, dealings were accelerated by the fact that the grain futures administration had called for a list of all open July accounts of 100,000 bushels or larger. Furthermore, Chicago arrivals of wheat are surprisingly slow to increase.

Crop advices, both on corn and oats, were bullish, although showery conditions were forecast for nearly all sections. Oats prices however, continued to show much response, profit taking sales being liberal on upturns in the market.

Provisions averaged lower in the absence of an special demand.

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

TWO ERRORS IN ONE SENTENCE.

A newspaper printed a picture of a man addressing a crowd, but the greater part of the crowd, or all of it, was shown with backs turned toward the speaker.

"The German delegate Sax, making his speech at Moscow, while the Third Internationale was sitting, in which he attacked Lenin. After making his statements against their head power, nobody paid any attention to what he had to say and turned their backs on the speaker.

There are two errors in the second sentence quoted. It should read—

"After he made his statements against their head power, nobody paid any attention to what he had to say, and all turned their backs on the speaker."

Lyrics Of Life

(By Douglas Malloch.)

TO TAKE CARE OF.

I've worked too long to sit around
Much now. It has a pleasant sound,
This talk about "retiring," till
You've sold your place, and made your will,
And haven't anything to do
All done and through.

And old, gray fellow such as me
May think some day he'd like to be
Where I am now. And, in a way,
I'm glad I'm where I am today.
But don't make one mistake, my son,
Like I have done.

Don't sell the place, and sell the tools,
And all the horses, cows and mules,
Because you'll get where I am now
You'll wish you had a horse or cow
Or something else you used to love
To take care of.

I've lived, I guess I've studied life,
I've had, and lost, a good, old wife,
And now I know creation's scheme.
I lost my wife, I sold my team,
Cashed in my house, and things like these,
To live at ease.

Joy's something else than ease, I guess.
There's not another happiness
In any land or any tongue
So like to keep an old man young
As having something that you love,
To take care of.

THE WEAKER SEX.

By Dr. Frank Crane.

Miss Ann Bliven has returned from Africa, from the Belgian Congo, after a colorful career as explorer and hunter. She has shot elephants, killed leopards and brought down lions. She weighs but ninety pounds and is twenty-three years old. She recommends big game hunting for nervous women.

There have been many other instances of women who have excelled in physical prowess.

One of the most remarkable explorers of unknown countries is Osa Martin Johnson, wife of the celebrated explorer, Martin Johnson. She has gone into regions such as New Guinea where white men had never been. She has shot big game and has been captured by savages, and often her life has been in danger. She is now spending a few years in the remote wilds of Africa taking pictures of animals.

She is a Kansas girl, and after she was married her husband said to her that he was going away on an expedition and that he was sorry to have to leave her.

"Oh," she replied, "you are not going to leave me. I am going along."

"But," he replied, "you cannot stand the hardships."

She went, however, and was never sick a day, but nursed him through several spells of illness.

There is a movement at present in the United States for the mobilization of girls in training camps by the Army.

There is no particular reason why a girl should not make a good soldier as well as a man. She can certainly hold a gun and pull a trigger. She can navigate airplanes, and do almost any other thing that a man can do.

For many thousand years we have fed upon the tradition of the weaker sex. Conditions in savagery, however, show us that woman, far from being the weaker of the two, is the hardier.

It may be flattering to man's vanity to pose as the protector of women, but it is a question whether that vanity is founded upon good physiological reasons and whether or not the trained woman is not able to take care of herself.

POINCARE CABINET RECEIVES MAJORITY IN CONFIDENCE VOTE BY THE CHAMBER OF DEPUTIES

Wins Second Victory On Demand That Bills for Financial Restoration Be Referred to Finance Committee of Chamber.

FRANCE HAS HAD MORE PAINFUL HOURS

Bill Asserts That Sole Aim Is to Restore Internal Credit Which Is Essential to Restoration of Country's Finances

PARIS, July 28 (Canadian Press) The Chamber of Deputies yesterday voted confidence in M. Poincare and the new Government. On his declaration of policy, the Premier received a vote of 358 to 131, the largest any French Cabinet has received since the 1924 elections.

M. Poincare then won a second victory, 418 to 31, on his demand that his bills for financial restoration be referred to the Finance Committee of the Chamber and that the committee be instructed to report them out for Friday's session.

The national union character of the new ministry was never better illustrated than when Poincare, Herriot and Briand, sitting in that order, from Left to Right, listened impassively to the Extreme Left onslaughts of their past political careers, and then exchanged smiles, knowing that their majority was assured in advance.

The new procedure in the Chamber restricting Deputies in interventions, which was adopted just prior to M. Poincare's accession to the Premiership, worked magically and allowed the House to adjourn at 5.50 p.m. So when discontented government employees tried to rush the police cordons surrounding the Palais Bourbon and reach the Chamber shortly afterward, they learned there was no government there to receive them. Later they attempted a manifestation before the Senate, but the approach of the dinner hour caused a marked dwindling of their enthusiasm.

M. Poincare, despite his strenuous efforts in organizing his Cabinet last week, and getting his colleagues to agree to his financial measures, appeared as sturdy and vigorous as when he jumped into the Chamber as Premier in January, 1922, and even younger than when he announced his decision in January, 1923, to occuy the Ruhr. He did not permit himself to become excited over the Communist and Socialist demonstrations; let pass many slurs on his former policies, and stuck strictly to the job in hand.

He was granted in advance overwhelming confidence, and, from all indications yesterday, when he presents his ministry to the Senate he should be able to keep his schedule and have all his financial projects voted before August 8.

Expressing the profound conviction that it was possible to improve the condition of French finances rapidly, the ministerial declaration announced the intention of the government to vote the indispensable supplementary receipts and make important economies. Direct taxation will be imposed upon acquired wealth, and indirect taxation will be increased.

Only brief reference was made to the inter-Allied debts, it merely being remarked that the nations, creditors of France, have as great an interest as France in bringing the monetary crisis to an end.

"France has known graver and more painful hours than the present," said M. Poincare. "She saved herself by union and energy. To-day again victory is subordinate to the same conditions. Let us immediately begin the heavy task, for the Republic, for the Country."

Premier Poincare introduced his financial bill after the vote on postponing interpellations, and it was referred to the Finance Committee, which is expected to give it urgent consideration.

The preamble of the bill asserts that it is the government's sole aim to restore internal credit, which is an essential condition to all attempts at financial restoration. In order to achieve this the government must, first, ensure balancing of the budget, and, seconds, undertake immediately amortization on the public debt.

The financial ills of France, says the preamble, have been due in the past to unbalanced budgets, and in the present, to the fall in the currency. The first item will be rigorous economy in the state services. The 1826 budget originally was balanced, but since the heavy expenditures in the Moroccan and other campaigns, increased pay of state employees, the rising cost in living and other extraordinary expenses due to the fall of the franc, are all to be considered; the government will be forced to ask for new credits.

The treasury is no longer in a position to met normal payments, and the government once more must resort to additional taxation. First will come direct taxation, because such returns are immediate. Although the sacrifice demanded of the country is heavy, it is pointed out, such measures are less dangerous than inflation. The increased revenues will be turned over to a sinking fun for the gradual redemption of national defence bonds.

The bill itself comprises twenty-nine articles.

Article 1 authorizes the government to legislate by decree till December 31, 1926, with respect to the discharge or removal of employees in the state services.

Article 2 gives the government authority to readjust by decree taxes, according to the present value of the currency, in no case higher than six times the existing rates of July, 1914, for taxes existing on that date and six times the original amount of the taxes created since then.

Article 3 provides for special transportation tax on beer, wines and mineral waters.

DATE DEFERRED FOR CONFERENCE OF DOMINIONS

House of Lords Settle Date of Convention After October 5th

EQUAL RELATIONS

Premier Baldwin Will Make Official Statement Concerning the Meeting

LONDON, July 28 (Canadian Press).—The Earl of Balfour, discussing in the House of Lords yesterday the question of the Imperial Conference, declared there was very little doubt that for the convenience of the various Dominions, the date of the conference would have to be deferred until after October 5—the original date set for it to convene. He intimated that Premier Stanley Baldwin would shortly make an official statement regarding the conference.

Taking up the work that it was hoped would be accomplished at the conference, the Earl declared that the question of the relations of British Dominions toward Great Britain would certainly arise if any of the Dominions desired it. He little doubted that the subject would be touched upon.

"These relations are those of equality—that is the very essence of the British Empire as I understand it," he declared, after stressing that this was solely his personal view of the matter. He thought that very little could be gained by discussion if the discussion was instituted with a view to clearing up exactly what that equality involved or to what degree of responsibility each part of the Empire bore to the other.

Discussing what might occur in the eventuality of war, the Earl of Balfour expressed the hope that so far as Great Britain was concerned, she would always be bound to defend any part of the Empire which was endangered. He thought that the duties of other members of the Empire to Great Britain could be no less than Britain's duties to them, but with regard to the particular condition under which these duties were to be executed, he did not believe anything was to be gained by inventing "hard cases" before hand.

"Our plain duty is to defend the Empire of which we are so important a part," he continued. "I hope and believe we will always carry out that duty, but it is also our duty (he was sure he was expressing the mind of the Government on this question) to bring the Dominions into our counsels as far as is possible. There are difficulties in time and space which no scientfic discovery can absolutely eliminate, but we desire to give the Dominions the fullest information possible with regard to the motives of our policy. We desire to bring them with us on every possible occasion, and we also desire that the unbreakable bonds uniting us should carry with them mutual confidence, constant interchange of ideas, harmony and the high ideals which are the great basis and strength of the Empire."

The Earl said he confidently believed the political insincts and aims of the various parts of the Empire, which were identical in character, would carry the Empire through all the difficulties of discussion and, if the occasion arose, through all perils and perplexities.

CYCLONE SWEEPS CARRIBEAN INTO LOWER FLORIDA

High Wind Causes Great Damage Along Atlantic Seaboard.

PEAR CROP SUFFERS

Ships and Yachts Tied Up in Ports by the Heavy Seas

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 28 (Canadian Press).—Riding on a wind which at times reached a velocity of 100 miles an hour, the storm which came out of the Caribbean Sea Monday hit the lower Florida east coast yesterday and was travelling up the Atlantic seaboard last night, leaving in its wake distressed shipping, damaged crops and crippled wire facilities.

The storm was reported late yesterday centred between Palm Beach and Jupiter, Fla., apparently moving slowly north-north-westward. A report to the Tropical Radio Corporation at Miami said the centre of the storm was retracking its steps in a 100-mile gale toward Miami. This was not taken seriously.

Miami reported damage of $100,000, three-fourths of which was suffered by the Avocado pear crop. A lineman met death there when he came in contact with a live wire atop a telegraph pole, and this was the only loss of life reported late yesterday from anywhere in the storm-swept area.

Palm Beach received the full fury of the storm in an 80 miles an hour wind. The barometer went to 29.03, but the blow abated at 3 p.m. Ocean Drive and the fashionable sea front boulevard of Palm Beach, fronted by palatial homes, was said to have been badly damaged by high waves. Trees were uprooted and the roof lifted off several houses.

Damage Along Seafront.

Twenty yachts anchored at the Yacht Club pier broke away and were smashed.

The Italian steamship Ansaldo San Giorgio Secundo caught the full force of the storm off Jupiter Inlet,

Thaw Purchase of Home for Evelyn Is Confirmed

ATLANTIC CITY, July 28.—Harry K. Thaw has purchased a home here for Evelyn Nesbit, his divorced wife and resort cabaret entertainer. The home, to be fully furnished by Thaw, is situated in Tudor Terrace, at Northfield. The price was $22,000, of which $12,000 was paid in cash, the remainder being a $10,000 building and loan mortgage.

The deed, recorded at May's Landing, N. J., Saturday, is made out in the name of Aloysius J. Connolly, Winchester, Va., where Thaw lives. The $12,000 check for the property was signed by Burton A. Gaskill, of Atlantic City, Thaw's attorney.

At the same time Miss Nesbit announced here that she will begin proceedings to obtain a divorce from Jack Clifford, her present husband. It was on account of Clifford, according to report here, that Thaw did not at once deed the new home to either Miss Nesbit or her son Russell.

Body of Boy Recovered Drowned at Wellers Bay

BELLEVILLE, July 28.—The body of thirteen-year-old Alonzo Allard, who with the mother, was drowned at Weller's Bay on July 10, was found by Frank Atkinson and Fred Allard, the latter an uncle, lying on the beach near Weller's Bay. The body of young Allard was badly decomposed, and owing to this was buried at Carrying Place Cemetery four hours later. A large cortege followed the remains to the cemetery, where he was buried alongside his mother for whom he sacrificed his young life in a vain attempt to rescue her from a watery grave.

136,000 miles of "the greatest of Satisfaction"

Service Is The Real Test

With a total motor bus investment of approximately $100,000 at stake, it is easy to realize that Red Bus Service does not leave motor lubrication to guess-work.

In the motor bus business rapid depreciation and excessive repair bills soon turn profits into losses. Successful operation is impossible unless engines are properly lubricated.

In first deciding to use Marvelube Motor Oil exclusively, the Red Bus Service based their confidence in the oil on the reputation of Imperial Oil Limited.

Today, after more than two months of hard service—136,000 miles of the severe grind of bus engine operation—during which results were carefully and regularly checked, Marvelube Motor Oil has proved, by actual results, the unique lubricating qualities which stamped it from the first as the lubricating oil discovery of the age.

The experience of the Red Bus Service is typical of that of thousands of individual motorists, bus lines and truck owners throughout Canada.

A Word of Caution

Always use the grade of Marvelube Motor Oil which is recommended for your particular make and model of car by the Marvelube Chart of Recommendations.

Marvelube is made in the following grades: — Light Medium, Medium, Heavy, Special Heavy, Extra Heavy, and "F" for Fords.

One—and only one—of these grades is correct for your car and you cannot hope for superior lubricating results unless you use it. If your dealer cannot supply you it is well worth your while to drive a little further and find a dealer who can.

Imperial Oil Limited,
56 Church Street,
Toronto, Ont.

Gentlemen:

I take this opportunity of advising you that our fleet of eight motor busses, which operate between Port Credit and Toronto, have been using Marvelube Motor Oil exclusively since this oil was first put on sale.

Each of these busses travels about 285 miles a day and we estimate that our entire fleet has now run upwards of 136,000 miles on Marvelube.

We have never before been able to obtain such mileage and satisfactory operation from our busses and we attribute same largely to the use of Marvelube Motor Oil.

We have had less carbon troubles, and in fact are enjoying the greatest of satisfaction and we feel it is only fair to advise you of the marked success we have experienced.

Wishing you every success, we remain,

Yours very truly,

RED BUS SERVICE,

Haliburton Men Appeal Convictions—Jailed for Nine Months.

TWO BROTHERS

LINDSAY, July 28.—Eines totaling $2700 have been imposed upon Secundus and Ned Biagie, two residents of the county of Haliburton in the police court here on charges of having liquor for sale. Secundus Biagie was fined $1200 with nine months imprisonment and an additional six months if the fine was not paid, at a recent session of the court, and then his brother, Ned, was fined $1500.

These cases arose out of the seizure by Provincial Constable Storey, License Inspector Porter, of Lindsay, and Provincial Officer Warren of Haliburton, of a monster still, the largest, it is believed, ever seized in this part of the province. The still was located a short distance from Haliburton. It was built into an overhanging rock and cleverly concealed with boughs, etc. The cases have been appealed.

INSTITUTE PLANS MEETINGS FOR FALL

Bandaging and Social Service Among Subjects to be Studied.

WARSAW, July 28.—The Women's Institute executive held a business meeting one evening last week. It was decided to hold a picnic on August 12, instead of a regular meeting. This is the first time the institute has held one, and it is hoped that all the members and those wishing to become members will attend.

The demonstration in bandaging will be given at the September meeting, and a social service worker will give a talk at the October meeting.

On the afternoon of Tuesday, August 10, Mr. McCrae will bring Miss Hopkins to the institute rooms to coach the girls in points in good dressing. All girls, whether married or single, under twenty-six years of age are invited, especially those who attended the sewing class last winter. There has been so much discussion about women's dress that it is thought wise to draw the attention of the young women throughout the country to the main points in good dressing for different occasions. Those who care to are asked to take part in the judging of styles at the Peterboro Fair.

It is earnestly hoped every girl of proper age will attend this class for the one afternoon.

Although these ships encountered some difficulties, they weathered the storm, reports at Miami said.

The 75-foot yacht Cinnibar, owned by Phil Pomoroy, a Miami contractor, arrived safely at Bimini, with a party of ten, but no word had been received from the 60-foot motorboat Zuliet, of Brunswick, Ga., which left Miami Sunday with 2 excursionists for Bimini.

Crippled wire facilities made communication with the storm area difficult.

Mr. A. H. Monk and son Earl of Bethany called in the village on Wednesday.

Fractures Hip.

A bad accident happened to Mr. Charles Heasman, a farmer living about three miles west of the village, on Thursday. He was about to unload a load of hay, and had stepped to the back of the load to allow the hay fork to take its lift off the front, when the horses became scared and jumped, pitching Mr. Heasman on the barn floor, dislocating his hip. Drs. Earl and Carmichael, Omemee, were called and attended the injured man.

FACTORY FIRE.

In one of the most spectacular fires experienced in recent years in the Queen City, the Newcombe piano factory, Toronto, was destroyed in the early hours of a recent Monday morning. The roof and front wall collapsed into the street. The building was entirely gutted, the damage being estimated at over a hundred thousand dollars. Photo shows an artist's drawing of the blaze which brought into action almost the entire fire-fighting force of Toronto. Householders adjacent to the ravaged building were ordered to vacate for fear of the side walls toppling over.

ALCOHOL TOLL HAS REACHED 38; MORE ARRESTS

Toronto Man's Death Brings Ontario List To Sixteen.

CLUES UNCOVERED.

Three Links in Distribution Chain Have Been Discovered.

TORONTO, July 28. — Yet another victim of poison alcohol was added to the long list yesterday when Richard Atkinson died in St. Joseph's Hospital. Atkinson was seized during the night, reoved to the hospital yesterday morning, and died about 6.30 last night. The body was removed to the morgue. Coroner Crawford will hold an inquest on Atkinson and the other two victims of wood alcohol, William Maybee and Mrs. Olive Guertin, at the Morgue, at 8.30 tonight.

Atkinson, who was married, was employed as a carpenter. Shortly before his death, it is stated, Atkinson made a statement in which he told where he purchased the liquor. As a consequence Mrs. Fanny Shulman of Maria street was taken into custody by Detectives Chisholm and McMaster on a charge of manslaughter.

Trail of the poison liquor that has resulted in thirty eight deaths in Ontario and across the border in the last few days, is being steadily followed back to its illicit source. Major-General Victor Williams, Commissioner of the Provincial Police, intimated last night that startling developments might be expected almost immediately. Arrests in Hamilton of Edward Miller and Joe Romeo were regarded as of extreme importance, he said. Romeo sold wood alcohol to "Red" Miller, Miller sold to D'Angelo, and D'Angelo was the final link in the chain of the death-dealing liquor to the consumers in the Oakville district.

Three links in the chain have, therefore, been unearthed, and the police are hopeful that questioning of the prisoners will enable them to follow it to the producing end. The arrest in Buffalo of James C. Voelker, who faces a charge of first degree murder, as an alleged distributor on a large scale of poison liquor, is also regarded as important. Whether the wood alcohol responsible for the deaths in Ontario is the same as the wood alcohol sold by Voelker in Buffalo, remains to be determined, but present indications point that way. Even should this prove to be the case the end of the chain will not have been reached, and United States agents have left for New York to seek a man from whom Voelker is said to have purchased the poison.

Issues Strong Warning

In the meantime the police have reason to believe that a considerable quantity of the bootleg whiskey is still in circulation, and Hon. W. H. Price, Acting Attorney-General, issued yesterday a strong warning to the public to leave all such concoctions alone if they value their lives. From time to time, said Hon. Mr. Price, large consignments of bootleg liquor have been seized at the border, although for obvious reasons the facts have not been made known the police desiring to entrap the consignees. The bulk of these shipments, however, give an idea of the possible extent of the shipment of wood alcohol which eluded seizure, and the quantity that may still be cached or in circulation in the province.

The death last night in St. Joseph's Hospital of Richard Atkinson, aged 53, from alcoholic poisoning should serve to impress this warning on the public. Fanny Shulman, said to have supplied the liquor, was arrested on a charge of manslaughter.

The Provincial Police are working night and day, and fresh developments are occurring daily. The province is divided into nine districts, under district inspectors. In the Niagara Falls district there are 23 or 24 officers who are all engaged in the search.

— Find Wood Alcohol

Chief of Police Kerr, of Oakville, stated yesterday that alcohol found in D'Angelo's garage at Hamilton was pure grain alcohol, but that two cans found on the Gill property at Oakville and one tin found on the Maybee farm at Oakville had been analyzed and found to be wood alcohol.

Two arrests weer also made during the day at Windsor and $2,000 worth of grain alcohol seized.

A further conference between Hon. W. H. Price, General Williams, Chairman James Hales of the License Board, and Solicitor Middleton, of the Attorney-General's Department, was held yesterday, with Acting Chief Coroner Dr. M. M'Crawford attending in an advisory capacity in connection with the inquests. Hon. Mr. Price stated afterwards that Mr. Middleton would coordinate the inquests and prevent overlapping.

Dr. Crawford announced later in the day that inquests on William Maybee of Oakville and Mrs. Guerrin of Toronto would be opened tonight at 8.30.

More Arrests

BUFFALO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Federal agents and police early to-day made six more arrests in the Niagara frontier poison liquor case. The action folowed the statement of authorities that James C. Voelker; alleged leader of the distribution gang, who is held on a charge of first degree murder, stood ready to make a full confession, naming those higher up in the wood alcohol traffic. Those arrested included Carl Voelker, father of James, who is charged with manslaughter. Of the other prisoners, four are Buffalo moonshine makers and handlers, and the fifth a drinkery owner, who is accused of a conspiracy to violate the national prohibition act.

WHEAT HARVEST STARTS IN WEST

Fields in Southern Manitoba Scene of First Cutting.

RIPENING FAST.

WINNIPEG, Man., July 28.—The first machines in Manitoba fields along the border began work yesterday. The berries are well developed, of good color and sound. There is no evidence of rust, though ripening has been very rapid in the torrid heat of the past four days. Some mills have reports of fields for large radius around Medicine Hat district badly shriveled from drought and heat. In Saskatchewan and Alberta the border districts are generally ready for harvesting. Through that section ample field help has been distributed.

186 HOMICIDES DETROIT TOTAL

Average of Nearly One Death a Day Since Jan. 1.

20 CONVICTIONS.

DETROIT, Mich., July 28.—One hundred and eighty-six homicides were committed in Detroit from January 1 to July 27, an average of almost one death for each day. This is a new high record here. Of the number 165 were committed up to and including June 30, and 39 of the 165 were held justifiable. The 21 homicides committed during July to date were taken from police records which await classification until compilation of monthly report. The records up to the end of June include 19 slayings by police officers in the line of duty. These are accounted justifiable. The others were classified as acts of self-defence.

Records of the homicide squad disclose that arrests and convictions have been obtained in 20 of the remaining 136 cases, a high percentage when compared with crime statistics from other cities and considering the fact that more arrests are probable in many of the unsolved cases.

CONDENSED MILK ABSOLUTELY PURE

The value of condensed milk as a guardian of health was curiously demonstrated by an item in The London Daily Mail recently, one sentence in the article reading:

"The complete replacement of fresh milk by condensed milk has notably reduced tuberculosis."

The story had to deal with the activities of the London Zoological Society and was reporting on the health of the animals. Many animals, especially those with cloven hooves, were liable to epidemics of bovine tuberculosis. The antelopes seemed to die of nothing else. Yet they lived under very good conditions and were given generous daily draughts of fresh milk. Then the fresh milk was cut off and the tinned variety substituted. A marked improvement followed and tubercle has been stamped out in the antelope paddocks. The Borden Company has long advocated it as an infant food on the ground of its being absolutely pure as well as uniform.

Impatience Is Cause Of Serious Fractures

TORONTO, July 28.—Impatience over his daughter's apparent tardiness yesterday involved Joseph Irwin, aged 50, in an accident in which he incurred fractures of the skull, collar bone, jaw and ribs. His condition is serious.

Irwin was rather indisposed. He lay in bed instead of going to work. Requiring something, he called to his daughter downstairs to fetch the article. She was slow in responding. Whereupon Irwin became impatient and went to get the article himself. As he reached the top of the stairs, however, in his haste he fell over the bannister rail to the floor below. He was unconscious when picked up and removed to the hospital.

ARMY CRUSADERS VISIT OMEMEE

Gave a Series of Sermons in the Anglican Church.

OMEMEE, July 28.—On Monday afternoon and evening, Christ Church, Omemee, was visited by a group of three women and six men, one-half of the party of Crusaders from the Church Army of the Anglican Church of Great Britain. The Army of Crusaders left England early in May and have been touring Ontario and Montreal, conducting evangelistic services similar to those held in Omemee, since that time. They will return home in September.

On Monday afternoon, a service for women only was held in the church, when one of the sisters told of the work of the Crusaders in England, while another assisted in song. The service was very interesting throughout.

In the evening, an open-air meeting commencing at 7, was held on the church lawn, for one hour, followed by a service in the church. The open-air service was composed mostly of singing the old familiar hymns, which were found on the printed sheeted, in which the choir and others joined in with great enthusiasm, and also choruses by the group of visitors, were thoroughly enjoyed. Shortly before eight o'clock the congregation took their seats in the auditorium of the church and as the gowned choir, the rector, and the Crusaders entered, the old familiar hymn, "Rescue the Perishing," was announced and all joined heartily in the singing, as the choir and visitors took their places. The service was opened by the rector, Rev. A. T. Weir, after which the leader introduced each member of the group, who in turn, told where he or she came from, their work in winter, and ending by a verse of Scripture. The leader of the group to Omemee told of the organization of the Church Army Crusaders by Rev. Carlisle in 1882, and spoke briefly of the work that they are carrying on in England. Their mission, the speaker said, is "To stir the insider," and "to bring in the outsider."

Short addreses were given by two of the brethren, the subjects chosen being. 'The duty of a churchman to the parish to which he belong," and second, "The duty of a churchman to the world." These addresses were capably given and were well received. A solo and a duet, also several choruses by the group made bright the evening's programme.

On Tuesday morning, a communion service was held at 8 o'clock before the visitors took their departure.

Struck by Car
On Friday evening, while running across the King Street bridge to watch his older brother, who was paddling a canoe on the river beneath, little Edgar Fisher, the six-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Fisher, was struck down by a local car. The driver, who fortunately was travelling at a slow rate, stopped immediately and, picking the little fellow up, rushed him to Dr. Earle's office. The child was terribly cut about the hands and face, the wounds in the face requiring seven stitches.

FRANCE TOO HOT FOR MOROCCAN

Sultan Moulai Youssef Says Heat is the Only Drawback.

LIKES COUNTRY

PARIS, July 28.—"I know of but one thing with which to reproach France, and that is the terrible heat," said his Majesty, Moulai Youssef, Sultan of Morocco.

"His most cheerful Majesty," the smiling ruler of one of the hottest countries in the world, as he has been popularly named since his arrival in France, is resting in his luxurious temporary Paris residence after a strenuous tour of France and Alsace-Lorraine.

He received newspaper men in royal splendor and discused with them such widely varied subjects as peace, war, Abd-el Krim, philosophy, and Paris.

Seated upon an improvised throne largely made of lovely silk cushions, and surrounded by twenty coal-black servants in long white flowing bournous, his Majesty amiably answered scores of questions.

"I must refer to this European heat," he said and smiled. "It is terrible. We never have anything like it in torrid Morocco, and they tell me also that America is even worse. I have suffered terribly."

His Majesty was asked if the recent stirring political events in France has jarred upon his peaceful Islamic philosophy.

"Why, of course not," he replied, and smiled again. "Each people has its destiny, its manner of accomplishing things.

"It is evident to me that we are not all alike, but who has the courage to say which people or which belief is right?"

Of all the places he has visited his Majesty was most profoundly impressed with Verdun. There, he said, was epitomized for him what war is, and why millions died. Then abruptly he added:

"But I am a peaceful ruler. I long to soften the heart of the world, for it is only through peace in thought, in word, deed and action that we shall approach perfection.

The Sultan showed compassion for Adb-el Krim when questioners asked about the Moroccan rebel.

"He was a rebel and so has gone the way of most rebels," he said. "But I have forgiven him. He made amends honorably, for he gave himself up to justice. I only trust the politicians will temper their treatment of him with leniency."

Then, bidding good-bye to the journalists, his Majesty, extending his hand to each one, said that if Allah should be willing he will come back to France before he died, to enjoy its rare beauties and see more of its beautiful products.

His Majesty returns to Morocco in a few days and with him goes a princely collection of European luxuries, including motor cars, jewelry for his wives and many pieces of rare old furniture.

UNCLE WIGGILY

Today's Bedtime Story

By Howard R. Garis

UNCLE WIGGILY'S LEMONADE STRAWS.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"We are going to make a lot of money, Daddycums!" said Jingle, one of Uncle Wiggily's little rabbit girls, as she climbed up into his lap as he sat on the front porch of his hollow stump bungalow one morning.

"Such a lot of money!" echoed Jangle, who was Jingle's sister. "We're going to make a thousand pennies, and be rich!"

"How?" asked Uncle Wiggily, gently pulling the long ears of the little bunny girls.

"We are going to make lemonade and sell it from a little wooden stand out in front," said Jingle. "It's a hot day and everybody that goes past will want a drink of our cold, sweet lemonade."

"It sounds good," said the rabbit gentleman, not twinkling his pink nose this time, for he did it in the story before this, if you will kindly remember. "But it will cost you a lot of pennies to buy the lemons and sugar to make your lemonade. The water won't cost anything but the other things will. So you will have to sell many glasses before you get back what you pay out for lemons and sugar."

"Oh, we aren't going to buy any sugar!" said Jingle.

"And we aren't going to buy lemons, either," said Jangle.

"No?" asked Uncle Wiggily, sort of surprised like. "How are you going to get the sour lemons and the sweet sugar."

"Nurse Jane Fuzzy Wuzzy will give them to us," laughed Jingle.

"'Specially if you ask her to," added Jangle.

"Ha! ha!" chuckled the bunny rabbit. "I am supposed to work hard to earn money to buy lemons and sugar to give away so you two can make lemons to sell and make pennies for yourselves! Ha! ha!"

"Yes: isn't it funny!" laughed the two little rabbit girls together, just like twins, which, indeed, they were, and Jingle asked

"When do we get the lemons and sugar, Daddycums?"

"Oh, I s'pose I'll have to tell Nurse Jane it's all right," said Mr. Longears, laughing some more. And the muskrat lady also laughed when she gave the two rabbit girls what they wanted.

Uncle Wiggily helped Jingle and Jangle set up the stand, made from an old box, with a piece of white oilcloth on. He also teased Mrs. Longears until she let Jingle and Jangle take a pitcher and some glasses and a tin pail in which to make the lemonade.

Soon the cool, sweet drink was made and Jingle and Jangle sat in the shade, behind their stand, waiting for customers and calling out

"Nice, cool, sweet lemonade, in the shade. Don't be afraid! Come and see how it's made. Buy a drink! 'Twill make the heat shrink!"

"Please buy, because we want a lot of pennies so we can get rich!" added Jingle.

But very few customers stopped to buy the little girls' lemonade, and they saw their ice melting away and hardly any pennies in the pasteboard box cash register. When Uncle Butter, the goat, stopped to buy a two-cent glass of lemonade he asked "Haven't you any straws?

"Haven't you any straws to sip my lemonade through. A straw, please!"

"Straws!" gasped Jingle.

"Straws!" exclaimed Jangle. "Oh, maybe that's why we haven't sold more, Jingle. We have no straws!"

Jingle hopped over to the bungalow where Uncle Wiggily was asleep on the porch.

"Daddycums!" she cried. "How can we get straws to serve with our lemonade? No wonder nobody will buy—we forgot the straws!"

"Straws? Straws?" murmured Mr. Longears, half awake. "Ha! I know what to do!" He hopped down on the lawn and began pulling a lot of long, hollow dandelion stems, from which the blossoms had long since fallen off. The stems were just right for lemonade straws and with his paws full Uncle Wiggily hopped to the lemonade stand.

"Come one! Come all!" he shouted. "Drink sweet lemonade, in the shade, from straws short and tall! Come one! Come all!"

Then the customers began rushing up to buy from Jingle and Jangle, who were so busy as never was, filling the glasses with lemonade while Uncle Wiggily put in each one a dandelion stem.

"The best lemonade I ever sipped!" grunted fat Mr. Twistytail, the pig gentleman. And Mr. Whitewash, the Polar Bear, bought ten glasses. So Jingle and Jangle sold every drop, and, though they did not exactly get rich, they had a fine time. And they thanked their Daddycums for making dandelion stems into straws. And if the ice man doesn't bring a postage stamp instead of a ton of coal, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's spare tire.

HURRICANE ON FORIDA COAST LEAVES HEAVY DAMAGE BEHIND AS IT MOVES FURTHER NORTH

Millions of Dollars Lost By People in Southern Part.

SHIPS AT SEA.

Winds Reach Velocity of 100 Miles an Hour at Times.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., July 28.—(Canadian Press).—The West Indian hurricane, which on Monday crossed from the Caribbean Sea to ravage the Bahama Islands and the lower east coast of Florida, hammered to-day at the sea gates of the upper peninsula.

Calm, followed by steadily rising winds, presaged the advent of the hurricane as it swept into new territory, leaving behind it distressed shipping, wind and wave damage which may run into millions of dollars, and paralyzed lines of communication. Behind the wall of gale-swept seas the fate of several ships was hidden. Only an occasional wireless message picked up by the Tropical Radio Corporation at Miami broke the silence at sea last night, and most of these concerned the Italian freighter Ansaldo San Giorgio Secando, which was reported early to-day to be still wallowing rudderless off Jupiter Inlet. At least six vessels were said to be in the vicinity to render aid which had been prevented last night by high seas.

No further word had been heard from the Danish steamship Wilhelm A. Reidermann, which messaged yesterday that it was in distress between Miami and Jupiter Inlet. Likewise the sea gave no word of the sixty-foot Seulieta of Brunswick, Ga., which sailed on Sunday night with 25 excursionists for Bimini. The Gulf Refining Company's tanker, J. M. Guffey, was nearly two days' overdue at Jacksonville, but company representatives believed the ship was riding out the gale.

At several places along the coast the hurricane winds reached an intensity of 100 miles per hour. A wind velocity of 70 miles an hour caused damage estimated at a million dollars in Palm Beach and West Palm Beach, where forty yachts and house boats sank in Lake Worth.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—Is Miss McPhail to be the next prime minister of Canada? It looks like it. The war has exhausted our men. We no longer have that energy of mind and of body which we used to have. We want peace and quiet. The reaction has come. Anything will do us so long as it doesn't make a fuss about anything worth while. We can still enjoy the malicious pleasure of reading the doings of degenerate humanity. But our energy carries us no further than the petty feuds, our little likes and dislikes. The great burden of statesmanship is too much for us. Love of a country as a civil virtue has never got past in these later years the status of a joke. But our women! What of them? A new access of energy, mental and physical, has come over them. Amongst the enemies of Caesar the women were more terrible than the men. Weak in body, but strong in spirit, they are now everywhere urging their men to be men and not maiden ladies with men's clothes on. A real woman is worth ten mock maidens, or new women. There are lots of men ready to take positions. That's not the complaint. They are ready even to climb on each other's backs to "rise to eminence," but outside the pulpit and the women's meetings there is an entire absence of anything but hopeless mediocrity. Where? Here in Peterborough. Visitors to other towns say Peterborough is away ahead in appearance, the witness of former promise, but far behind in business. We have lost our water powers, are losing our canal, and will lose our factories, and there remains now only to stand around and ask whose fault it is. The facts are here. There's no denying them or they would be denied. I say let us give way to the women. They have some spirit left. Mediocrity, which is another name for dry rot, won't do them. Let us send a woman to Ottawa if we can't get a man with energy and go enough. When people want the quiet, easy-going style of life they are growing old. It was not such people that made this town a city out of the bush. With all their turbulence the old-timers were real men and women, and who will pretend that there is any comparison whatever between the big men of our past like John Bertram and W. H. Scott and the men of the present? Why? People don't want them. We want either tools or let-alones. The idea of progress is too much for us. Let the women have a chance.

Daily Short Story

THE TRUTH WILL OUT.

By H. IRVING KING.

Everybody in Rockdale—that is, everybody who counted—was filled with that pleasurable excitement which comes to society in a small town when a new and unexpected piece of gossip pops up. Rockdale was not such a very small town, either. It had ten thousand inhabitants and a bank The bank was a branch of a great financial institution in the neighboring city and was managed by Lorenzo Downing. The news was that "Ren" Downing—for to Ren had his Lorenzo shrunk on the lips of his fellow townsmen—was going to marry Mary Carfax. Lorenzo was thirty-one and Mary was twenty-eight.

It all started from Matilda Lagree happening to see the bank manager and Miss Carfax talking earnestly together in the post-office lobby. Matilda tried to edge near enough to overhear what they were talking about. She heard—or thought she heard—Lorenzo say: "I have looked forward to this for a long time. We may consider it settled then?" And Mary had dropped her eyes and replied, "Yes." What did it mean? What could it mean? Only one thing, and off sped Matilda to spread the news.

What the bank manager and Miss Carfax had really been talking about was the taking over of the local bank at Plympton, a languishing institution six miles away, by the big bank in the city of which Lorenzo's bank was a branch, and consolidating the said Plympton bank with the branch bank at Rockdale. And Mary Carfax had a large block of stock in the Plympton bank which Lorenzo, as agent for his employers, was anxious to purchase from her.

"It's the most surprising piece of news I ever heard," said Mrs. Atherton Gage over the teacups two hours later to Mrs. Roger leming and others. "Why, I don't believe they have met each other a dozen times since Ren came back here to take the bank. They used to know each other as children, of course. Let me see: Ren went away aboutPten years ago after his uncle, Judge eleg Downing, died and did not leave the fortune Ren and everybody else was expecting the boy would get. From that time, until Ren came back, I don't believe he and Mary ever met."

Annie White was one of the first to hear the news after it had been promulgated by Matilda agree. Annie was a character, an institution. She was to Rockdale what the wandering minstrels were to the middle ages; roaming from castle to castle, basking by the kitchen fires, singing their songs and retailing the news of the countryside. Annie could not sing—but in other respects she filled the bill. When the mistress of the house heard that "Annie White was in the kitchen," she always found an excuse to visit that region. When in pursuit of her calling Annie was afraid of no man. Half an hour after she heard Matilda—Lagree's news she met Lorenzo on the street and put it to him plumply: "Mr. Downing, are you and Mary Carfax going to get married?"

orenzo gasped, stared at his questioner for a full minute in silence, appeared to be thinking quickly, replied "Yes."

That afternoon Mrs. Sam Rogers called Mary up by telephone to "congratulate" her.

"Why, what in the world are you talking about?" said Mary indignantly.

"Oh, it's all over town," said Mrs. Rogers. "Annie White was jest here and said she met Ren Downing on the street and asked him if it was true and he said 'Yes'."

Mary was "mad clear through." She called up the bank and told the clerk who answered the telephone that she wanted to see Mr. Downing at her house 'just as soon as he could make it convenient."

"Why did you tell Annie White that we were to be married?" she asked frigidly when Lorenzo put in an appearance.

"Because it is true," he replied doggedly. "Now just sit down and listen to me. I have been looking for an opportunity to reopen an old matter between us which was never satisfactorily settled. Do you remember that evening, ten years ago, when you and I watched the sun set from High Rock Hill? There was the scent of new-mown hay from a neighboring field; from the woods came now and then the sound of a bird singing its good-night song. The sky was flaming with colors that mingled and melted and faded into a great purple dome in which the stars came out—and we were young."

"Yes," replied Mary in a softened voice, "I remember it."

"And I asked you to be my wife," went on Lorenzo; 'and you laughed at me and said not to talk foolish; I was only a boy; to wait until I was grown up. In the meantime I would probably find someone I liked better—as you were very sure you would find someone you preferred to me. I haven't found anybody I liked better, Mary—have you?"

"Well, no, I don't think I have, Ren," replied Mary blushing. "But you have been back three years now and never—and I was hoping you would—to tell the truth."

"I was afraid to speak, Mary," he answered gently. "The risk was so great. —You treated me in such an offish manner. I was too cowardly to take the plunge: it meant so much to me." He reached out and took her hand. "Did I tell the truth to Annie White?" he asked.

"I—I—I shouldn't wonder," replied Mary.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

JOAN VISITS LELA.

Before Joan could speak the words that were trembling on her lips, I fairly pulled her out of the place and said, "Thank you, we will come again."

"Why did you do that, Judy?" she asked impatiently, pulling herself away from me. "That man probably would have helped us if we had told him that we wanted to find poor Barry's wife."

"Oh, Joan, Joan, what a trusting baby you are. That man's one object in life at the present moment is to keep you from Lela until after he gets to her, and he probably would drive her to suicide if we don't see her first."

We fairly ran to where the taxi was waiting.

Joan looked so muddled in her mind as she followed me that I almost wanted to laugh.

I mixed her up more than ever when she heard me order the taxi driver to go immediately to the station. When we arrived there we found that we were in luck. A very gallant desk sergeant gave us the address we wanted immediately without my having to disclose our names.

To the officer I explained that we wanted to find out where Mrs. Barry Cornwall was, that we were much shocked upon reading the news in the morning papers, for we knew that she must be in straitened circumstances as well as that she was going to have a baby, and wanted to help her all we could.

The officer gave us the address, and we went directly to the place.

We found poor Lela in a daze. She didn't seem to have realized as yet what happened to her.

Lela Cornwall was hardly more than a child and my heart went out to her right away.

"Poor things," Joan whispered to me. "She and her husband were just like babes in the woods. And now that Barry is gone I don't know what Lela will do."

"I do, my dear. Instead of making me your companion, you will make her."

Joan looked at me startled.

"But, Judy, she doesn't know any more than I, and I want to learn."

"Neither do I know any more than you Joan," I answered. "Don't you know it is much more pleasant to teach some one than to be taught?"

I went up toward the bed. Lela opened her eyes languidly.

"Who are you, my dear:" she asked.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

ROBERT SCHUMANN AND CLARA WIECK.

The romance of the famous composer Robert Schumann and Clara Weick almost parallels the romance recently recorded in the newspapers of a musician father who tried to keep his daughters spinsters that they may the better devote themselves to music. Ferdinand Weick had developed his daughter into a celebrated pianist and he was afraid of lovers. Robert and Clara loved each other and were an ideal match, but they had to suffer much anxiety and heartaches before the father consented to their marriage. The letters below date from the lovers' period of doubt. The first tells the story of the composition of Schumann's celebrated piano pieces, "Kreisleriana."

"Leipsic, April 13, 1838.

"How full of music I am and always such lovely melodies! Only fancy, since my last letter I have finished another whole book of new things. You, and one of your ideas, are the principal subjects and I shall call them 'Kreisleriana' and dedicate them to you: yes, to you and to nobody else: and you will smile so sweetly when you see yourself in them. Even so, my music now seems wonderfully intricate in spite of its simplicity: its eloquence comes straight from the heart and everybody is affected when I play before people, as I often do now, and like to do. And when you are standing by me as I sit at the piano then we shall both cry like children, as I know I shall be quite overcome . . .

"I am going to ask you a favor. As there is no electric current connected to us to remind us of one another I have had a sympathetic idea, namely, that tomorrow, exactly at eleven o'clock, I shall play the Adagio from Chopin's 'variations' and shall think intensely and exclusively of you. Now my petition is that you will do the same so that we may meet and communicate in spirit. The trysting place for our separate doubles will probably be over the Thomasspfortchen. If there were a full moon it might have been a mirror reflecting our letters. I am anxiously looking forward to your answer. If you do not as I ask you, and a string should break tomorrow at twelve o'clock, be sure that's me."

In his student days Schumann's impatience to master the piano caused him to invent an original system of finger exercising, one that employed weights and pulleys, and the result was that he permanently maimed his thumb. After their marriage Clara was practically his musical spokesman and performed all his music.

At his prime, Schumann became afflicted with a mental disorder. It was Clara's pitiful lot to see her genius husband wasting away by degrees. At the age of forty-four his brain finally gave way and he died two years later, a lunatic.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

WEDNESDAY, JULY 28, 1926.

This should be a fairly fortunate day in planetary direction, according to astrology. Several benefic aspects are powerful.

The stars smile on all men and women who have climbed to the top of a profession or business career. Increase of success is indicated.

There is an aspect fortunate for the President, who will manifest his independence of thought and his desire for international peace.

College heads come under a rule of the stars making for the desire to change old customs and to conform with modern demands on men and women.

Educational methods are to become even more progressive than they have been in the past, but the trend will be toward concentration of effort.

Hawaii is to focus public interest and to offer problems of great moment, astrologers foretell. The islands will prosper.

A London astrologer prophesies that there is soon to be a revelation regarding the forgery of bonds or currency through which the United States and Russia may become involved in losses.

England labor difficulties are not likely to be settled satisfactorily for some time, if the signs are read aright.

Great Britain continues under a planetary direction making for bitter controversies in Parliament and many government anxieties.

The death of a famous actress is foreshadowed and warning is given that women of unusual talents should safeguard themselves against overwork or extreme fatigue.

Loss of life may be expected from storms, explosions and earthquakes as the summer wanes, for menacing aspects will be strong in influence.

Persons whose birthdate it is have a pleasant augury for the coming year. Profit through real estate may be expected by many.

Children born on this day probably will be steadfast and industrious, able to go through life successfully bearing all responsibilities.

STELLA.

One of the most curious cases of interchangeable names is that of Stella, signifying star, which is equivalent to Esther. Its origin is shrouded in mysterious legend and not easy to ascertain, but, penetrating very far into the past, it is found that the reigning wife of Xerxes was Amestris, daughter of an Achaemenian noble, who might well have been the Vashti of old legend: the fair daughter of the tribe of Benjamin whose royalty ensured her people's safety, was Hadassah in her own tongue, also known as Atossa and finally as Aster. Combined with the Latin stella, meaning starr, it gave rise to the modern estrella, star, which the Romans call Esthera and Hestera.

So in England, there arose Esther, Hester, and Hetty. In France Esther came into vogue in the days of Racine, when the great tragedian wrote a sacred drama, acted by the young ladies of St. Cyr, and chose the old legend for her subject as a compliment to Mme. de Maintenon, Esther preferred before the discarded Vashti, who was Mme. de Montespan. Esther straightway became a popular feminine name in France. Estelle was adopted simultaneously, but its use was confined more to the stage.

In England, Esther became famous since it was borne by two ladies beloved of Dean Swift: Esther Johnson and Esther Vanhomrigh, one of whom he called by the Latin equivalent, Stella, and the other by the generic term for our gorgeous butterflies, Vanessa.

Estrella was the heroine of a Spanish pastoral and Abbe Florian borrowed it for his theatrical shepherdess. Sir Philip Sidney wrote a sonnet to Stella which runs —

"O happy Thames that did my Stella bear:
I saw myself with many a smiling line
Upon thy cheerful face, joy's livery wear,
While those fair planets on thy streams did shine:
The boat for joy could not to dance forbear:
While wanton winds, with beauties so divine
Ravished, staid not till in her golden hair
They did themselves, oh sweetest prison! twine."

YOUR JEWEL COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

The topaz rules over mortal destiny today. It is a talisman against financial losses, but it is also the emblem of secrecy and should be worn with care. According to an old legend, a topaz worn today will bring about a startling revelation which will not give complete happiness.

The ruby is today's natal stone. It has the power of bringing to all whose birth anniversary this is a position of responsibility and command. Victory in legal controversaries assured the wearer of the ruby and a journey by land or sea with a business objective will be very fortunate.

Orange is today's color. It is especially potent in bringing good luck to those engaged in sporting contests where success depends on mental ability as well as on physical strength.

The orchid is today's flower, and brings unexpected pleasure to those who wear it.

Modern Pavements Make Feet Tired

The miles and miles of hard surface roadways and side-walks are very wonderful, but, being hard, non-resilient, and excellent conductors of heat and cold, they torture our poor feet unmercifully.

It has been found that if tired, sore feet are bathed in warm water containing a few drops of Absorbine Jr. they will be delightfully cooled and refreshed.

But this is not the only use for Absorbine Jr. It is a liniment, antiseptic, and germicide in one—the handiest, most useful article in the family medicine cabinet.

Not only does it kill germs and prevent infection in open cuts and sores, hastening the healing—not only does it limber up to new freshness, tired, stiff muscles, but as a mouth wash, throat spray or gargle it protects you against wandering disease germs and leaves behind a pleasant, clean taste and odor. $1.25 a bottle at your druggist's.

A Rainy Day

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

MY MOTHER loves the gray days. She says they're so friendly. In early childhood she taught us the coziness and contentment that a rainy day can bring. Sunshine is so stimulating! a rainy day can bring such relaxation.

On rainy days someway we seemed closer to mother and sort o' shut away from the world. In her wisdom, mother kept us busy. There were paper dolls to cut, hammer and nails to make things, tea parties to prepare, candy to pull, paint boxes and paste pots to intrigue one's imagination, books to read and games to play. Or if we mentioned outdoors, "all warm in our rainy day coats," business and contentment always welcomed us back.

I wonder why more mothers don't capitalize the possibilities of a rainy day? So often I see discontented little faces at windows as I go and come. I wonder if they'd be terribly surprised to have a grownup come into the room and say, "Oh isn't this just the nicest day. Come on, let's play the new game I found." At any rate I know they'd love that Grown Up.

THE rain comes a-pattering
Down on the world,
On house top and garden and boat,
But I've an umbrella,
And rubbers, and I'm
All warm in my rainy day coat.

THE little Chirp Robins
Are snug in their nest
All under the mother bird's wing,
'Way down by the pond
The green frogs are happy,
And Danny Duck's trying to sing!

CRESCENTS BEAT THE RAYBESTOS IN A FAST GAME

Masterson's Pitching Proves Too Strong for Raybestos Sluggers

ALLOWS FIVE HITS

Crescents eliminated Raybestos in an exciting hot contest last evening at Exhibition Park by the score of 5 to 4.

The pitching of Masterson was too good for the Raybestos sluggers. They only garnered five hits and with the tying run on third in the seventh he arose to the occasion and struck out the next two batters.

Woods, on the other hand, was hit freely and he wisely retired in favor of Maudsley, the blonde portsider, who pitched wonderful ball and with his advent into the game, the Raylestos team took on new life, and were coming like wildfire, but the lead was just sufficient to nose them out.

Marchen with a triple and Cameron with a double were the only extra base hits. Cameron's double driving in three runs in the fifth. Kay and LeBarr handled the game in their usual satisfactory manner.

CANADIAN GOLF CHAMPION AND MIAMI PROFESSIONAL WIN HONORS AT WINNIPEG

Annexed Manitoba Amateur Title Which Involved Two Day's Play

ELMHIRST COURSE

Western Canada Open Title Goes to Red McKenna.

ELMHURST GOLF CLUB, Winnipeg, Man., July 28.—(Canadian Press).—G. Ross Somerville, London, Ont., Canadian amateur golf champion, and Ned McKenna, professional at the Miami Course, added more titles to their lot as the result of Tuesday's play in the Western Canada Golf Association Tournament. Somerville, as a result of a 73, score annexed the Manitoba Amateur title which was involved in the two days play. The Eastern star's card for the 36 holes was 149 and this also tied him for second place in the open event with Willie Kidd, and Ernest Penfold of Minneapolis.

Red McKenna captured the top honors of the day, the Western Canada Open title. McKenna was in particularly brilliant form, turning in a card of 73 for Tuesday's round. This gave him a 147 total and a two stroke advantage over his nearest rivals. McKenna played faultlessly until he reached the 18th green. He reached the green nicely with his third, the ball dropping within 10 feet of the cup. He lost a golden opportunity for a lower score when he took three putts, a six for the hole and 38 for the inward journey. The only other faulty hole was the 12th where he also required six, another three putts being responsible.

Ross Somerville's game did not suffer a little bit. He was pushing out lovely tee shots, but his work around the greens was not particularly effective. He scored three birdies in the first nine, but was over par figures on four of the other holes. The "birds" however brought his score to one over par figures.

Coming home, Somerville grabbed a birdie on the 13th and an eagle three on the 435 yard 15th. He was home in 37 for his 73.

The class of golf if anything was better than that displayed on the opening day despite the fact that a rather stiff wind developed where many of the boys had started out on their round.

At any rate the battle was particularly close, being undecided until well on in the afternoon, when McKenna turned in his count, Willie Kidd, Ernest Penfold, Norm Clark, the Minneapolis trio of professionals, and Jack Cuthbert, Alex. Weir, Philip Morse of Saskatoon, and J. R. Henley, Edmonton, all amateurs, had still to be heard from, and these players all had a chance, though they had to shoot around par figures or better.

Willie Kidd ran into a pack of trouble. He was out in 37, taking fives on the last three par four holes. He also had a pair of fives and a six on the inward journey for a 39 count. His 18th hole play was disastrous. The drive went to the rough and his second shot crashed into a somewhat deep bunker and he was short getting out. It cost him a six.

Ernest Penfold also suffered somewhat on the second of his card, taking fives on the 11th and 12th and an even half dozen on the 15th. He was out in 37 and back in 38 for a 75 which proved good enough to get him a tie for second place.

Four golfers shared honors for fourth place and of these two were amateurs. Jack Cuthbert teamed up a pair of 75's for a 150 count. Alex. Weir, cut four strokes from his Monday total, crashing in with a 73. Joe Land also picked off a 73 and this gave him 150 and Norm Clark, Minneapolis, had a pair of 70's.

Jimmy Blair's 79 proved disastrous to his chances of landing on top. He had 152 for the 36 holes. Duncan Sutherland, Edmonton professional, and Bill Spittall, Elmhurst, had 153, and Hughie Fletcher's 73 gave him 154 for the two days' work.

The amateurs also had a great race for the Manitoba honors as well as the open. Somerville's score was but a single putt lower than that of Cuthbert and Alex. Weir. Frank Hale came through with a nice 73 to finish i nthird place with 153. J. L. Bell, Calgary, clicked off a 76, after an 80 Monday.

Jimmy Rimmer, the Jasper Park professional, ran amuck at the eighth hole at Pine Ridge. It is a long 500 yards and cost Jimmy a nine and a chance to be up in the running. His drive found an unplayable lie, and after moving out he had the misfortune to pot two balls into the bush.

J. F. Jermey came remarkably close to joining the role-in-one club at Pine Ridge. His shot at the seventh landed within a foot of the mug and just to make things more interesting and damaging, he missed the putt.

To-day's play will see the start of the playdowns for the Western Canada title. Match play will predominate in this event. The professional event will be decided to-day, when the paid artists will battle through another 36 holes. Only the professionals within 20 strokes of the leader will be eligible to play further.

the audacity to make it a reproachable effort to carry on government without a Prime Minister, when for six months his government had carried on without a Prime Minister. Mr. King is all things to all men. He is a great weathercock, or a man possessed of greater lust of power never existed in this country.

As to the Customs scandal you hear that the whole of the Duncan report and of the Committee of Inquiry's report has been published. Mr. King in Ottawa Friday night said every word and letter had been published. That is true, but what have not been printed are the exhibits accompanying the Duncan report, because they are so scurrilous and indecent they offend even persons of vulgar taste to read them. Mark the distinction. The exhibits from the office of Mr. Bisaillon, Chief Customs for Montreal, are under lock and key in the Department of Finance in Ottawa. They have not been printed.

Emphasis is laid by Mr. King and Liberal speakers on the Robb budget. They tell of the relief to the taxpayers, penny postage restored, that is, the three cent stamp is reduced to two, the stamp tax on receipts was removed (remember this tax was put on by the King government) and the income tax readjusted, although the middle class of taxpayers will pay more while the very rich and the moderately rich will pay less.

When it is pressed on you that the Liberal government is worthy of support for reducing taxes remember that if Mr. Meighen had been in power the reduction would have been greater. The revenue of this country would have been so great, the expenses might have been cut down. At any rate the boasted surplus of $35,000,000 would have been there, whether Mr. King was in office or not. So that no special thanks is due to the Liberals for wha any Conservative government would have done.

It is true that business has picked up in the last year and is to-day better than it has been since 1920, but no credit can be given the late government for an improvement in commercial conditions.

Do you suppose any legislation of the King government caused two blades of grass to grow instead of one? We have more agricultural exports and the other factor in trade conditions is the newsprint industry. Production of pulpwood is larger in Canada than in the United States. It is reflected in more employment of labourers and artisans, and in the railway freight traffic. Then, too, mineral production is increasing, but none of these are a consequence of legislation of the King government. They would have happened if such a thing as the king government had never existed."

Fred McBrien, M.P.P.

Mr. McBrien dealt chiefly with the subject of immigration and emigration with his theme Canada for the Canadians. Since 1921 Canada has lost more than half million of her people, mostly her young people. The totals from American points of entry were as follows: 52,929 in 1921; 62,000 in 1922; 181,000 in 1923; 159,000 in 1924; 87,000 in 1925, and 47,015 for the first five months of this year.

"More than six per cent. of the total population of this country and we're going to fight on that issue in this campaign."

Mr. MacBrien compared the tariff of the United States with that of Canada, especially with regard to farm produce. "The farmer needs protection and if the present administration is returned the farmers of this country will enjoy a prosperity they haven't heard of or thought of for years.

After a brief address by Major Belford, the meeting closed with cheers for Milton Maybee and the Right Hon. Arthur Meighen.

LESS THAN THREE WEEKS UNTIL BIG EVENT IS OPENED

Only Fortnight From Next Monday Until Ottawa is Launched on Great Celebration in Its History.

COMPLETING PLANS FOR RECEPTION OF VISITORS

Committes Engaged in Perfecting Arrangements for Centenary and Exhibition.

Two weeks from next Monday, the Ottawa Centenary will open with a bang and citizens and visitors will be launched into the biggest two weeks of celebration ever held in the Capital.

Monday morning, August 16th, will be devoted to the official opening. In the afternoon the first stampede performance will be conducted in Lansdowne Park. People are just begining to realize how big this event will be. It is not a wild west show but a real, world championship cowboy contest, with big cash prizes for the winners in the various events.

For the bucking horse riding contest with saddle in addition to the daily prizes, the first prize for the week will be $1,000 cash, and the second $500. The greatest bucking horses on the continent will pit their cussedness and ingenuity against the skill and nerve of the best riders in Canada and the United States. Other daily events will include bareback bucking horse riding with surcingle, wild steer and wild cow riding, bareback, chuck wagon races, wild horse races, wild cow milking, salf roping. Then there will also be exhibitions of trick and fancy riding, trick and fancy roping, Roman standing races, relay races, high jumping, etc.

Monday evening will be military night. A parade through the streets will be followed by a military tattoo in Lansdowne Park, to be participated in by visiting regiments as well as the Ottawa units of the various branches of the service. The pageant chorus of 1,000 voices will also be heard in connection with the tattoo.

Historical Pageant

Commencing on Tuesday evening, for four nights, there will be a big historical pageant. This will be produced on an elaborate scale, hundreds participating in the various episodes. Nothing like it has ever before been attempted in Ottawa.

On the Wednesday evening, the merchants and manufacturers will stage an industrial parade. There has been a wonderful response to the appeal for floats and this promises to be an exceptionally beautiful and educative event.

Thursday evening will witness an old time parade. For this the characters and incidents of former decades will be re-enacted and the hands of the clock will be turned back as regards vehicles, clothes, etc. This event is now well in hand and indcations are that it will be a tremendous success. Many other features are aranged for the first week, including a big Mardi Gras for Saturday night.

For the second week, the exhibition features will predominate. In the exhibition programme the outstanding factor to many will be the afternoon and evening programes by Creatore and his band. This wonderful organization, one of the finest in the world, will be heard from the new bandstand, no extra charge being made for exhibition visitors. All the other features which have made the Ottawa Exhibition such a remarkable event will be given on a more elaborae scale than ever, befitting the centennial celebration of the city. The new coliseum will house the livestock, while all the other buildings will be completely filled with interesting displays and demonstrations. A new midway with the latest in rides and shows, a wonderful programme of vaudeville in front of the grandstand, horse races and a spectacular fireworks display will be other stellar features.

Completing Plans

Committees are now actively engaged in completing plans for the reception of visitors. The hotel accommodation will be augmented by hundreds of private homes which citizens have generously opened for the two weeks. These will be conveniently listed so that visitors will have no trouble in getting suitable places. Special parking arrangements, convenient camp sites and tents for those who prefer them will also be provided. Many former Ottawa boys and girls have written that they will be here for the Centenary and with the great programmes which have been arranged, the excellent roads for automobiles and the reduced rates on railways there should be a city full for the entire two weeks.

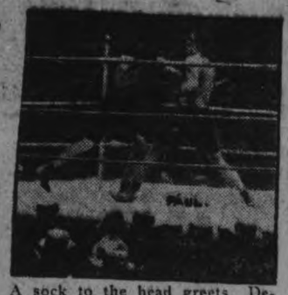
WHAM! SMACK! BANG! MOVIE OF NEW LIGHT HEAVYWEIGHT CHAMPION WINNING CROWN

"Well, how 'bout it, Paul?" Delaney seems to be thinking as they square away. And Paul is set to start something.

There goes a left lead, with Berlenbach ready to follow it up with a right to Jack's ribs—Paul's favorite stunt.

Fast mixing here! Jack blocks another left lead and right swing just after they emerge from a clinch.

Back into a clinch goes Paul, ducking under Jack's tightly clamped arm as Referee Crowley moves to separate 'em.



A sock to the head greets Delaney as he bores in, but it's a feeble one—for Berlenbach's steam is low.

A new champion, fans! And there were few to disagree as the judges raised Jack's hand after the fifteenth bell.

BELLEVILLE TEAM HERE SATURDAY

Petes and Nationals Will Resume Their Battle This Week.

Belleville and Peterboro will resume their fight, after going 19 innings to a draw, on Saturday afternoon, when they clash at Riverside Park in a Central Ontario League game that marks the last scheduled Belleville visit of the season. It is probable that Heckman and Ouellet, the pitching heroes of the long drawn out game of last week, will begin their duel where it left off a week ago. At least Heckman is almost sure to draw the Peterboro pitching assignment, while Ouellet will be Walter Gerow's choice, in all probability. The Petes have been playing fine ball during the past month, and are entitled to much better support than they have been getting. Saturday's game will get under way at 3 o'clock.

SECRETS OF STARS ON INSIDE BASEBALL as told to Billy Evans

BY SHORTSTOP EVERETT SCOTT.
Who Played in 1307 Consecutive Games.

There are two set rules that every shortstop must religiously follow if he wants to be a success.

They are Be on your toes and try to handle every ground ball on the big bound.

It is fatal for a shortstop to be caught flat-footed. It prevents him from breaking with the pitch and cuts down his ground -covering possibilities by a couple of steps.

The successful shortstop must be alert physically as well as mentally.

With runners on the bases, try to figure out in advance what you will do with the ball, provided it comes in your direction and the play is up to you.

Handling ground balls is an easy matter if you are able to play the big bound. It is the "between-bounds" that are troublesome.

When the ball is hit, the shortstop must calculate the bounds the ball will take before he makes a play on it and try to be in a position to get the big hop.

It is impossible to figure certain batted balls, such as line drives that strike the ground a few feet in front of the player about to handle them.

On such balls the shortstop must place his hands where he believes the ball will come and trust to luck.

I have always tried to get the jump on every ball. This enables one to be more accurate as to throwing, not being hurried.

The batter's speed always influences the position of a shortstop and his throw. He should play deep on slow men, close in on the fast runners. He should time his throw to suit the speed of the man he is making a play on.

A close study of each batsman is a great help. Knowing the field to which he usually hits and the style ball about to be pitched, the shifting of a few feet often makes possible a play on a ball that would otherwise go through for a base hit.

SOCIAL EVENING.

The Cheerful Workers' Bible Class held a social evening last night, at the home of Mrs. C. J. HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

GEORGE DUNCAN—UPRIGHT LIE OF CLUBS.

I recommend an absolutely upright putter. True, my own has a medium lie, but, as I have had it for 16 years, I hesitate now to make a change even in the light of learning. In my youth I used a flat putter—it was a cleek—and so became accustomed to such an instrument, but I believe that if I had started with an upright putter, I should putt better than I do now.

I have little faith in the jigger, especially on inland courses. It is so shallow that it is apt to get under the ball: it is better at the seaside where the grass is shorter and the turf is firmer.

As a final word, let me advise the golfer to examine the lies of his clubs, and make sure that the shorter the shot each club is expected to accomplish, the straighter up should rise the shaft from the head.

Sometimes you see a man with a mashie flatter even than his driver. That means he may have to stand farther from the ball for a mashie shot than for a full drive. To control the direction of the approach in those circumstances is well-nigh impossible.

HOLLYWOOD.—Clara Bow, as authentic a flapper as ever flounced into pictures, is getting tired of her repute as a hoyden. She's a big girl now, and trying very earnestly to behave like a young lady who has outgrown both a personal and professional childhood, as behooves one who is shortly to be rated a star by Paramount, her cinematic sweet daddy.

Miss Bow is experimenting with modes of behavior very much as she experimented with the color of her hair which, naturally deep brown, became blond, henna, and is now an attractive shade of chestnut.

The girl who four years ago came wriggling into films with an ingratiating sauciness by way of "Down to the Sea in Ships," and whose impulsive desire for fun quickly popularized her in Hollywood, has become almost sedate.

Clara has even turned thumbs down on dancing parties, to the rueful protest of a horde of former Charleston partners, and is devoting herself, as she seriously explains, to "a lot of reading, a study of French, and to going to bed early."

Far more than most girls in movies, Clara Bow has won her own way to the verge of stardom. Surviving a period when she was rented out to various producing companies, she held steadily and stubbornly to her goal.

Diamond Disputes Decided. By Billy Evans

Why is it a batter is called out if a fielder juggles a fly ball but finally holds it and a runner is not called out if a fielder juggles the ball after making the touch?

* * *

At one time the ruling on these two plays were the same; the player was out if the fielder finally retained possession of the ball before it touched the ground.

Then a change was made relative to plays in which baserunners were touched and the ball juggled.

It was decided that on a touch play the ball must be firmly held, that the moment the ball was juggled it erased the play and made it necessary that the fielder regain possession of the ball and again touchthe runner before he reached the base in order to properly retire him.

Thus the rule on the juggling of a ball is interpreted in two different ways according to the existing conditions.

Bats are great eaters of mosquitoes.

BILLY EVANS Says

Se-ere Handicap.

Major league pitchers seem agreed that the baseball in use this year has been slowed down considerable.

If such is the case and it appears to be true, then the poor start of the Philadelphia Athletics is partly explained.

The Athletics of last year played a cut and slash game. A club, boasting many free swinging hitters, it didn't pay much attention to the get-a-run at-a-time plan.

No doubt a lot of fly balls that would have cleared the various fences or struck the concrete walls last season are just plain outs this year. That hurts.

The new ball may force a change in style in a number of major league clubs, the free swinging aggregations in particular.

* * *

Unusual Hobby.

It is really strange what a hobby baseball is, with men very successful in other branches of business.

I have in mind a prominent New Yorker, Jess Hirsch, a wealthy importer. Baseball is Mr. Hirsch's hobby, his relaxation from business.

While he played some baseball as a youngster, he never gave signs of becoming a big league star. So his hobby is the managerial or owner end of it.

When he goes to the ball game it is as a manager or owner, not spectator. And while he never "razzes" or takes a second guess, he figures each move just as if he were directing his favorite club from the bench.

As a rule he is strong in defense of the managers, but when he does differ to some bit of strategy used, there is always much logic to his reasoning.

While Mr. Hirsch looks more like a movie star than a baseball magnate or manager, he insists that some day he will own a major league ball club and he has promised me a job as manager.

I have already respectfully declined the appointment as it is never good policy to work for some fellow who understands your business too well for your own good.

* * *

Regulation Fields.

Baseball records of late years show that a large percentage of the home runs made have been recorded at certain parks.

These parks have a smaller playing field and, of course, in the days of the lively baseball made home runs out of fly balls that would under ordinary circumstances been easy outs.

Such figures argue for regulation ball fields. The time is coming whe the playing territory of each field will be identical.

When such a time comes there will be no advantage as now exists. A home club with a short field gets 77 games in which to shoot at the not far distant stands, while each of the other seven clubs plays only 11 games on the same field.

Baseball needs regulation fields and sooner or later will get hem.

* * *

Stars Missed.

One star player makes considerable difference in the work of a major league ball club.

Last year the Chicago White Sox were pennant contenders with Manager Eddie Collins in the game. When an injury forced him out, the club went to pieces.

This season the White Sox started without Johnny Mostil, star outfielder, speed merchant of the American League. He was missed, the club lacked some of its customary punch.

The Pittsburgh Pirates had the same experience in starting without Max Cary.

While one player doesn't necessarily make a ball club, his absence often makes quite a difference.

Umpires in the Michigan League are breathing easier now that the sale of bottled pop has been prohibited in all the park of that circuit.

Mine Leaders Advance On Fairly Active Market

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press) — The Consolidated West Dome Lake with a gain of 3-4 to 16 1-4, Gold Hill with an advance of 3 1-2 to 67 1-2 and Mining Corporation with jump of 12 cents to 4.17 featured the fairly active session of the Standard Mining Exchange today.

Hollinger, Lake Shore and McIntyre were lower, with Hollinger 25 cents off at 19.50, Lake Shore 13 cents down at 12.20 and McIntyre 20 cents off at 25.50. Teck Hughes was quoted up four cents at 3.87 but Kirkland Lake declined one cent to 98 1-2. Wright Hargreaves gained 8 cents to 8.48. Reorganized Keora was off 1-2 at 21 1-2 from its previous close.

More Prominent Issues Take Lead On Market

TORONTO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—A uniformly strong tone featured the moderately active session of the Toronto Stock Exchange to-day. Prices of most of the more prominent issues were higher, but the volume of turnover was quite average. British Columbia Fishing with an advance of 1-2 to 76 3-4 and Brazilian Traction, which closed 3-4 higher at 100 1-2, led the market in activity. International Petroleum also showed strength, with a gain of 5-8 to 33 7-8, while International Nickel closed up 3-8 at 38 3-4. Consolidated Smelters advanced 3-4 to 220, and Imperial Oil 1-2 to 35 3-4. Bank of Commerce, with more than an average turnover, closed at 223 1-2 for a net gain of 1-2.

General Motors Climb To New High Record

NEW YORK, July 28 (Canadian Press).—One of the broadcast buying movements in recent weeks, inspired by unusually favorable quarterly reports of the General Motors and United States Steel Corporations, carried over a score of issues to new high levels for the year or longer, in to-day's stock market. The volume of business was only moderately heavy, but the commission house advices indicated a gradual increase in public participation.

General Motors continued its sensational advance by climbing over four points, to a new high record for all time around $176 a share.

Steel shares received an added stimulus from the publication of the weekly steel trade reviews.

Sugars and oils made a quick response to reports of improved trade conditions, while rails gathered strength on announcement that freight car loadings for the week ended July 17 broke all records for the year.

Fight In Northern Bay Big Trout and Lunge

PARRY SOUND, July 28. — Mr. Gault of Kittanning, Pa., one of the old-timers who come every year to Rose Point Hotel, the fishermen's headquarters near Parry Sound, had the experience of witnessing a battle which is probably unique in the annals of fishing.

While trolling for maskinonge in Five Mile Bay, near the hotel, his Indian guide, Adam King, noticed a great commotion on the surface, and on rowing to the spot saw a mammoth "muskie" and a lake trout in deadly combat. As the boat came alongside an attempt was made to gaff the 'lunge, but he quickly retired, leaving the trout almost helples and cut to pieces.

The trout, a nine-pounder, was lifted into the boat and brought to the hotel, where it was the centre of interest. Mr. Gault says the 'lunge was the largest he had ever seen, and estimated its weight at fifty pounds.

Trout at this time of the year are in very deep water, so it is assumed the 'lunge found his prey at the bottom and fought all the way to the surface, where the last stages of the battle took place.

DECLARATION MADE IN DIVORCE CASE

Young Son Allowed Right To Succeed To Title.

LONDON, July 28 (Canadian Press)—Echo of one of the most sensational divorce cases England has ever known was heard today when a declaration was granted under the Legitimacy Act establishing right of little Geoffrey Russell, son of Hon. John Hugo Russell, to succeeded to the title Baron Amptihill, now held by his paternal grandfather. John Hugo Russell sued his wife, Christabel, for divorce in 1922 alleging that he was not the father of her child and the case furnished society sensation throughout the long hearing. After the case went through several courts, Mrs. Russell won a decision in the House of Lords.

PREPARES TO TOW SHIP IN DISTRESS

Coast Guard Boat Standing By Rudderless Boat Off Florida Coast.

SAVANAH, July 28 (Canadian Press)—The navy wireless station at Savanah today received advices from the coast guard cutter Saukee that it was standing by the Italian steamer Ansaldo San Giorgio Secundo, in distress off Jupiter Inlet and was preparing to take it in tow.

It was believed the crew was still aboard the Aansaldo as the wireless operator was heard communicating with steamers in the vicinity of the struggling ship. He established a connection with the West Harshaw and the Orizaba which went to the rescue of the Ansaldo along with several other vessels. But none was able to take off the crew yesterday because of high seas.

CHICAGO, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Alphonse "Scarface" Capone, chief of the underworld of the turbulent suburb of Cicero, sought since the machine gun assassination of Assistant States Attorney McSwiggin, was brought into the Federal Building to-day by Federal agents, to whom he had surrendered. Bondsmen were there for his release, but so was Chief of Detectives William Schoenmaker, with a warrant charging Capone with the murder of McSwiggin.

THEATRE AT THE REGENT

A MODERN MARRIAGE.

The Regent Theatre will feature a Warner picture when "Other Women's Husbands," a diverting story of modern marriage opens today with a brilliant cast.

This production marks the reunion of Marie Prevost and Monte Blue as a screen team, co-featured in the film version of E. T. Lowe, Jr.'s, original story. Huntly Gordon, Phyllis Haver, John Patrick and Marjorie Gay are included in the supporting cast.

Dick Lambert (Monte Blue) and his wife Kay (Marie Prevost) quarrel over his invitation to Jack Harding (Huntly Gordon) to dinner. To annoy her husband Kay flirts with the handsome attorney, who in turn introduces Dick to his gay friend Roxana (Phyllis Haver). The staid young husband finds their acquaintance a necessity after a time, and the neglected young wife seeks solace in the company of the attentive lawyer. Jealous of Harding, Dick tries unsuccessfully to leave Roxana, but she is a blonde with a brunette temperament, and refuses to let her playmate go. Meanwhile Harding has convinced Kay of her husband's cruelty, and generously arranges for a divorce for her. When he gets Kay on the witness stand, with Dick sitting sad-eyed in back of the court room, the fun begins, for the wife decides her husband is no worse than other women's husbands, and refuses the divorce.

Erle Kenton directed "Other Women's Husbands" from the scenario by E. T. Lowe, Jr., and Jack Wagner.

Three automobile accidents occurred in the city yetserday, but fortunately the casualty list was small, only one man being slightly injured.

While riding his bicycle west on Charlotte Street last night, and turning to go south on Rubidge, J. J. Booth was knocked off the machine when an automobile driven by V. Dawson ran into him. Mr. Booth had his ankle slightly injured, but was able to proceed home after the accident.

C. C. Doughty and his bride were returning from their honeymoon trip which they spent touring a section of the United States in an automobile. They made the entire trip without any mishaps until coming home yesterday afternoon. Coming along Charlotte Street a large truck belonging to the Dufferin Construction Company, and driven by Lee Hewett, going west, and turning into the C.N.R. freight yards, came together with Mr. Doughty's car. The only damage was a demolished front fender. The truck escaped without damage.

The third accident occurred at the corner of George and Charlotte Streets, when a car belonging to the Canadian Packing Company, and driven by Graham Eastwood, came together with a car belonging to H. INDUSTRIAL NURSES FORM ORGANIZATION

Most Important Duty of Nurse is First Aid.

TORONTO, Ont., July 28.—(Canadian Press).—The industrial nurses of this city have organized themselves into an association, which holds regular meetings and affords opportunity for conference and co-operation. Their sisters in the profession from other centres in the province are eligible for membership in this association, and several have availed themselves of this privilege. In connection with many industries first aid is the most important duty of the nurse; in others where the hazard is small, it takes second or third place, the visiting of sick and absentees and the performance of certain type of social service taking precedence over the emergency operation. In a hundred ways the capable, understanding nurse may lend a helping hand to workers in a firm and a fine example of what may accomplish is to be seen at the Dominion Express company, where several hundred men and girls are employed.

Here Miss M. F. McKeown, a graduate of Grace Hospital, has carried on successfully for six years, and with the complete backing and co-operation of her employers, has been able to do much toward increasing the comfort and consequently the efficiency of the large staff.

"We have found that difficulties of diet frequently interfere with health, and reduce the efficiency of the workers. At one time many of our employees brought their lunches, and we supplied them with tea and coffee at the noon hour. Under these conditions, however there were constant complaints of headaches and other ailments, directly due to unsatisfactory meals, and at length we decided to open a cafeteria."

TABLETS ERECTED TO CANADIAN MEN

Two European Cities Will Carry Records of Canada's War Effort.

OTTAWA, Ont., July 28.—(Canadian Press).—Two cities in Europe will carry enduring records of Canada's war effort. Ste. Nazaire, where the Canadians landed in February 1915, and Mons, where the Cease Fire sounded in November 1918, will display in public places tablets presented by the Canadian Government, through the Battlefields Memorials Commission, to commemorate the achievement of Canadian arms.

In February 1915 the First Canadian Division, having finished its hard winter on Salisbury Plain, landed at the port of Ste. Nazaire, France, at the mouth of the Loire River and proceeded to the Belgian front. There in the Ypres Salient at St. Julien on April 22 these Canadian soldiers were submitted to the first German gas attack.

This landing at Ste. Nazaire was an occurrence of high historic interest, because it was the first time in history that embodied troops from the North American continent crossed the ocean to take part in a war in Europe. The Canadian Government considered that such an event should be commemorated in a suitable way and, through the Battlefields Memorial Commision, negotiations were undertaken with the municipal authorities in Ste. Nazaire with a view to the erection in that city of a memorial tablet. The project was approved and a fine tablet was executed in bronze. It is surrounded by a border of maple leaves and bears the Arms of the Dominion of Canada and an inscription in French and English. The English text follows:

Here Landed the First Canadian Division
Eighteen Thousand Strong
on 12th February, 1915,
Three Hundred and Twenty Thousand Followed
The Canadians Fought the Germans Throughout 4 Years
After Engaging in 26 Battles
They Marched in Victory to the Rhine

This tablet was erected in the city hall of Ste. Nazaire and unveiled in the city of Mons, Belgium, a similar fablet erected by the Canadian government, to record the fact that the Canadian Corps entered Belgium on the last day of the war and delivered it from the German invader. The inscription on this tablet reads:

Mons Was Recaptured by the Canadian Corps
On the 11th November 1918;
After 50 Months of German Occupation
Freedom Was Restored to the City
Here Was Fired the Last Shot of the Great War

MEMORIAL ERECTED.

Baron Byng to Unveil Tablet Late in August

OTTAWA, Ont., July 28.—(Canadian Press).—The memorial erected by the Canadian Nurses' Association in the Hall of Fame, Dominion Parliament Buildings, to the Canadian nursing sisters who lost their lives in the Great War, will be unveiled by His Excellency Baron Byng of Vimy on the afternoon of August 24. The officers of the Canadian Nurses' Association have made every effort to locate the next of kin of the deceased nursing sisters. The secretary of the National Memorial Committee of the association is located at 1, Queen's Park, Toronto, Ont.

Spoiled Boys Turn Out To Be Poor Husbands

LONDON, July 27.—Spoiled boys make bad husbands, says Miss H. S. Cooper Hodgson, Health Inspector of the Durham County Council.

"Mothers who are too indulgent to their sons give wives self-centred husbands, who because they have been thoroughly spoiled, never lift a finger to help in the home," Miss Hodgson declared at a sanitary congress here. She was speaking on some of the difficulties of rearing children.

Fathers and mothers who had not yet learned to understand the miracle of the baby's mind, Miss Hodgson said, were missing a great deal, and through their ignorance incalcuble harm was being done—harm which lasted through life. Her motto is:

"Children need neither rods nor rules, but guides."

"Proper Food and Exercise," by ARTHUR A. McGOVERN Former physical director, Cornell Medical College.

Change your food to suit the weather

1. Food should be changed during the hot weather the same as clothes. You would not wear a fur coat on the Fourth of July, neither should you partake of a meal consisting of heavy fuel foods, such as sugar, starches and fats combined. Vegetable salads and fruits with either broiled lean meat, chicken or fish should suffice for the summer months.

2. Be careful not to sit around after taking exercise, because as we perspire easily we are liable to sit in a draft with damp clothes on. This is one of the chief causes for neuralgia and similar afflictions.

3. Don't sit out in the sun and read without a hat or dark glasses. Many people weaken and strain their eyes by reading in the sunlight. You should never read while the sun is glaring in your eyes.

4. Exercise: Golf, tennis and other forms of recreation should be played in the early morning or the late afternoon when the sun is not too hot. Always wear a light hat to keep the sun off your head. Too much heat has been known to cause blood clots in older persons.

5. Bathing: Surf bathing is unquestionably the most popular of all summer recreations and to my mind the most beneficial, providing we use a little precaution. Going in the water intermittently is not the ideal way. Numbers of people spend the whole day on the beach in their bathing suits, going in the water as many as seven or eight times, sitting in the sun after each bath, permitting the rays of the sun to dry their bathing suits. We must remember, however, that we are also using a certain amount of our body's vitality to dry these damp clothes.

When you intend to spend the day on the beach in bathing clothes, do not go into the water until you are prepared to get into dry clothes. In other words, as soon as you come out of the surf you should take off your wet clothes, dry off thoroughly and get into fresh clothes.

6. Sun Bathing: Sunshine is one of the most beneficial of nature's known cures. Caution should be exercised in the beginning, however, as over-indulgence in sun bathing frequently proves more injurious than beneficial. The person who does not enjoy at least fair physical health should be very careful concerning sun baths. At the beginning I would suggest not more than ten minutes' exposure of the body to the sun, and I would alternate the front and back on one minute schedule. In other words, lie on your back with the front of your body exposed to the sun for one minute, then turn over on your stomach and allow the sun rays to beat on your back for one minute.

Balanced to Keep Healthy Diet

BREAKFAST: Before breakfast a glass of water or a large glass of orange juice. A large dish of fruit and bran flakes with milk. A poached egg or two small slices of bacon. One slice of toast thinly buttered. Cocoa, chocolate or a coffee substitute.

Between breakfast and lunch two glasses of water and some fresh fruit.

LUNCH: A vegetable luncheon, fresh fruit salad or fresh vegetable salad. One muffin, roll or slice of bread thinly buttered. Dessert: a half portion of any dessert. Glass of milk, cocoa or chocolate.

Between lunch and dinner, two glasses of water and eat some fresh fruit.

DINNER: Soup. One helping of broiled lean meat, chicken or fish. A baked potato with a small piece of butter. Fresh vegetables, such as lettuce, tomatoes, celery, onions, etc. One slice of bread thinly buttered and a gelatine dessert.

CORONER STARTS EXAMINATION OF WIARTON CRIME

Autopsy To Be Performed on Body of Slain Man.

WOMAN IN JAIL.

Little Known in District About Man—Jury Being Empanelled.

OWEN SOUND, July 28 (Canadian Press).—Inquiry into the murder of Edward B. McCoy, of Newark, N.J., alleged to have been shot by Kate Hardman, at Sky Lake, 10 miles from Wiarton, yesterday will be made by a jury which Coroner Dr. Fisher of Wiarton will emnanel to-day. An autopsy will be performed on the man's body.

Very little is known about McCoy, except that he came here from Newark about May 1 last, and has been selling rugs in the district. Although McCoy has called on Miss Hardman frequently, no one has seen them quarreling. Miss Hardman was taken to Bruce County Jail at Walkerton last night.

RAYMOND ALLEN'S BODY RECOVERED

travel came the "Harwood" of Peterboro, and a Toronto motor boat with a blue clad life saver standing in the bow searching the water through glasses. Out from the western shore of the lake darted a white motor launch, carrying Chief Umphrey of Lindsay. The plane circled overhead once again, endeavoring to locate more definitely the two bodies the airmen reported having seen.

Then misfortune came. The seaplane's engine broke down and it was forced to land. It would take two hours, we were told, to repair the trouble.

Where everything had a few minutes before, been bustle and noise of racing engines there was now only the cry of a loon far over the water. Without the eyes of the plane we could do nothing.

The Body Found.

We continued our patrol of the shore, running in as close as possible, searched again the little island near the camp site and rounded the end of Long Point toward the side where the survivors ultimately landed. Here a short distance from the point, Raymond Allan's body was found, and we followed the boat with its sad burden to the morgue at Rosedale lock.

Two members of the St. Andrew's Brotherhood from Toronto positively identified the body as that of Ray Allan, but Rev. J. D. Paterson, who was so well acquainted with the lad, was not ready to claim the remains on the slight evidence available. He accordingly telephoned to Peterborough to have relatives of the boy meet him at Lindsay, where the body was taken. There, about five o'clock, it was established beyond a doubt that the body of the Peterborough boy had been recovered, and Coroner Dr. Logan made out the death certificate. The body was immediately sealed in an iron case, hermetically soldered, and was brought to Peterborough.

Funeral on Thursday.

The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the family residence to All Saints' Church, where service will be conducted by Rev. W. Wrixon of Coboconk. All departments of the church will be represented, and the City Council and other public bodies are expected to participate. Kiwanis Club last night decided to be officially represented and will supply cars to carry the school children. Members of the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, of which Raymond Allan was a member, will also be present from Toronto.

The heroism of the lad in striking away from the comparative safety of the floating canoe in an attempt to bring help to his weakening comrades has stirred the community, and it is expected that many hundreds will honor his memory tomorrow.

Lambden Arrives

Arthur Lambden, who arrived at Lindsay together with H. A. Mowat, general secretary of the St. Andrew's Brotherhood, on Monday night, was busy with the searchers. He stated that the three victims still missing, Harold Mills, of Galt, and Harold Bakewell and Vernon Clark, of Toronto, were the last boys to drop off the canoe and believed that the bodies might lie half a mile further towards the "gap" than those already recovered.

Under instructions from the Crown Attorney Coroner Dr. M. M. Crawford of Toronto yesterday took official identification of the bodies of Heale and Burgess in preparation for a possible further inquest, which may be held in that city after the case has been concluded in Lindsay. Such a possibility, Dr. Crawford explained, was no reflection on the Lindsay authorities, but simply indicated a desire on the part of the Provincial Government to make the widest and fullest investigation possible.

Funeral On Thursday

The funeral of Raymond Allan will take place from the family residence to All Saints Church on Thursday afternoon at 2.00 o'clock. The service at the church will be conducted by the Rev. J. D. Paterson, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Wrixton of Coboconk.

The funeral will take place on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late home, 102 Dunvegan Road, to Grace-Church-on-the-Hill and thence to Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

BUSINESS IN JULY HAS BEEN QUIET

Much Depends on Outcome of Present Harvest—Conditions Good.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28.—(Canadian Press).— The monthly business summary of the Bank of Montreal says:—

"Midsummer quiet has characterized business during the month of July, and will continue so to do yet a few weeks. Compared with recent years, however, a greater volume of trade is recorded and few discouraging signs appear. A minor unfavorable element is the dissolution of Parliament and precipitancy of a general election, an event usually causing some halt in commercial activity.

"Much depends upon the outcome of the harvest. We are now approaching the critical period in the crop situation with evidence on every hand to justify the hope of the estimated wheat yield, based on crop conditions at June 30, shows a slight falling off as compared with the estimate on the same date last year the crops actually garnered exceeded the June estimates.

"The present estimate is for a total yield of 348,626,000 bushels of wheat as against last year's estimate of 365,000,000 and an actual production of approximately 417,000,000 bushels. The total yield of oats is indicated as 458,000,00 bushels as against 468,000,000 estimated last year and 513,000,000 produced; while barley is put at 100,524,000 bushels as compared with 86,00,000 bushels estimated last year and 113,000,000 bushels produced. In the central provinces, crop prospects are excellent despite the late season. Pastures are luxuriant and livestock in good condition."

VOL. LVIII., No. 24 PETERBOROUGH, THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1926 PRICE THREE CENTS

E. A. Peck Unanimous Choice as Conservative Candidate

Customs and Tariff Bracketed Along With Stable Government As Main Issues Before Electors

Dr. R. J. Manion Ridicules Suggestion of Former Ministers That Safety of Constitution Is Imperilled and Declares That King Was Well Aware of the Wrong Doing in Department Under Boivin

EX-MEMBER FOR WEST PETERBOROUGH REITERATES NEED FOR PROTECTION

Again Crosses Swords with Former Minister of Immigration and Denies Once More the Charge That He Voted Against Re-introduction of Penny Postage and Reduction of Taxation.

At an enthusiastic convention held in Victoria Hall last night, E. A. Peck received the unanimous nomination of the Conservative Association to contest the constituency of West Peterborough. The Association was congratulated upon their choice by the Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion, Postmaster-General, who was the principal speaker at the meeting.

Dr. Manion impatiently brushed aside the contention of Mr. King and members of the late Liberal Cabinet, that the real issue before the electors concerned itself with the constitutional propriety of Baron Byng's action in granting dissolution to Mr. Meighen after having refused the request of Mr. King. Dr. Manion, who declared that the Governor-General merely followed the dictates of common sense, stated that the real questions which confronted the electors were those involving the Customs, the need of a stable government, and the need of a stable tariff. Declaring that the group system had led to serious dislocation of the functions of government, he called upon the electors to return the Conservatives with a majority over all parties.

The blame for the present conditions did not lie with the electors of West Peterborough, but with those of other constituencies who had failed to realize the necessity of returning a government with a sufficient majority to carry through its measures independent of the support of other parties.

Chairman's Remarks

Mr. McElderry, the chairman, in his introductory remarks, stated that the object of the meeting was to choose a candidate to represent this riding in the forthcoming general election. It was very gratifying, he said, to see such a splendid turnout at this particular time of the year. The meeting was, he said, inevitable; a government such as the last could not last. The speaker described the Customs scandal as the most outrageous affair that has come to the attention of the people of Canada. It was not his intention, he said, to detain the meeting at any length so without further delay, he declared the meeting open for the selection of a Conservative candidate to represent the riding of West Peterborough.

The speaker had hardly finished his remarks when C. H. Ackerman rose to his feet and nominated the late member, E. A. Peck. Dr. J. R. Fraser of Lakefield seconded the motion. W. H. Boulton moved that the nominations beclosed, thus making the selection unanimous.

E. A. Peck, Ex-M.P.

"I sincerely thank you for the honor you have done me in selecting me for the second time in ten months, to contest this seat", said Mr. Peck. "You people did your duty last time and I know you will do it again. A few more Conservative members last time would have ensured a stable Government and I know that on September 14 next there will be such a substantial majority that the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen will be enabled to go forward in the best interests of Canada", he declared.

Although the Liberals had less members than the Conservatives, he said, they had the support of the Progressives and the Independents. They had advantage of being in office. They presented a programme of legislation that was carefully prepared to catch the approval of the Progressives. The question was "which party was to govern", he declared. It came to a vote and only five Progressives supported the Conservatives and they were beaten. The speaker said that it was only after the customs investigation that the Independent members began to seek a change. Describing the last scenes of the parliament the speaker stated that early in the morning of the last Saturday in June there were three divisions and the Government were defeated in each. "When we went back on Monday, satisfied that they were defeated, to our suprise Mackenzie King got up and asked for a dissolution," he declared.

The Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen was asked to form a government, which he did, and went on with the customs investigation. The report was carried by a majority of ten, several Progressives supporting the Conservatives on it, he said.

There had been much criticism, he said, of the act of the Governor General in refusing dissolution to Mackenzie King and granting it to Mr. Meighen. The Governor General, he said, realized that it was only a matter of a few days before the Government would be defeated. He expressed the opinion that the Governor General had used common sense in the case. "An election is coming on", he said, and it is up to you to support the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen. Referring to the recent discussion between the Hon. G. N. Gordon and himself in the columns of The Examiner the speaker declared "Mr. Gordon in an address to a meeting of lady electors made some clean cut statements to the effect that I had voted against penny postage, the reduction in the Income tax, a reduction in the price of automobiles, in fact everything in connection with the budget. "I was surprised and contradicted it," he said. "Mr. Gordon came back and offered to donate money to certain charities to prove that I voted against these things. I pointed out from the official records of the House where I had not voted against them. Mr. Gordon came back again and increased his sum of money. "It's pretty cheap stuff—he wants me to get from the clerk of the House a letter saying whether I voted that way or not. I want to tell you that it is an absolute impossibility to obtain that letter—he is an independent person—I cannot get a letter from him—Mr. Gordon cannot get a letter from him, therefore his money is safe", declared the speaker.

Mr. Peck said that Mr. Gordon was basing his statements on two votes taken early in the budget speech. The budget was presented section by section and finally as a whole for confirmation. The two votes submitted to the House were voted on before they were absolutely brought in for confirmation. At this juncture Mr. Peck read an amendment to motion proposed by the Hon. Dr. Manion. "We divided on that and were defeated," he said "but there was nothing in it about penny postage, income tax or autos —we were simply trying to defeat the Government and thought we might do so by getting a sly vote in some time," he declared.

It was after the two votes took place that the budget resolution which was to be considered came before the House, he said. Speaking of penny postage Mr. Peck declared there was no opposition to it. It was adopted by the House without division, he said. "I think in face of what I have said Mr. Gordon might withdraw his statement", said the speaker.

Mr. Peck stated that he approved of the reduction to penny postage and also the reduction in the Income Tax but at the same time, he said, they don't tend to benefit the great mass of the people of this country. While taxation must be reduced as far as possible it could have been done in an entirely differnt way, he said. In his opinion a reduction in the sales tax would have meant a great deal more to the masses. The matter of the Customs investigation, he said, would be left to the other speakers to deal with. In conclusion said Mr. Peck "let me remind you of the issues that were at stake last election. My platform then was protection for industries, protection for the workmen so that the exodus could be stopped. Those were my reasons then and they are my reasons now." You cannot show me a single measure that indicates a desire to protect the industries which so sorely need it. The main issue is adopting a reasonable protection tariff for this country that will protect our people—that is the issue I stand before you on:

Dr. Manion.

Hon. Dr. R. J. Manion expressed his pleasure on being again in Peterboro. He reminded his hearers that he was present at the West Peterboro Conservative convention last year and congratulated them on their choice of Mr. Peck. Mr. Peck, he said, was one of those members whose retiring dispositions did not allow them to be so noisy as some of the others. But when anything affecting Peterboro or Canada was brought up, Mr. Peck was always at hand. Those who knew Mr. Peck at Ottawa had come to regard him with real affection, real respect and they hoped that he would double his majority. Dr. Manion also paid a graceful tribute to the ability of Mrs. Fallis.

General Election of 1925 .

He asked his audience to remember that as a result of the General Election, the King Government was in a minority and was forced to depend on the support of other groups. In addition to losing his own seat, Premier King witnessed the defeat of eight of his ministers. Four provinces, including Ontario, had no representatives in the Cabinet. In seven provinces, the Liberals were 200,000 votes behind the Conservatives and in all the Liberals received 500,000 votes less than their opponents. Mr King ought to have acted like a sportsman and accepted defeat, but he was never sportsmanlike. He attempted to continue in office, and had always to consult with Robert Forke, the Progressive leader, or with Woodsworth. If Forke or Woodsworth did not like the proposed legislation, they jettisoned it or he did it at their command. The House became like an auction sale room as Mr. King continued dickering with Messrs. Forke and Woodsworth.

Customs Probe.

The immediate cause (he was trying to think of a medical term, but politics were driving all memory of medical terminology from his head) of the election was the Customs probe which disclosed a state of scandal such as had never been known in the history of any other Government of the Dominion. For four months a committee had worked morning as well as evening. Of the things that had been disclosed he could tell only some of the high lights he had better call them some of the low lights. He referred to the fact that Mrs. Fallis had spoken of Miss McPhail's reading to her constituents of a letter that proved that Mr. King had known of the scandals in the Customs Department away back in March. Dr. Manion declared that letters written by Mr. Sparks of The Commercial Protective Association had drawn Mr. King's attention to the evil a year and eight months before the Department took action to deal with the smuggling that was ruining business. The Canadian Manufacturers' Association, the Canadian Wholesalers' Association and the Boards of Trade of Toronto and Montreal had joined in laying the facts before the Department but for twenty months nothing was done until the Government was forced into action by the Conservatives and by Harry Stevens. A deputation that had interviewed Mr. King, Mr. Bureau and Mr. McDonald and other ministers whom he could not recall at the moment had informed them that at one place alone, Rock Island, the country was losing $10,000,000 per year. This ten millions was lost at one point. The attention of the Government was again drawn to the evils by Mr. Sparks on February 4, 1924, February 21, February 26, and on January 22, 1925. In January 22, 1925, a Social Service Council of Nova Scotia comprising delegates from all churches, Catholic and Protestant, approached Mr. King complaining about the damage to youth caused by smuggled liquor. In answer to this protest Mr. King

Conservative member for West Peterborough in the Fifteenth Parliament, who was nominated by his party last night to seek re-election.

OPENS TENDERS FOR NEW MOTOR FIRE APPARATUS

Question of Putting Present Ladder Equipment on Truck Taken Up.

STUDYING BIDS.

Fire, Water and Light Committee Recommends Installation of Lights.

At the Fire, Water and Light Committee meeting of the City Council last night the matter of motorizing the hook and ladder wagon of the fire department was discussed, and the tenders which had been submitted were opened. The matter at present is left with the Fire Chief, and he is to go into the tenders of four of the companies: Reo, Gotfredson, G.M.C., and International, and recommend which chassis would be suitable to carry the hook and ladder apparatus which is built by the Bickle firm of Woodstock.

Aldeman Turner, who has been instrumental in starting this new programme, stated that the present apparatus had become very obsolete and that one of the horses was going to have to be replaced as it was getting very slow, and on the way to a fire the other day it fell, and it was some time before it was able to get up again; then in the second place the wagon is in very great need of repairs, and several ladders are needed. Alderman Greene thought that the matter could be left over until next year and a sum necessary could be put in the estimates.

The tenders were then opened and most of the companies submitted two tenders, one on a chassis alone and another one for chassis and equipment complete. In the general run of the tenders, $700 was allowed for the old hook and ladder wagon. The International Motor Company, through F. R. J. MacPherson, put in a tender of $4,055 for a chassis delivered and $7,705 complete with Bickle equipment, less $700 for the old wagon. General Motors, through Andrew Brown, tendered $3,250, and $6,700 with Bickle equipment and 50-foot ladder, or $7,400 with a 55-foot ladder. The American LeFrance tendered $3,670 for the equipment on any chassis. Brewer Motors tendered for the Reo 252 inch base $3,135, and chassis complete $6,600, less $600 for the old wagon. Gotfredson $3,150, or $6,112, with a 50-foot ladder, and $6,643 with a 55-foot ladder. This model was a 56 break horse power and their other model with a 78 break horse power was $4,425 for chassis and $7,387 with 50-foot ladder and $7,918 with a 55-foot laddder. Vincent Eastwood put in a tender of $2,500 for a tractor which would tow the improvised wagon truck The Bickle people with their specially designed equipment and motors, tendered $11,300, and offered $800 for the present wagon. The Fire Chief is going to go over these plans and designs with a mechanic and report to the chairman.

E. F. Mason, chairman of the Utilities Commission, was present, and the lighting in various parts of the city was discussed. It was decided to recommend that a light be put at the corner of Maria Street and Armour Road, one on Ware Street, where the C. N. R. crosses, and another on King Edward Street. It was also recommended that the Council get permission from the Bell Telephone Company to use the company's poles on Water Street in some places as tie poles for the electric light line.

The removing of the hydrant which is in front of the new Duffus service station was discussed, and it was decided to leave the matter with the Fire Chief as to a position across the street, with Mr. Duffus paying the expense of moving the hydrant.

The hydrant on McFarlane Avenue, on the top of the first hill from Armour Road was recommended to be installed, provided that the Utilities Commission and C. H. Rogers could come to some agreement as to the cost of installing.

Bakewell's body was the last to be found, all of the other ten having been recovered within the last few days.

WALTER WEST KILLED ON C.N.R. NEAR BIRDSALL

Hydro Employee at Mimico Was on Holiday at Hastings.

BODY MANGLED.

Suddenly Left Hotel Where He Was Guest With Family

(Examiner Staff Reporter.)

HASTINGS, July 29. — Walter West of Mimico, Ontario, an employee of the Hydro-Electric Commission, who with his wife and daughter, had come to Hastings for a few days' fishing, was killed by a C.N.R. train one-quarter of a mile below Birdsall Station, presumably about one o'clock this morning. It is believed that he tried to catch a freight train that went through here during the night. The body was seen this morning at the side of the railroad tracks by a C.N.R. train-crew, who were bringing a light engine to Peterboro.

Mr. West, who was 35 years old, was staying at the Clarendon Hotel. After supper Wednesday, he said he was going out, and when he had not returned at 9 o'clock his wife became alarmed. Search parties were formed and it was learned that he had been seen by Mrs. Hubbs running hatless and coatless through an oat field below the railway bridge. That was at dusk. He was traced to Birdsall Station, where he enquired about the train service and produced three tickets. At 10.45 p.m. he was seen at Steele's bridge near the Westwood turn in the Keene Road, and it is thought he took the south road to the railway.

During his few days in Hastings Mr. West had made quite a number of friends. Yesterday, he was with his wife all day until supper.

The inquest will be held in Westwood to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock. Dr. T. W. H. Young will act as coroner.

TWO MEN KILLED; THREE INJURED OSHAWA PLANT

Acetylene Torch Touched Empty Gasoline Tank, It Is Thought.

CAUSED EXPLOSION.

Men Working Some Distance Away Rendered Unconscious By Blast.

OSHAWA, July 29. (Canadian Press).—Two men were instantly killed, a third is believed to be dying, and two others are in the Oshawa General Hospital in a critical condition as the result of an explosion at a plant under construction for General Motors Limited here at noon. One of the dead has been identified as Alex. McNab, aged 22, of Oshawa.

The explosion was caused by the touching of an acetylene torch to a gasoline tank. Although there was no gas in the tank, it is thought the fumes from the gas it previously contained were sufficient to cause a blast. Several men working some distance from the tank were rendered unconscious from the explosion, but they recovered shortly after. The bodies of the men who were killed were picked up in pieces.

The second dead man was later identified as Fred Gaukel, aged 28, of Harmon, a suburb of Oshawa. George Saunders, 52, and Harold Godfrey, 15, are injured. Saunders is badly hurt but expected to recover and Godfrey received only cuts about his face. Edgar Keller who was working on the tank was blown a distance of 50 feet but escaped injury.

All men were employees of the General Motors of Canada Limited. An inquest will be opened this afternoon and probably will be adjourned until the men in the hospital are well enough to testify.

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE MARKS FUNERAL OF RAYMOND ALLAN

"Our Boy Was the Hero of the Party," Says Rev. Mr. Paterson.

DIED FOR OTHERS.

Favorite Hymns of Dead Boy Sung By His Church Comrades.

Raymond Allan has gone home. A life that had been one of Christian manhood and sacrifice has ended. This afternoon his earthly remains were borne by six of the chums of his boyhood to their resting place in the peaceful Little Lake cemetery. Hundreds of his fellow members of All Saints' Church and of his fellow citizens of Peterborough attended the church for a reverent farewell, and followed to the grave.

Never did the solemn burial service of the Church of England seem more impressive or uplifting. The whole note was one, not of sadness, but of thanks to God for the noble life that had been lived in the church and city. The fifteenth chapter of first Corinthians, with its assurance of the resurrection of Christ and the vanquishing of death, formed the lesson, while the psalm was the nintieth, "Lord, Thou hast been our refuge, from one generation to another." These were read by the Rev. W. Wrixon, of Coboconk, who took a leading part in the efforts of recovery which were crowned with final success to-day.

Four hymns were sung, two of them the hymns which Raymond had loved best, and the voices of his fellows in the Boys' Club raised their voices in honor of their comrade in the words of "Fling out the Banner," and "What a Friend we have in Jesus." The others were "Hush! Blessed are the Dead," and "For all the Saints who From their Labors Rest."

Words of thanskgiving to the Heavenly Father for the life of Raymond Allan were those spoken by the rector, the Rev. J. Douglas Paterson. We honor him as a church member and are proud of him as a citizen," he said. "I consider it a duty and a privilege as representing this congregation, and as one who spent days at the scene of the tragedy, to thank those whose labor has been rewarded," he continued, asking the Rev. Mr. Wrixon to convey to the people of his district the heartfelt thanks of the congregation and citizens.

"We are in the presence of a hero," continued Mr. Paterson; "various things have been printed, some accurate and others not accurate, but one thing is clear, our boy was a hero. He was the swimmer of the party, and could have saved himself with slight help from the canoe, but he was a man and a hero.

"Raymond might have been numbered with the living, but that would have been to belie his manhood, to put selfishness before his manhood, and to put away his lifetime training. Instead of accepting this opportunity he perished in an effort to save others, and in his sacrifice made it possible that others might hold on.

"We are proud of these boys; we are proud of our boy. Our heads are lifted high because he was ours, and there has been a spontaneous offering of gifts that his church may bear a memorial to a manly life and to a hero's passing."

Addressing the members of the Boys' Club, Mr. Paterson reminded them that the boys of All Saints' have never ceased to bring honor to their church and parish. "In the corner," he said, "there is a memorial to one of those who gave themselves to the uttermost overseas. Another is a missionary in Western Canada. One has now risen to the challenge and Raymond's Sunday school class has found a new leader and teacher who will carry on his work."

Take 4 Impress, Service

Continuing to address the boys, the speaker said that they had a memory of him, but that they should be proud of him, not only for the manner in which he carried himself, for many would rise to an occasion, but for the way he lived his daily life as a Christian man. "No one could say anything against his character. All his life he proclaimed the faith that was in

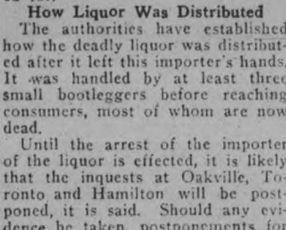
SPOKE LAST-NIGHT



HON. DR. MANION,

Who delivered a characteristic speech at nomination meeting held in Victoria Hall last night.

POLICE HOPE SOON TO ARREST BOOZE IMPORTER

Seizure of Head of Liquor Ring is Expected Shortly.

INQUESTS START.

Buffalo Chemists Report Analyzing Alcohol and Reporting it Poisonous

HAMILTON, July 29 — Another link or two, and Provincial and local police hope to establish the distribution of poisonous liquor from the time it was smuggled from Buffalo until the victims drank it with fatal results. The chain is fairly complete as the case now stands, it was said last night, but there is one gap—"identity of the master bootlegger" who imported the poison brew. Police are said to have a knowledge of who he is, and his arrest is looked for.

How Liquor Was Distributed

The authorities have established how the deadly liquor was distributed after it left this importer's hands. It was handled by at least three small bootleggers before reaching consumers, most of whom are now dead.

Until the arrest of the importer of the liquor is effected, it is likely that the inquests at Oakville, Toronto and Hamilton will be postponed, it is said. Should any evidence be taken, postponements for at least one week will likely be asked for by Crown authorities.

Edward Miller and Joe Romeo, arrested because they are alleged to have been connected with the sale of poisonous alcohol to D'Angelo who later sold to Oakville victims, were admitted to bail yesterday in the sum of $2,000 each. Their bail was reduced from $5,000 by Magistrate Jeffs. Mrs. Veronica Sullivan furnished bonds for Miller and Mrs. Bessie Perry, wife of Rocco Perry, gave bonds for Joe Romeo.

Bootleggers Are Boasting

With Mr. Hales's men all said "to be on their toes," bootleggers boasted here yesterday that fresh supplies of non-poisonous alcohol were reaching the city, but that the usual price had virtually doubled, because mostly all vendors voluntarily destroyed what stocks of alcohol they had for fear it might be poisonous.

One man, who was formerly an active bootlegger here, declared frankly that official connivance at Windsor, Niagara Falls and other points along the border made it possible to bring large supplies of raw alcohol into Ontario.

Genuine vigilance at border points he said, would soon arrest this traffic.

New Poison Area

BUFFALO, July 29.—The international wood alcohol horror last night lifted its poison head in a brand new quarter—the southern tier of Western New York.

Without warning it struck down four persons in or near the City of Jamestown, sent another in critical condition to a hospital and ushered in a reign of fear among drink-place owners and patrons of such establishments. From Salamanca, Olean, Mayville and intermediate points came reports that large quantities of the deadly liquor was in their midst.

Chemists Spring Sensation

Simultaneously the investigation by Buffalo authorities into the sources of the poison liquor which had claimed a toll of 44 lives up until late last night in the frontier region, took a sensational turn when

MEIGHEN GIVES THREE SPEECHES DURING ONE DAY

Premier Speaks at Georgetown and Charlottetown, P.E.I.

TALKS ON TARIFF.

Adequate Protection For All Products of Dominion is His Platform.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., July 29. — "I want to say this: that the people of Canada are more interested in the honest administration of our affairs than in any bogus talk of the Constitution." Thus Premier Meighen last night dealt with the constitutional issue raised by Mr. Mackenzie King. The Prime Minister crossed over from Pictou in the morning, and his day was one of travelling and speaking. A few moments after the boat arrived at Charlottetown, he was on his way to Georgetown, where in a sweltering heat he visited a crowded sweltering heat he visited a crowded ings in Charlottetown. To-day he speaks in Summerside.

Transparent Nonsense.

He referred to statements on the constitutional issue both by Mr. King and by Robert Forke, former leader of the Progressives. Replying to the charge by Mr. Forke that the present government should have completed the work of the session before dissolving Parliament, Mr. Meighen declared that he had never heard nonsense so effervescent or so transparent as for a man "who himself voted that we were not a government, who got most of his followers to vote that we were not a government, to claim that we should have come back in the House and act as a government, although they had decided that we were not a government."

The Prime Minister submitted his views on the tariff as he submitted them in other places in the Maritime provinces. But referring more particularly to the agricultural problems of the island, he announced the intention of his government, if returned:

(1) To encourage co-operative marketing to the utmost of its power.

(2) To put the Canadian tariff on farm products from the United States as high as the United States tariff on Canadian farm products.

Suggestion Refused.

Mr. Meighen emphasized the point that when Mr. Mackenzie King announced his resignation "he refused my suggestion that before resigning we ought to take some steps together to try to finish the work of the session. We were anxious to get what legislation there was through. This he spurned scornfully. He never entertained it for a second."

Mr. Meighen turned to the tariff. "We stand just where we stood in 1921 and in 1925," he said. "We stand for a reasonable protective policy for Canada in fiscal matters. We stand for the application, not of a high tariff—I have not said so in my political life—that adjective is just the invention of some political foes in order to get something they can attack. But we do stand for the application of the protective principle thoroughly from end to end of the tariff of this country, on all products produced in this dominion, on agricultural, manufacturing, natural products—on everything. In the interests of Canada we insist upon the application of the protective principle everywhere."

AT GEORGETOWN.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I., July 29. —At the first meeting in Prince Edward Island yesterday afternoon Premier Meighen sketched the growth of the wheat pools in the west and then declared it to be the policy of the government to assist farmers in the marketing of their products. We intend, he said, to get in close touch with all marketing organizations, all co-operative marketing agencies for farmers, to give them every help within the power of the government.

The agencies would be voluntary, self-controlled, and stand on their own feet, but there was a lot a sympathetic government could do, and any government of which he was the head was going to give that support to the utmost of its power.

HOPE TO AVERT CHURCH CLASH

Catholic Church Forbids Any Demonstration on Sunday.

LABOR TO PARADE.

MEXICO CITY, July 29 (Canadian Press)—The conviction prevails that clashes may be averted next Sunday when the priests of the Roman Catholic Churches in Mexico will cease their ministrations as a protest against the Government's religious regulation, by reason of the decision of the Catholic authorities to refuse to sanction any counter-demonstration to parades of the Regional Confederation of Labor, which are to be held as evidence of Labor's support of the government, and further by the church authorities having authorized committees which will take over the churches when the priests depart to negotiate with the municipal authorities which have been ordered by the government to appoint their own committees to take charge of the churches.

Unless unforeseen conditions arise, all the churches will remain open after Sunday, although no priests will function. Worshippers will be able to enter at all times and a sort of modified mass may be conducted by the worshippers. Holy communion, confessions, confirmations, and consecrations, all of which require the functions of the priest, will cease, but modified marriages and baptisms will be continued.

MEIGHEN GIVES THREE SPEECHES DURING ONE DAY

Premier Speaks at Georgetown and Charlottetown, P.E.I.

TALKS ON TARIFF.

Adequate Protection For All Products of Dominion is His Platform.

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I., July 29. — "I want to say this: that the people of Canada are more interested in the honest administration of our affairs than in any bogus talk of the Constitution." Thus Premier Meighen last night dealt with the constitutional issue raised by Mr. Mackenzie King. The Prime Minister crossed over from Pictou in the morning, and his day was one of travelling and speaking. A few moments after the boat arrived at Charlottetown, he was on his way to Georgetown, where in a sweltering heat he visited a crowed sweltering heat he visited a crowded ings in Charlottetown. To-day he speaks in Summerside.

Transparent Nonsense.

He referred to statements on the constitutional issue both by Mr. King and by Robert Forke, former leader of the Progressives. Replying to the charge by Mr. Forke that the present government should have completed the work of the session before dissolving Parliament, Mr. Meighen declared that he had never heard nonsense so effervescent or so transparent as for a man "who himself voted that we were not a government, who got most of his followers to vote that we were not a government, to claim that we should have come back in the House and act as a government, although they had decided that we were not a government."

The Prime Minister submitted his views on the tariff as he submitted them in other places in the Maritime provinces. But referring more particularly to the agricultural problems of the island, he announced the intention of his government, if returned:

(1) To encourage co-operative marketing to the utmost of its power.

(2) To put the Canadian tariff on farm products from the United States as high as the United States tariff on Canadian farm products.

Suggestion Refused.

Mr. Meighen emphasized the point that when Mr. Mackenzie King announced his resignation "he refused my suggestion that before resigning we ought to take some steps together to try to finish the work of the session. We were anxious to get what legislation there was through. This he spurned scornfully. He never entertained it for a second."

Mr. Meighen turned to the tariff. "We stand just where we stood in 1921 and in 1925," he said. "We stand for a reasonable protective policy for Canada in fiscal matters. We stand for the application, not of a high tariff—I have not said so in my political life—that adjective is just the invention of some political foes in order to get something they can attack. But we do stand for the application of the protective principle thoroughly from end to end of the tariff of this country, on all products produced in this dominion, on agricultural, manufacturing, natural products—on everything. In the interests of Canada we insist upon the application of the protective principle everywhere."

AT GEORGETOWN.

GEORGETOWN, P.E.I., July 29. —At the first meeting in Prince Edward Island yesterday afternoon Premier Meighen sketched the growth of the wheat pools in the west and then declared it to be the policy of the government to assist farmers in the marketing of their products. We intend, he said, to get in close touch with all marketing organizations, all co-operative marketing agencies for farmers, to give them every help within the power of the government.

The agencies would be voluntary, self-controlled, and stand on their own feet, but there was a lot a sympathetic government could do, and any government of which he was the head was going to give that support to the utmost of its power.

HOPE TO AVERT CHURCH CLASH

Catholic Church Forbids Any Demonstration on Sunday.

LABOR TO PARADE.

MEXICO CITY, July 29 (Canadian Press)—The conviction prevails that clashes may be averted next Sunday when the priests of the Roman Catholic Churches in Mexico will cease their ministrations as a protest against the Government's religious regulation, by reason of the decision of the Catholic authorities to refuse to sanction any counter-demonstration to parades of the Regional Confederation of Labor, which are to be held as evidence of Labor's support of the government, and further by the church authorities having authorized committees which will take over the churches when the priests depart to negotiate with the municipal authorities which have been ordered by the government to appoint their own committees to take charge of the churches.

Unless unforeseen conditions arise, all the churches will remain open after Sunday, although no priests will function. Worshippers will be able to enter at all times and a sort of modified mass may be conducted by the worshippers. Holy communion, confessions, confirmations, and consecrations, all of which require the functions of the priest, will cease, but modified marriages and baptisms will be continued.

"BOOTS AND HER BUDDIES"

FORKE DECLARES OFFERS MADE BY BOTH PARTIES

Progressive Members Were Always Being Approached, He Says.

SPEAKS ON PROBE.

Says Condition Exists That Must Not, and Will Not Continue.

BRANDON, July 29. Canadian Press. — "The Progressive members were approached by Conservatievs and Liberals almost continuously during the last session," declared Robert Forke, former leader of the Progressives in the House of Commons, and nominee of the party for the constituency of Brandon at the forth coming Federal election, in addressing a public meeting here.

Mr. Forke dealt at length with the developments at Ottawa during the last session, and declared offers of "divers kinds, including the Conservatives' statement that if the Progressives would give that party their support the parliament would run its full course."

After enumerating the different votes taken in the house during which the opposition obtained a majority on three occasions, none of which were on government resolutions, Mr. Forke said: "I am not going to make any apology for the customs department. The Minister of Customs fell down to a certain extent. Nothing happened in regard to the Customs which might not have been going on for 10 or 15 years, or perhaps 30 years.

"A condition of things exists that must not continue, and will not continue no matter which government is in power."

IMPRESSIVE SERVICE MARKS FUNERAL

him. His character would not let him act otherwise than he did," said Mr. Paterson. He urged the boys to take Raymond's example as their example and his Lord as their Lord, pleading that they might be worthy of the brother who had left their club for the last time, but whose memory would always be green.

"It would be sad if we had no hope, no faith, and no vision," said the speaker, "but we have faith and hope, and a vision that the end is not here and is not now. We are going to see through our tears and leave him, not in the grave, but in the keeping of his God, his Master, and his Saviour, and we are going to keep him in our hearts."

Impressive service—Take Five ....

At the conclusion of the address, Mr. Paterson conveyed to the mourners and congregation, messages received from the Brotherhood of St. Andrew, under whose auspices the camp had been held, and from the Rev. Canon Plumtre, rector of St. James' Cathedral, where at the same moment the funeral service for the Toronto dead was going on. The latter message said that the prayers and thoughts of the cathedral congregation would be for all the boys and Mr. Paterson said that he had replied that all the victims of the terrible tragedy would be in the prayers of his congregation.

Members of the city council and representatives of many civic organizations were among the large congregation, which filled the church, while the members of the church societies attended the service in a body. A party from the Canadian Packing Company's local plant and stores occupied seats at the centre of the church.

The cortege which followed the hearse to the cemetery was a lengthy one, and was greeted with honor and reverence by all whom it passed.

POLICE HOPE SOON TO ARREST

nation-wide search was instituted for David Goldberg and "Nate" Sapowich of Buffalo, and "Davey" Burden of New York City. The quest was the direct result of sworn statements made to Deputy Chief Frank J. Carr and police aides by John J. Nesterowicz, Buffalo, and Ilaf Reauterman, Lackawanna, members of the firm conducting the Babcock Testing Laboratory, chemists.

The chemists swore that Voelker and his pals went to them during the middle of July and submitted samples of alcohol. These samples, the chemists tested, and, they say, subsequently reported to the Voelker gang as being poisonous, and unfit for human consumption. It is on these statements that the District Attorney expects to get first degree murder indictments.

The office of United States District Attorney Templeton was the scene yesterday of another conference in a series designed to compile and prepare the evidence on which it is hoped to lodge behind prison bars the persons responsible for the fatalities.

WOMAN ARRESTED ON MURDER CHARGE

Wife of Slain Rector is Being Held in Jail.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., July 29. — Canadian Press. — Prosecutor Francis Bergen offered no information today as to what new evidence had caused the arrest last night of Mrs. Edward Wheeler Hall, widow of Rev Edward Hall, lain rector of St. John's Episcopal church, in New Brunswick, for the ... rder, four years ago, of her husband and Mrs. Eleanor Mills, wife of the church sexton, and a singer in the choir.

Mrs. Hall, who is being held in the county jail without bail, branded her arrest as "ridiculous" but would say nothing more. The murder and efforts of the police to ascertain the slayer caused much interest in 1922.

GREAT PRIMA DONNA RETURNS TO CANADA

Madame Donalda Takes Great Interest in Her Canadian Pupils.

MONTREAL, Que., July 28. — (Canadian Press).—The great Canadian prima donna, Mme. Pauline Donalda, is visiting this city where she was born and in which she was educated. She is very French in manner. Interviewed she referred with much delight to the triumphs of her pupils for whose advancement she gave up her own brilliant operatic and concert singing. She emphasized the need of hard work for girls seeking musical careers, thousands of whom go abroad and imagine they can succeed without much training.

Like Madame Sembrich, Madame Donalda works very hard herself among her pupils, her day of teaching extending from nine in the morning until seven at night, when a bare 15 minutes intermission for lunch is made.

"I want my girls to be perfectly qualified singers—complete! They are taught style—Bach, Gounod, Beethoven—they are taught classics with a vengeance! They absolutely must go through the routine—no skipping."

While her pupils come from many parts of the world, Madame Donalda cherishes a special interest in those who hail from her own land of Canada. The two who won special recognition during the past season in Paris are Canadians, Mlle. Camille Bernard of Montreal and Mlle. de Burnada of Vancouver, both of whom secured the prized diploma awarded by the Union Professionelle des Maitres du Chant Francaise, by unanimous decision of the jury. "Camille Bernard is a real diseuse, and also sings opera and opera comique," Madame Donalda said. "She has a wonderful voice. I sent her to Yvette Guilbert, who thinks she will come out very well. I am glad, because she is a Montreal girl."

Speaking of Madame Sarah Fischer, who is also a Montrealer, Madame Donalda was most enthusiastic over her singing. "Her powers compare very much with those of Mary Garden, and, of course, she is much younger. She is so unaffected and simple. She is charming—an angel. I love rer!"

Madame Donalda's success has not been attained without much striving in the beginning, and she recalled her efforts to secure a hearing from Damrosch. The girl in her 'teens, weeping with disappointment, seemed almost a myth, but Madame Donalda insisted that it had been a very real and heartbreaking disappointment, saved fortunately through the kindness of heart of an official at the Metropolitan who secured a hearing for her.

ELEVEN DELEGATES GO TO CONFERENCE

Great Progress Made by University Women Towards Establishing Fellowships.

LONDON, July 28.—(Canadian Press).—Canada is represented at the Amsterdam Conference of the International Federation of University Women, which opened yesterday, by no fewer than 11 Canadian delegates. Mrs. Roland McWilliams of Winnipeg, Chairman of the Committee on International Relations, is the chief delegate, supported by, among others, Miss A. W. Patterson and Miss N. Bere. It is satisfactory that Canada has sent such a large delegation, for her National Federation ranks third numerically amongst the 27 nations which make up the International Federation. The United States and Great Britain are the only countries with a larger membership.

The report of the International Club House Committee was a most encouraging one, especially with regard to the progress of Crosby Hall —the London club for university women. The residential wing which is being added to the historic old hall is already completed up to the first floor. The Warden is shortly to be appointed and by next spring the doors will be opened to the university women of the world.

Although the Federation has still a long way to go before the million dollar fund is realized, much progress has been made with the general scheme for the yearly award of 30 travelling fellowships to brilliant university women for the purposes of research.

Unfavorable Crop Report Forces Price Of Wheat Up

CHICAGO, July 29 (Canadian Press).—Wheat made quick early upturns in price to-day as a result of the unexpected firmness of Liverpool quotations, with less favorable weather conditions in Canada and much reduced estimates of the probable Canadian yield. Opening 1-8 to 1c higher, the wheat market here re-acted somewhat but soon scored material fresh gains. Corn was firm, oats easy, and provisions inclined to sag, corn starting unchanged to 7-8 higher and subsequently rising all around.

NEVER ON SHIP.

QUEBEC, July 29— Hon. Ernest Lapointe, former Minister of Justice, has sent the following message to Premier Meighen:

"Re my telegram to the Prime Minister, dated July 24, concerning statements by A. J. Doucet:

"Canadian Press reports Mr. Doucet as stating now in the presence of the Prime Minister at his meetings that log-book of S. S Margaret indicates that one Mr. Lapointe and party boarded ship at Quebec on that famous alleged trip. I went therefore, to Customs Department and requested Acting Minister to secure this book so that I could see basis on which such calumny was substantiated. He told me that log-book is on the ship. I state again I never travelled on S. S. Margaret. As an act of an elementary fairness, I ask you to instruct that said log-book be sent to Quebec immediately, and that I should be authorized to see it in the presence of Customs agents or any other officer. I am sending this wire to Prime Minister, Acting Prime Minister and Acting Minister of Customs.

CANADIAN CROP GOVERNS PRICE

New York Bank Says Generous Harvest is Necessary.

LITTLE OLD WHEAT.

NEW YORK, July 29. — "The world price of wheat in the coming season will depend to an unusual degree upon the outturn of the Canadian crop," said the National Bank of Commerce. In a review of the outlook for world wheat supplies appearing in the August number of Commerce Monthly, the bank says: "Unless Canada's crop is a generous one another season of close balance between supply and demand is in view, at least until the fate of crops in the Southern Hemisphere is known.

Old Supplies Are Low

"As the current season draws towards its close, supplies of old crop wheat appear everywhere to be low, so that little in the way of carryover can be counted upon to augment the new crop. Comparatively little additional wheat can be expected to come forward from the Southern Hemisphere until the next crops are harvested at the beginning of 1927.

"Reports of damage to the new crop have come from various parts of Europe, eliminating the hope of an outturn equal to last year, but unless unfavorable weather persists there is reason to expect a fair average crop. Nevertheless, some increase in imports may be looked for.

"On the export side, the July 1 estimate gives the United States a total crop about 100,000,000 bushels greater than last year. This increase will just about offset the probable decrease in the crop of Western Europe, as indicated by condition reports so far.

Russian Crop is Doubtful

"The Indian crop, harvested in May, yielded practically the same total as last year, so that no substantial contribution toward the world supplies can be expected from that source. With the exception of problematical supplies from Russia, Canada is the only other important source of wheat imports until the crops of the Southern Hemisphere become available in the early part of 1927."

You like to know names that everybody knows—name of the man who tied lightning to a kite; name of the man who watched a tea kettle and went out and made an engine. Just knowing such names gives you pleasure.

Yet there are names that thousands of people know that can give you much more pleasure in a much more personal way. Names that stand for the best things to eat, to wear, to sleep on, you can buy. Names that if connected with the salad dressing, hat, mattress you select—or any other desirable thing you select—mean it is most desirable. Names written large in advertisements. Advertisements tell why those are wise names for you to know. Why such names greet you in the best groceries, department and hardware stores. Why those names are in the buying vocabulary of thousands....are believed in by thousands....justify belief!

SUBURBAN SALES.

The four days' Suburban Sale promoted by the Peterboro Chamber of Commerce as a plan to demonstrate the advantages offered by this city as the logical shopping centre for the district proved a splendid success, justifying the enterprise of the chamber in launching such an effort.

So successful indeed was this campaign in proving that Peterboro's stores could stand comparison with those in larger centres, no matter what test was applied, that a repetition of this Suburban Sale will undoubtedly follow.

In this connection the suggestion has been advanced that the week of the Peterboro Industrial Exhibition might be selected as an ideal time for holding such a sale, inasmuch as the city will be flooded with visitors from all parts of the district who would be glad of the opportunity to combine business with pleasure and make their visit to the Peterboro Industrial a shopping expedition as well.

The advantage of planting firmly in the minds of Exhibition visitors that Peterboro's stores are in a position to meet every demand made upon them is one strong argument in favour of a Suburban Sale during Exhibition week.

MR. PECK AGAIN.

The selection of Edward A. Peck, late member for West Peterboro, by last night's Conservative convention as the standard-bearer of the party at the coming election was expected by every one.

The unanimity of the choice and the heartiness of the reception accorded to the nominee testified to the high place Mr. Peck occupies in the respect and esteem of his supporters, as indeed he does in the estimation of the people of the district generally, regardless of their political affiliations.

There never was any doubt as to his nomination, provided that he was willing to accept the responsibility of again leading his party in West Peterboro.

With one candidate already in the field, the local campaign, which has been without life so far, will begin to take on the appearance of a contest, particularly as the Liberal convention will follow shortly and the issue will be joined.

Little has been given out from the Liberal camp so far as to the identity of the party's candidate, and for that reason the result of the nominating convention will take on an added interest.

A GUIDE FOR OTHERS.

Hon. W. H. Price, Provincial Treasurer, who is acting as Attorney-General in the absence of Hon. W. F. Nickle, has taken the same attitude in regard to the inquiry into the Balsam Lake tragedy as was expressed by The Examiner a few days ago.

He has issued orders that the investigation must be made as complete as possible in order that valuable information for the guidance of camp directors and for the protection of the general public may be obtained.

Probably in our summer activities on river or lake many of us have been guilty of taking chances, have been careless in our boating and bathing, and most people can take a personal warning from the war canoe accident.

From the circumstances surrounding the ill-fated expedition that started from Long Point for Cobconk much can be learned if the facts are brought out by careful investigation, and summer camps will be rendered safer and parents given a new peace of mind as a result of this information.

Shocking and appalling as it was, the Balsam Lake tragedy must be used as a warning and a guide in the conducting of other camps, and in following safety first lines at our summer resorts generally.

POLITICAL DEVELOPMENTS.

Although the Federal campaign is just beginning, there are dexelopments that are causing the political sharps to do considerable speculation.

There seemed to be a feeling when the election was first announced that the low-tariff parties, Liberals and Progressives, would early arrive at a working agreement which would reduce to a minimum the number of three-cornered contests, and thus materially cut down the list of minority candidates elected.

This feeling has been justified by the situation in Manitoba, where such an agreement has been apparently effected.

But a surprising development has arisen in Alberta where the Progressives have decided to enter into no alliance with either of the old parties, and to conduct the campaign according to their own plans.

This decision, coming simultaneously with a claim on the part of Hon. W. E. Raney, leader of the Farmers' party in Ontario, that to the Progressives must be given the credit for lowered automobile duties, goes to indicate that anything like a complete alliance between parties opposed to the Conservative tariff policy cannot be expected during the present campaign, and that the Progressives, far from being ready to submerge their identity in another party or to return to their old party allegiances, are confident of coming back to the new Parliament with a larger representation than before.

MOTOR VISITORS AND GOOD ROADS.

A statement just published from the Dominion Department of Customs, says The Ottawa Journal, shows that nearly two and a half million motor cars came into Canada last year from the United States for periods of from one day to six months, and a calculation is made that assuming an outlay of $5 daily per head for expenses and supplies in Canada, and an average of four persons to each car, and that each touring party stayed in Canada approximately the full time in the case of a one-day permit, and half the time of a permit for a longer period, the amount of money spent in this country by these visitors would reach $188,000,000. This is a pretty tidy sum, and it illustrates why it pays us to have good roads. Certainly without good roads we would not get the tourists.

An interesting point about the statistics is that there is no such inrush into Quebec as it is sometimes jestingly, and often more or less seriously, the custom to imagine. As a matter of fact there were more touring visitors to Ontario than into all the rest of Canada combined, and more than twice as many as into the Province of Quebec. It is estimated that the motor tourist outlay in Ontario alone last year was $98,000,000.

We have not yet been very extravagant in Canada in the matter of good roads. We have over 400,000 miles of roads, and of these only 8,374 miles are of first-class construction. They are much more active in the United States in this sort of matter than we are. The States of New York and California have, either of them, more first-class road than the Dominion of Canada; and perhaps some of the other States surpass us also. Do not let us be alarmed about expenditure for good roads.

WHO INVENTED DETOURS?

Trenton-Grafton detour has easily won its place as the most notorious within knowledge of motorists, according to the universal expression of opinion. Natives have known, they say, nothing worse than the track offered them by the Department of Highways as a substitute road during the height of the summer season—an old railroad bed with a light covering of earth or gravel. Visitors have sent back word of the detour to their motor leagues, and it is feared that the effect will be so deterrent as to cause many to change their plans as to vacation in the eastern part of the Province of Ontario.

Something should be done and done quickly to make movement over the detour something of a comfort. The situation should be brought to the attention of the Highways Department and representations made. Belleville, Trenton and Brighton can, with reason, head the protest and raise their voices through their Councils, while, undoubtedly, branches of the Motor League will co-operate and secure the help of the Ontario Motor League.

The question of detours makes one wonder why good substitute roads are not chosen. Eight or ten miles of bumping roads, muddy clay roads, do much harm to the fair name of the Province on which much money is being spent by the Province, publicity organizations, motor leagues and by municipalities. Who is going to take a motor trip along the best highways in the world if he knows there are ugly detours to face? Most people will forego the pleasure of the scenic routes to escape the inconvenience if nothing more of the detour. That word "detour" is really commencing to get on the nerves of motorists, especially in the busy season.—Belleville Ontario.

HOPEFUL SIGNS.

Will capital and labor in Britain learn from America that co-operation is better than conflict, and high wages and high production better than ca' canny and niggardliness? There are hopes that they will, and that the general strike, through the lessons it has taught, may yet prove to have been a blessing in disguise. Recently eight trade union members of the British engineering and kindred trades have been visiting cities in the United States on a mission of inquiry, sent by The Daily Mail. The aim of the mission was to ascertain the condition of American workmen and observe at first hand the factory methods which assisted in the creation of prosperity. From Detroit, for instance, Sir Percival Phillips, who accompanied the party, cabled home three facts which must have given both employer and employed cause for cogitation. Forty per cent. of the factory workers in the border city, they found, owned their own cars, 80 per cent. owned or were in the process of paying for their own homes, and the average minimum wage of a skilled worker in any kind of a job was one pound a day. Two Cambridge graduates, Bertram Austin and Francis Lloyd, have recently published a book there, entitled "The Secret of High Wages." It is a report, said to be an exhaustive and lucid one, upon the cause of American prosperity, and it is selling, as the English have it, "like hot cakes." These are signs of an effort to gain a new viewpoint. A new attitude is imperative. Britain must throw off her old traditions in face of the new and appalling conditions that confront her. It is surely not too much to expect that the common sense of the people will enable them to see that labor and capital must stand together or both suffer from the competition, based on such co-operation, of Germany and America.

That labor is a power in England that has come to stay appears to be undoubted. That labor as a whole has no revolutionary spirit was demonstrated by the general strike. For revolution is not passive resistance; it is the active application of force. The relations between labor and capital must necessarily differ from those relations in America. The background, the history, the accidental and contributory causes that have modified the development of these relationships in the two countries are different. But there is every reason to believe that British labor is possessed of a sense of responsibility. In fact, apart from those men whose views incline toward those of Russia, who are in a minority and whose power has been weakened by the result of the strike, labor leaders are respected by the bourgeoisie. When Hon. Arthur Henderson visited this city he produced a favorable impression upon men who had expected to see a violent revolutionary. And Mr. Henderson is typical of many, if not most, British labor leaders. The crying need of the hour in Britain is industrial reconstruction. In that reconstruction the aid of the trade unions is essential. Antagonism between the aims of capital and labor must be succeeded by friendly co-operation for the common weal. The coal strike is an impressive example of the evils of mutual antipathy that must be slowly enforcing a lesson upon the minds of the people. Neither mine owners nor miners will budge from the stand they each have taken, though the adverse trade balance of the country is increased by the purchase of coal from abroad and the loss of the exports of this mineral. The House of Lords has passed the bill which allows working hours in the mines to be extended from seven to eight, and in some districts the mines are again beginning to operate. But the real end of the strike is far from being in sight, and in the coal-mining areas mutual antagonism between owner and miner must long continue.

In other departments of Britain's industrial life the case is different. At the general walk-out the sympathizers with the miners broke labor contracts on wholesale scale. New ones had to be entered into, and in making these agreements the masters showed a generous spirit, though they inserted clauses designed to prevent a similar occurrence. There are signs of a tendency to raise voluntarily the standard of living. This is a healthy symptom. The folly of bitter antagonism instanced in the coal strike, the spreading knowledge of the American principle of high wages and high production, the grave economic burden under which the country labors, are factors which may combine to bring to happy fruition the seeds of co-operative action which appear to be germinating in British industry today.—Hamilton Spectator.

CHICAGO GRAINS

CHICAGO, July 29 (Canadian Press).—Although wheat available to fill July contracts here was much in request yesterday, other deliveries needed friends. Rain and cool temperature in the Canadian North-West tended to increase selling of July and September wheat. As a whole, the wheat market finished irregular at 3-4 net decline to one cent advance, with corn 1-8 to 1 5-8 down, oats at 1-8 off to ½ up, and provisions showing 5c to 27c loss.

Unlooked for backwardness of arrival of new crop wheat in Chicago led to evident anxiety on the part of traders who have only three more days to effect month-end settlement of contracts. Receipts here yesterday totalled 266 cars, against 403 cars a year ago, and talk was current that the peak of the movement in the south-west had been reached. Furthermore, the cash trading basis for wheat at the Gulf of Mexico was ½c higher, and at Kansas City was firm with a continued good milling demand reported.

On the other hand, price rallies in September and December wheat deliveries failed to last in the face of more favorable weather conditions north-west, despite some Canadian advices telling of crop damage. According to these reports, much of the Canadian crop had ripened prematurely. Latest unofficial estimates of the probable Canadian yield ranged from 320,000,000 bushels to 360,000,000 bushels. Notice was also taken of reports that harvesting of wheat in Europe is getting into full swing.

Rains in the West, together with indications of further beneficial moisture over the main portion of the corn belt turned the corn market downward at the last. Increased offerings weakened oats.

Provisions were depressed by larger receipts of hogs than had been expected.

"Mr. Smith and Miss Jones."

Here's a question in grammar that "stumped" the writer of a letter to a newspaper, and he passed it on to other readers for solution. It is one that will perplex not only the ordinary reader, but the man or woman learned in grammar.

"In this city Smith & Jones (not the real name, but serving the issue) are a prominent firm of real estate and insurance agents. Its members are Mr. Smith and Miss Jones.

"How should one address a business letter to this firm? 'Messrs.' is out of the question: 'Mr. Smith and Miss Jones' is not the firm name, and is clumsy anyhow. And how begin such a letter? 'Gentlemen' and 'Dear Sirs' are obviously incorrect: 'Dear Agents' is impossible, and 'Dear Friends' too familiar.

"Probably your readers may see a way out of this intricate proposition, but it has stumped the writer of this letter."

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE.

All letters must be signed by the writer, and must bear his address. A pen-name may be used for publication except in letters on political subjects, which must bear the writer's name for publication.

CHEMONG ROAD

To the Editor:

Dear Sir.—"Chemong Park Cottagers have awakened the Suburban-Area Commission." Several such bouquets have been showered upon the Commission recently. It has been intimated that the Government would withhold the Government subsidy if the Commission did not give ear to the Chemong Cottagers, further it has been hinted that the sitting member concedes such danger imminent. Such material may have been hatched, while sitting on the goods for sale in a store, but the eggs are only shells and all chickens still-born, for the sitting member is too courteous and shrewd to offer such insult to the Commission, who are a "body corporate with full jurisdiction to assume, extend and improve all suburban area roads."

The Commission represent the County, City, and Department of Highways, but no one body in particular, any more than the Chemong Cottagers run the Suburban-Area Commission.

The Cottagers had nothing to do with the time or manner in which the work is now being carried out. Such work was laid out by the Commission last April, but as before stated, truck breaks in the roads demanded first atetntion, and then the repairs for the gravel crusher did not reach the City for three weeks after the same were counted on, the same being no fault of the Commission.

The Commission are aware that one hundred tourists frequent other resorts in the County to one that frequents Chemong Park, and that the citizens of this city have five times as much money tied up in other County resorts as there is of the City's money, in Chemong Park, and those other citizens must not be ignored by discriminating in favor of Chemongers.

The main object in road improvement is to attract trade to the City which will have a tendency to enhance the value of property in the City and surrounding country, also to attract tourists with their coin this way.

The main object of the Chemong Cottagers seems to be a desire to have a road that would enable them to cover the said 5½ miles in from five to eight minutes, forgetting that the Commission are bound to and will provide a fairly good road for all, not forgetting Chemong Cottagers. Up to the present there has been more money expended on the 5½ miles referred to, for maintenance (not construction) than any other 5½ miles in the system. Chemong Road is wide and comparatively straight, whilst other roads have miles winding and not more than eleven foot roadway, and the Commission have as much interest in the traffic provision of such roads as they have in Chemong Road, but no more.

The Commision refrain from criticizing roads or streets under the bodies corporate, but there is one reference that can be made, namely: Chemong Cottagers howl only for any road or street that leads to the Chemong Park, not matter what befalls other roads or streets, which I presume is only human.

Respectfully yours,
ED. M. ELLIOTT,
Clerk.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

PROFITS.

By Dr. Frank Crane.

There is something essentially moral about profits.

For ages people who have made money have been held up to the contempt of the world. Making money has been supposed to require a low order of talent.

As a matter of fact the people who do the most good in the world are the money makers.

This has been demonstrated by the career of Mr. Henry Ford. He has taken the maxim of good business into every department of life and has shown that it results in the best and most permanent good.

Instead of doling money in charity, money that he has made any old way, honestly or dishonestly, he makes his money in such a way as to benefit others as well as himself in the making.

By this means he has redeemed the bankrupt Detroit, Toledo and Ironton Rail road and made it a profit-paying investment.

In the meanwhile all the employes of this road have been well paid and are satisfied.

He has found that paying men according to what men produce is not only good business, but it is good policy.

The principle of testing everything by profits has enabled him to get rid of a lot of old rubbish that has clung to our business dealings. He does not advance a man any more because of his seniority, but only because of his ability.

There are no grievance committees or other kinds of committees among his employes. Any man can go direct to headquarters and he knows it.

An increasing number of young high school graduates are going into his section gangs and they are no more afraid of manual labor because they find the laborer is treated right when his labor is tested fairly.

The old idea that a man can do only one kind of work has been disregarded. Whether he is a bricklayer or a machinist a man is supposed to do whatever he finds to do.

Altogether the plan of testing a business by its profits has not been found merciless or inhuman, but tends for the welfare of all concerned and eliminates a vast amount of bunk.

Donkey Balks at Piccadily Traffic Rules And Gets His Way, Going His Usual Route

LONDON, July 28—Traffic policeman here tackled their biggest problem yesterday, when they introduced the roundabout one-way system to Piccadilly Circus, not only one of the world's best known traffic centres but one of the most crowded.

Some drivers took a stand against the new regulations through ignorance, but a lone donkey refused to obey them willfully and stubbornly, and, needless to say, successfully. Accustomed to haul a daily load of cabbages through Piccadilly Circus, he refused to conform to the regulations and make a detour, which meant many extra steps for him.

His owner prodded and jerked him and a policeman shouted hoarsely. Drivers of vehicles, stacked up for blocks, and buses on half a dozen important streets muttered and swore that the new system had not effected any improvement.

The police saw it was no use to argue with the donkey and suspended the regulations for its benefit. Because of incidents such as this and because the electric signalling system broke down at the crucial moment, and because of the perplexity of drivers, the speeding up of traffic was not appreciable the first day, but its sponsors are confident that the system will work in Piccadilly Circus as successfully as it has at Trafalgar and Parliament Square. Under the system, vehicles are supposed to move in continuous circles, each one dropping out at the desired street.

MACKENZIE KING GIVES ADDRESS AT SAINT MARY'S

Replies to Mr. Meighen On the Tariff Question

PAID TRIBUTE

"Should Learn More About Sir Wilfred Laurier," Said Mr. King

ST. MARY'S, July 29 (Canadian Press).—Driven from a park by a heavy afternoon rain, the crowd which gathered yesterday to listen to Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King divided into two meetings, one in a local theatre and one in the Town Hall. Mr. King addressed meetings in both places, assisted by Hon. J. C. Elliott, former Minister of Labor, F. G. Sanderson, Liberal nominee for South Perth, and Thomas MacMillan, former member for South Huron. Mr. King paid a special tribute to Mrs. J. C. Gardiner, mother of the Premier of Saskatchewan, who was at one of the meetings.

Premier Meighen was attacked by Mr. King for making no practical endeavors to give effect to the tariff changes he was advocating on hustings. In the Maritimes he said that Mr. King had reduced the tariff on automobiles but not on workingmen's clothes. "Why didn't Mr. Meighen introduce an amendment to that effect?" asked Mr. King. "I would have supported him." It was all very well for the Premier to talk that way now, but there were men in his party who would never support any tariff reduction.

Premier Meighen had said that the Parliament of 1911 had been dissolved by Sir Wilfred Laurier just as the recent Parliament had been dissolved. "I wish he would talk less about Sir Wilfred and learn more about him," declared Mr. King, who pointed out that in 1911 the Senate was not sitting at the time of dissolution, but when both Commons and Senate are sitting, the representatives of the Crown should dissolve Parliament formally. "You cannot play fast and loose with the constitution without disturbing the whole country," said Mr. King.

What would the people of the Old Country do if one member of Parliament formed a temporary government and then advise the King to close the doors of Parliament and then ruled as a dictator ove domestic and foreign affairs for two weeks? "Are we in Canada going to take any less in the matter of government than the people of Great Britain?" asked the Liberal leader. "If we are going to be self-governing we must show the world that we prize the right of self-government."

POINCARE'S FINANCIAL BILL APPROVED OF IN PRINCIPLE

Separate Articles Met with Sterner Opposition As Heavy Tax

PUBLIC RESPONDING

Socialistic Restoration Plan Was Reduced As Opposed to Government

PARIS, July 29 (Canadian Press)—Ratification of the Washington and London debt agreements must wait until the Chamber of Deputies convenes in October. This Premier Poincare made clear to the Finance Committee of the Chamber when he appeared before that body yesterday to urge the passage of the financial bill.

M. Poincare gave no inkling as to whether he favored or opposed the accords, but said that the financial bill was the more important, and that Parliament lacked time to pen a long discussion, which undoubtedly would follow the introduction of the ratification bills.

The financial bill was approved in principle yesterday by the Finance Committee, 20 to 12, and 6 absentions. The separate articles, however, met with sterner opposition, one of them, Number 4, dealing with the tax on railroad passenger and freight rates, being defeated.

This only gave the Premier an opportunity to show what a strong hold he has on the deputies, when after he had discussed the matter briefly before the committee, the members re-considered their decision and adopted the articles, 18 to 12.

The committee reached Article 7, when adjournment was taken until a later hour, and it is expected that the committee's report will be ready to submit to the Chamber Friday.

The franc slumped throughout the day despite the fact that the French parliament had expessed its confidence in the government and the public was responding generously to the Premier's appeal for advance payments on the 1926 taxes. Opening at 39.89 to the dollar and 194 sterling, as compared with Tuesday's closing price of 40.01 and 196.75, the franc fell steadily until noon, when it was quoted at 41.78 and 203. The official closing was 42.09 to the dollar and 205 sterling.

Paris exchange brokers assert that there had been considerable sales of French francs in the foreign markets.

The tax collectors in Paris report over 4,000,000 francs received in the past two days in payments for the 1926 taxes, although the sheets have not yet been sent out. The suburbs also send encouraging news as to the response of the taxpayers to the Premier's plea.

M. Poincare spent nearly two hours before the finance committee impressing upon the members the necessity of speeding up their work. He asked the deputies to forego for the time being any personal amendment they might have in mind, and keep their suggestions for the 1927 budget. The committee responded nobly and voted seven articles in the hour after the Premier's departure.

The Socialists' restoration plan, which M. Blum, the Socialist leader insisted upon introducing, was thrown out, as opposed to that of the government. Socialist members of the committee voted against the government throughout, but were always in the minority. M. Poincare described the Socialist plan as sponsoring inflation and a capital levy.

Inland Revenue Officers Uncover Elaborate Still

WINNIPEG, Man., July 29.—(Canadian Press).—A still, described by morality and Inland Revenue officers as one of the most elaborate private stills in Canada, was discovered yesterday on the premises of Harold McDougall here in the residential section. It was the fourth large still to be discovered in Winnipeg and district during the past week. In completeness it outclasses all others and had a capacity of 160 gallons. Ten condensers and unique arrangements for the perfect distillation of liquor featured the layout.

Thirty-six barrels of mash and a 44-gallon barrel of spirits were also seized.

McDougall, who was in bed when the raid was made, admitted ownership of the still, and was formally charged with keeping a still and mash for manufacture of spirits without a license. He pleaded guilty in the police court yesterday, and was granted a week's remand. He is said to be a native of Nova Scotia.

King Eats Dark Bread To Help Belgian Franc

BRUSSELS, July 28.—King Albert and Queen Elizabeth eat dark bread—near war bread—as part of the stringent measures of economy which have been put into effect in Belgium to stem the decline of the Belgian franc. The same bread is now being eaten in mansions on the Avenue Louise in Brussels and the most modest hamlet in Flanders.

The savings in bread alone is estimated at 10,000,000 francs a month and when the new crops are harvested will amount to about 40,000,000 francs. Public buildings, cafes, restaurants and dance halls will operate on a restricted schedule under the newly promulgated regulations.

The export of coal and coke has been limited and a maximum price fixed. A tax of 10 francs daily on foreign-owned automobiles and a supertax on the hotels of foreigners have been imposed.

GUM-DIPPING
-the Extra Process for Extra Miles!

Section of Firestone Gum-Dipping Units With One Tower Cut Away to Show Interior

Here's Where Tire Economy Starts

One of the outstanding developments by Firestone Research Engineers is the process of dipping the cords in a rubber solution which impregnates and insulates every fiber of every cord with rubber. This adds strength to the cords and reduces to a minimum internal friction and heat so destructive to tire life.

The Gum-Dipping of the cords made it possible for Firestone to develop the Full-Size Balloon Tire which gave car owners not only comfort and safety but a definite dollars-and-cents saving in increased mileage.

In the battle of tires on race tracks—in the day-in and day-out service of the largest truck, bus and taxicab fleets—on the cars of hundreds of thousands of motorists everywhere—Gum-Dipping has demonstrated its supremacy in greater economy, safety and comfort.

Do not deny yourself these advantages. Equip with Firestone Full-Size Gum-Dipped Balloons. They are built as only Firestone can build them, will perform as only Gum-Dipped Tires can perform. See the nearest Firestone dealer.

CROP REPORTS

Agricultural Representatives Comment On Condition of Crops

The following extracts are from weekly reports of Agricultural Representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

CARLETON—Haying has been the order of the day for the past week or ten days. Most of the alfalfa s cut and reports ndcate an average crop. The general hay crop is uneven there being a number of real good fields and on the other hand a number of poor fields. Corn which for two weeks sat still has this week come right along. Oats on the whole are a poor crop in the country. They do not seem to be making the growth that the other spring sown grains are. On our heavier lands the oat crop is short, a poor colour and very uneven.

DUFERIN—Owing to the apparent disappointment with the early crops, there appears to have been a larger acreage of turnips and rape sown than usual. The weather of the past ten days has been ideal for the potato crop as it appears to be making remarkable growth at present.

DURHAM—Alsike promised to give a good yield of seed. Many excellent fields have been noted during the past two weeks. The acreage may not be so high as usual. Yields may be above the average. Fall wheat that looked rather poor in the spring has developed remarkably well and will give a fair yield. There is, generaly speaking, a good crop of hay. Many silos have been filled with sweet clover.

ESSEX—Most of wheat is out. Oats are ripening fast and a few fields are cut. Peas still coming in to the canneries but crop about over. Tobacco crop shows indications of being above the average. Corn Borers are making their appearance.

FRONTENAC—A few raspberries have made their appearance, and growers are asking 30c for reds and 25c for purples. Huckleberries are selling for 20 to 25c a quart.

HALDIMAND—The hay harvest is completed. The season was never more favorable for making first-class alfalfa hay from the first cutting, and as a result most farmers have large quantities of quality hay stored in their barns. Alsike and blue grass harvest is on and will be completed by the end of next week.

HALTON—Farmers have commenced the cutting of fall wheat, it is certain, an excellent crop in the county. Many sod fields have been plowed in preparation for summer fallow and wheat.

HASTINGS—What at first appeared to be a very poor year with respect to farm crops in this county has proven itself to be a banner year. With the exception of corn all crops are fully up to the average. Grain above the average with prospects of a bumper potato and root crop. A few farmers have commenced this year to use sweet clover as an ensilage in place of corn.

KENT—The majority of wheat is harvested and threshing in the field has commenced. The average yield will be lower than that of last year although there is an occasional field which will run up to the fifty bushel mark. Sugar beets, tobacco and beans are all in a healthy condition yet need moisture to make any rapid growth.

LAMBTON—The green pea harvest for the canning factories has been exceptionally good. The yield of peas has been above the average. Some fall wheat and barley have been cut in the south of the county.

LINCOLN— Demand continues fairly good for potatoes at $2.25 to $2.50 per bushel. Sweet cherries are holding strong at $1.00 and 75c, sours 40c and 60c. Strawberries limited in quantity at 25c to 35c per box. Raspberries 35c. Tomatoes are selling at 20c per pound.

OXFORD—The outstanding features of the crop situation in the past week are, first, the wonderful improvement which has taken place in the corn crop during the last ten days. Growth has been rapid with plenty of extreme heat. Fall Wheat is turning fast and harvesting will be starting next week. Most of the hay crop has gone under cover without any damage from rain.

SWIMMING CONTEST

Average Age of Those Who Finish Swim Is Thirteen.

TORONTO, Ont., July 29—(Canadian Press).—It is a remarkable fact that of the 70 boys and men who competed in the Humber River swim of two miles, the average age of the 23 who finished the course is 16 years. Ten of the "weaker" sex assayed the trip and seven finished, thus having a much better percentage than the male contestants. The swimmers were bothered by a high wind and cold water. The average age of the girls who finished is 13 years. Of the senior girls who competed, only one, Lily Dibble, finished. There is no question that the various local swimming clubs are doing most commendable work among the youngsters, writes a local sporting editor.

CEMETERY AT DOURO CHURCH IS WELL KEPT

Co-operation of All Concerned Has Resulted in Place of Beauty.

SOME FINE STONES

Pioneers of the Township Are Recalled by Names on Monuments.

DOURO, July 29.—Much has been said and written in recent years about the neglect of rural cemeteries. To such an extent had the evil grown that the provincial government was compelled to pass a statute making it compulsory for municipalities to care for the cemeteries within their limits.

But years before the compulsory legislation St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro, was well kept, and a place of beauty.

A devoted pastor, a people willing to co-operate, and a sexton, Mr. Maurice Meade, with taste much greater than is usually found among rural men, and who is an expert in the making of concrete, and Douro has a cemetery that will bear comparison with any rural burial place in Canada.

Neatly fenced with woven wire fence with white posts, bordered on the west and north with a dense border of spruce, which breaks the cold north-west winds, with a gently rolling green, with many fine monuments and with a splendid mortuary vault, Gods acre is a thing of beauty.

All the eastern portion comprising probably three-quarters of the whole, is the "new" section of the cemetery, it being added several years ago. The western end comprises what is called the "old" part and was until recent years an eyesore with broken or leaning monuments, sunken graves and uneven ground. This portion has been improved till it compares favorably with the other portion.

A visit to a cemetery usually induces a certain feeling of melancholy, more especially to one where many of ones acquaintances and friends are buried.

In the older section some of the verses full of unconscious humor but most are full of pathos.

Following are some of those noted:

Amiable and beloved husband farewell. Thy years were few but thy virtues were many. They are recorded not on this perishing stone but in the Book of Life and in the hearts of thy afflicted friends.

A lamb and a cross are carved on this stone and the work is good.

Her sweet fair form has faded now
Her cheeks have lost their roses,
Her guileless heart so free from sin
In Heaven now reposes.
On this stone is carved a beautiful cross bearing the symbol—I.H.S.

O cruel death who could not spare
A tender husband and friend sincere,
Left me, his widow and children behind
In this desert of America where no such friend I could find.
Respect to thy memory how sacred the trust
Hath raised this pale marble an emblem of dust,
But Jesus hath called us in faith to arise
In hopes to rejoin thee again in the skies.
On this stone is a very fine carving, a wreath enclosing a cross.

A light is from our household gone
A voice we loved is stilled
A place is vacant at our hearth
Which never can be filled

This is a solemn place, my friends,
Where Eternity begins and where time ends.

A son beloved, a brother most dear
A friend esteemed reposes here
When Hope survives beyond the tomb
A brighter world and sweeter home.
On this marble is carved a bouquet of a full-blown rose, a large bud and leaves. The carving is splendid.

In death's cold arms lies sleeping here
A tender parent, a companion dear,
In love she lived, in peace she died
Her life was asked, but God denied.
There is a wonderful wreath enclosing a cross on this tombstone.

He died ere his expanding soul
Had ever burnt with wrong desires
Had ever spurned at Heaven's control
Or ever quenched its sacred fires.
On this stone are carved two kneeling angels looking upwards at a cross in the centre. The carving is admirable.

Friends go home, shed not tears
Here I lie till Christ appears
Sweetly sleep my precious daughter
Holy angels guard thy bed
Gently rest in Jesus darling,
Till he calls thee from the dead.
A cross, exceedingly well carved, is near the top of this one.

Young people all as you pass by
O think me for you must die
Repent in time, make no delay
In my prime I was called away.
On this is carved a wreath enclosing an open Bible and a cross. The work is excellent.

Yes you have sunk away to rest
The scene is closed, life's toils are o'er
Your tears have all been wiped away
An we will meet you on earth no more.

Tender parents, loving friends,
They have gone and left us here below

But soon must we that Voice attend
That called them from this world of woe.
A beautiful pair of clasped hands and a large flower are carved on this slab of marble.

On one is cut this beautiful verse, which is a translation of an extract from the Missal of Mass book:
O faithful cross, o noblest tree
In all our woods there's none like thee
No earthly groves, no shady bowers,
Produce such leaves, such fruit, such flowers.
On this slab is carved a cross, a chalice, a tree and a lamb, and the work is well done indeed, considering the tools that would be available so long ago.

Stop! passer-by, behold man's fate
Think on Eternity, here is the gate.
View this cold bed and then with firm faith
Pray for the souls of each of those beneath.
For ....., his daughter, both of whom
Are sleeping here beneath this grassy tomb.
On this are carved a cross and reclining lamb looking upwards to the cross.

Deep sorrow now pervades each heart
And grief our bosoms swell;
A father from our midst departs
In that new home to dwell.
On this is carved an open Bible.

My glass is run, my grave you see
Prepare in time to follow me,
So friends go home, shed no more tears
For here I lie till Christ appears.
On this stone there is cut a wreath of leaves enclosing a cross and a Bible.

On many stones a weeping willow tree—symbol of mourning—is carved

---

The winter of trouble is past
The storms of affliction are o'er,
Her struggles are ended at last
And sorrow and death are no more
On this slab is depicted a cross standing on a pillar.

Beneath this heap of rubbish
Lies an honest hearted brother,
I hope he's now above the skies
In the arms of his mother.
On this the carving is a cross and at the foot a sleeping lamb.

The finest piece of work in the cemetery is on a stone in one of the plots enclosed by a chain fence and in which members of the Smith family are interred. The stone is made of limestone, which is a pity as limestone does not withstand the ravages of time. A bust of the Saviour, about 12 inches by 8 inches, is carved, and the work is wonderful. Efforts are being made to save this monument, as it is a work of art. It has also raised carvings on the sloping sides of the Cross.

On one tombstone a finger pointing Heavenwards is cut in the marble, and the words "Gone Home are cut beneath.

Most of the deaths recorded are from 1850 onwards, but one noticed bore the date, January 10, 1824—a year and a half before the Robinson immigration which raises a problem, How came thi. body here?

Some of the names mentioned, of whom no one bears the name who is now a resident are: Nathaniel Reid, Culliton, Gorman, Kelly, Boyd, Driscoll, Gedley, Hannam, Cuffe, Gilroy, Kenneally, Flood, Duigan, Logan, Horan, Fahey, Clancy, O'Donnell, McCue, McMullin, etc.

An unique monument marks the resting place of a priest. It is a slab of marble about six feet by three and two or three inches thick lying flat and supported about a foot above the ground by six marble pillars.

Local families who have monuments erected to their dead in the "new" portion are: Regan, Kavanagh, Hogan, Moher, Whibbs, Ryan, Sweeney, McGuire, Shea, Allen, Leahy, O'Leary, Torpey, O'Grady, O'Donnell (Peterborough residents), O'Grady, Allen, Murphy (Peterborough residents), Fitzgerald, McCann, McCliggott, O'Leary, Fitzgerald, Moher, O'Brien, O'Connor, Towns, Leahy, Allen, Fitzgerald, Collins, Dwyer, Fitzgerald, Collins, Foley, Walsh, Leahy, Devlin, Delaney, Devlin, O'Toole, Casey, Nolan, Sullivan, O'Leary, Coughlin, O'Brien, Condon, Leahy, Fitzgerald, Leahy, Harrigan, Hayes, McManus, McMurray, Condon, McManus, Maloney (Peterborough residents), Tobin and Condon.

A wonderfully fine monument recently erected stands upwards of 12 feet high including the base. It stands on a seven foot square foundation. It takes the form of a Celtic cross, seven feet eight inches in height, hand hammered and beautifully carved. The granite is Rock-of-Ages from Barre, Vermont. It is a beautiful piece of work and shows up splendidly, being so high.

Charges for purchase and upkeep of plots are extremely reasonable. To purchase a plot costs only ten dollars, and the yearly tax for care is one dollar for full plots and fifty cents for half plots. In some cases plot owners are living far distant and charitable donations have to make up for the forgetfulness of the absent ones.

Probably nine-nine per cent of those interred are of Irish descent. In the "old "portion one reads "Born in Tipperary, Ireland"; "Born in Cork, Ireland," etc.

One can spend a few hours quite profitably in this cemetery which has so much of historic interest. Besides "It is a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead, etc."

Many thoughts come to one in such a cemetery as this, where the pioneers and forefathers of the township lie buried. What brave hearts those people had. They left their kindred in the "Green Isle" and came to this new land, full of dangers, trials and privations. What heart-burnings and loneliness they must have felt at times. The tomb-stones tell in some cases of tragedy. A mother or father called by death and the partner left with little children in a strang land. But oh. the kindness, the goodness of those poor-exiles to each other! Of them it, too, could be said as the pagans said of the early Christians, "See how these people love one another." Always among pioneers there is kindness and self-sacrifice. But mostly they were happy in their toil, for were they not hewing and building homes for their children and developing a rich, new country? All honor to the brave men and women who lie in Douro and other cemeteries in this new land. They lacked luxuries, education and wealth, but still they were happy in their simple way. The beautiful words of Gray's great Elegy, written in a country churchyard, come to mind. So apt are they here:

Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire;
Hands that the rod of Empire might have swayed
Or wak'd to esctasy the living lyre.
But knowledge to their eyes her ample page
Rich with the spoils of time did ne'er unroll;
Chill Penury repress'd their noble rage
And froze the genial current of the soul.

Some village Hampden, that, with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withstood;
Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest;
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.
Their lot forbade: nor circumscribed alone
Their growing virtues but their crimes confin'd,

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learned to stray
Along the cool sequestered vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

Horse meat is very common among the poor of Paris.

View this cold bed and then with firm faith
Pray for the souls of each of those beneath.
For ....., his daughter, both of whom
Are sleeping here beneath this grassy tomb.
On this are carved a cross and reclining lamb looking upwards to the cross.

Deep sorrow now pervades each heart
And grief our bosoms swell;
A father from our midst departs
In that new home to dwell.
On this is carved an open Bible.

My glass is run, my grave you see
Prepare in time to follow me,
So friends go home, shed no more tears
For here I lie till Christ appears.
On this stone there is cut a wreath of leaves enclosing a cross and a Bible.

On many stones a weeping willow tree—symbol of mourning—is carved

---

The winter of trouble is past
The storms of affliction are o'er,
Her struggles are ended at last
And sorrow and death are no more
On this slab is depicted a cross standing on a pillar.

Beneath this heap of rubbish
Lies an honest hearted brother,
I hope he's now above the skies
In the arms of his mother.
On this the carving is a cross and at the foot a sleeping lamb.

The finest piece of work in the cemetery is on a stone in one of the plots enclosed by a chain fence and in which members of the Smith family are interred. The stone is made of limestone, which is a pity as limestone does not withstand the ravages of time. A bust of the Saviour, about 12 inches by 8 inches, is carved, and the work is wonderful. Efforts are being made to save this monument, as it is a work of art. It has also raised carvings on the sloping sides of the Cross.

On one tombstone a finger pointing Heavenwards is cut in the marble, and the words "Gone Home are cut beneath.

Most of the deaths recorded are from 1850 onwards, but one noticed bore the date, January 10, 1824—a year and a half before the Robinson immigration which raises a problem, How came thi body here?

Some of the names mentioned, of whom no one bears the name who is now a resident are: Nathaniel Reid, Culliton, Gorman, Kelly, Boyd, Driscoll, Gedley, Hannam, Cuffe, Gilroy, Kenneally, Flood, Duigan, Logan, Horan, Fahey, Clancy, O'Donnell, McCue, McMullin, etc.

An unique monument marks the resting place of a priest. It is a slab of marble about six feet by three and two or three inches thick lying flat and supported about a foot above the ground by six marble pillars.

Local families who have monuments erected to their dead in the "new" portion are: Regan, Kavanagh, Hogan, Moher, Whibbs, Ryan, Sweeney, McGuire, Shea, Allen, Leahy, O'Leary, Torpey, O'Grady, O'Donnell (Peterborough residents), O'Grady, Allen, Murphy (Peterborough residents), Fitzgerald, McCann, McCliggott, O'Leary, Fitzgerald, Moher, O'Brien, O'Connor, Towns, Leahy, Allen, Fitzgerald, Collins, Dwyer, Fitzgerald, Collins, Foley, Walsh, Leahy, Devlin, Delaney, Devlin, O'Toole, Casey, Nolan, Sullivan, O'Leary, Coughlin, O'Brien, Condon, Leahy, Fitzgerald, Leahy, Harrigan, Hayes, McManus, McMurray, Condon, McManus, Maloney (Peterborough residents), Tobin and Condon.

A wonderfully fine monument recently erected stands upwards of 12 feet high including the base. It stands on a seven foot square foundation. It takes the form of a Celtic cross, seven feet eight inches in height, hand hammered and beautifully carved. The granite is Rock-of-Ages from Barre, Vermont. It is a beautiful piece of work and shows up splendidly, being so high.

Charges for purchase and upkeep of plots are extremely reasonable. To purchase a plot costs only ten dollars, and the yearly tax for care is one dollar for full plots and fifty cents for half plots. In some cases plot owners are living far distant and charitable donations have to make up for the forgetfulness of the absent ones.

Probably nine-nine per cent of those interred are of Irish descent. In the "old "portion one reads "Born in Tipperary, Ireland"; "Born in Cork, Ireland," etc.

One can spend a few hours quite profitably in this cemetery which has so much of historic interest. Besides "It is a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead, etc."

Many thoughts come to one in such a cemetery as this, where the pioneers and forefathers of the township lie buried. What brave hearts those people had. They left their kindred in the "Green Isle" and came to this new land, full of dangers, trials and privations. What heart-burnings and loneliness they must have felt at times. The tomb-stones tell in some cases of tragedy. A mother or father called by death and the partner left with little children in a strang land. But oh. the kindness, the goodness of those poor exiles to each other! Of them it, too, could be said as the pagans said of the early Christians, "See how these people love one another." Always among pioneers there is kindness and self-sacrifice. But mostly they were happy in their toil, for were they not hewing and building homes for their children and developing a rich, new country? All honor to the brave men and women who lie in Douro and other cemeteries in this new land. They lacked luxuries, education and wealth, but still they were happy in their simple way. The beautiful words of Gray's great Elegy, written in a country churchyard, come to mind. So apt are they here:

Some heart once pregnant with celestial fire;
Hands that the rod of Empire might have swayed
Or wak'd to ecstasy the living lyre.
But knowledge to their eyes her ample page
Rich with the spoils of time did ne'er unroll;
Chill Penury repress'd their noble rage
And froze the genial current of the soul.

Some village Hampden, that, with dauntless breast
The little tyrant of his fields withstood;
Some mute, inglorious Milton here may rest;
Some Cromwell guiltless of his country's blood.
Their lot forbade: nor circumscribed alone
Their growing virtues but their crimes confin'd,

Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
Their sober wishes never learned to stray
Along the cool sequestered vale of life
They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

Horse meat is very common among the poor of Paris.

CUSTOMS AND TARIFF BRACKETED ALONG WITH STABLE GOVERNMENT

had the Secretary of the Privy Council write a reply stating that due consideration would be given to their protest. Due consideration, declared Dr. Manion, meant very little consideration, this being merely a formal way of shelving the question. So that Mr. King knew one year and eight months before he took any action that the Customs Department was being steadily debauched. He had been begged to appoint a Royal Commission or an Investigation Commission to probe the matter. He did get the Duncan report but he did nothing with it until Stevens forced him to take some action to stop the degradation of that Department. Further it had been proved that in three years the Government had lost to the country 52 millions in the Maritimes through failure to collect excise. The Dominion distilleries, of which a Liberal ex-M. P., were the director or the President, was still owing the excise over $700,000 which the present Government was going after. He asked the gathering if they believed the King Government could have been relied upon to collect this from one of their friends.

No Personal Motives

George Boivin, the former Minister of Customs had declared that the Conservatives were out to persecute him. As a proof that this was not so, Dr Manion mentioned that when the Conservatives were called upon to appoint a French Deputy Speaker and having no French members in their ranks they appointed Mr. Boivin to this position which, he reminded them was that since held by Hon. G. N. Gordon. This he thought showed clearly that the Conservatives were not actuated by any motives against Mr. Boivin beyond his failure to administer his department. Dr. Manion cited the instance of the barge Trembley, the liquor aboard which was seized and sold at 36 cents per gallon. He did not suppose the audience knew much about the price of whisky, but the price at which the liquor should have been sold was $10.50 per gallon. Evidence had been adduced about the steamer Margaret that was particularly unsavoury. There were exhibits in the Duncan report that were unspeakably filthy. King had declared that this evidence had not been published. The reason for that, said Dr. Manion, was that this evidence was unpublishable, if he might use that word. The steamer Margaret was one of the things that would be investigated if the Conservatives were returned to power. The activities of bootleggers, smugglers, the debaucheries and the filth that had been revealed placed the whole Dominion on trial. It was not so much King that was on trial or the Customs, but it was the people of Canada who were on their trial, and the verdict on them would be decided when they had passed their verdict on the conditions that had been disclosed. Before he discussed what he believed were the three real issues in this election, he wanted to talk on what had happened at the last two days of Parliament in June. On Friday, June 25 the report of the Customs committee was brought in with an amendment of censure moved by H. H. Stevens. Mr. King had declared that the Stevens amendment contained no censure. Mr. Manion ridiculed this suggestion. Then Mr. Woodsworth, who was one of those Independents on whom Mr. King could always depend brought it a sub-amendment which sought to delete the part that contained a censure of the Government. This was defeated by 117 votes to 115. Then Mr. Fansher moved to add part of the Woodsworth sub-amendment to the Stevens proposal, but this was also defeated by two votes. Then the government was once more beaten on a motion to adjourn. Three times they were beaten during one sitting and finally when all the members were tired of the long sitting the Government succeeded in carrying a motion to adjourn.

Request for Dissolution

Then, when Mr. King knew that he was about to be beaten and disgraced, he went to the Governor-General and proposed dissolution, not in the future as he had since claimed, but it was to be immediate. The Governor-General remembered about the other dissolution, and how he had permitted Mr. King, although in a minority in the House to bring in a King's Speech which promised to carry out legislation that would please the Progressives. The Governor-General merely desired to be fair. But when Mr. King approached him for a dissolution, he took all these things into mind, and knowing that King had been beaten three times and was likely to be under a vote of censure, he felt, and felt rightly, that it was not right to dissolve parliament without giving Mr. Meighen an opportunity to govern. Anyone who remembers Byng of Vimy who carried the Canadian boys to immortality over Vimy Ridge, who knew Byng and who knew King would never believe that the Governor-General would do anything to injure Canada.

Meighen's Decision.

They had to remember that Mr. Meighen could have asked for an adjournment for six weeks to enable him to form his Cabinet. But they all knew that in ordinary circumstances Parliament would have been prorogued within two days. But Mr. Meighen decided that he would form a temporary government and appoint acting ministers without portfolio, that was ministers without salary. Mr. Meighen, however, had to be sworn in as Premier and had to resign his seat in the House, leaving to the acting ministers the work of carrying out the administration. And they would have carried it out if Mr. King had not blocked them.

Case in 1873

In 1873 Sir John A. MacDonald went out of office through a scandal involving some of his party in the misappropriation of public money. He resigned, but he came back to the House and stated that he had resigned but that he wished to advise the honorable gentleman who had become Prime Minister to confer with him as to the carrying on of the business of the House. That was a patriotic attitude to assume. It would have been patriotic for Mr. King to have done so, but it was too much to expect Mr. King to be patriotic. He proceeded to raise a constitutional issue for the purpose of covering the revelations of the Customs scandal. Mr. Rinfret moved a motion to delete the clauses of censure in the report of the Customs committee. The Conservatives beat that by twelve votes. They defeated another amendment, moved by Mr. Garland, and on a motion that the committee rise, the Conservatives were a third time victorious by twenty-one votes, the largest majority recorded in that session of the House. These votes justified the formation of the Meighen government. They showed they were prepared to carry on. They got a dissolution because they had carried on the government.

The only thing that worried Mr. King was the question of the control of the electoral machinery. It was too had that he found himself without Baldy Robb and Moses Aziz. Robb had acted as a crook and had stolen votes from the Conservatives by burning, or at least destroying, ballots cast for the Conservative candidate. He was now serving a term in the penitentiary, as was also Moses Aziz. On July 1 Mr. Lapointe discussed the constitutional question and Mr. King made a veiled attack on the Governor-General.

Robb Amendment.

The Robb amendment which dealt with a question of constitution was carried by one vote. It was there that Bird voted in spite of the fact that he was paired with Kennedy who intended to support the Conservatives. Bird voted and thereby perpetrated as dishonorable an act as was known in Parliament at any time. Then he rose when the vote could not be changed and declared that he had voted inadvertently. Knowing of course that his vote would probably be a casting vote, he asked us to believe that this vote was recorded accidently.

Then, Mr. Meighen was not in the House. If he had been in the House and Bird had done as he should have done the Conservatives would have won. The Conservatives won by all standards of faith and honor.

Position As In 1911.

He did not believe many people would be carried away by King's declaration that Mr. Meighen had slammed the door in the face of Parliament. The position was the same as in 1911 when Sir Wilfred Laurier procured a dissolution while the House was still sitting, and when a man was actually half-way through a speech. All King's talk of slamming the door on Parliament and the people was all political humbug at which he was the best in Canada. He spoke of defending the liberties of Canada. Surely Canada was in a sorry state when it depended on Mackenzie King for its defence. Did anyone in the hall know of any curtailment of liberties in Peterborough or in the whole Dominion? The whole thing was an attempt to dodge the blame for the horrible conditions revealed by the Customs probe.

In 1925 Mr. King preached national unity, while at the same time he told the electors in Quebec that Mr. Meighen was coming to tear their children from their mothers' breasts in order to fight the Turks. He also spoke of reforming the Senate, and, as the speaker had been reminded by someone on the platform, Mr. King had elevated Jacques Bureau. Then he had been fighting the battles of constitutional rights not only of Canada but of the whole Empire. Did they find any indications of apprehension in England that the constitution was in danger from the dissolution granted to Mr. Meighen? They would find that Liberal as well as Conservative papers in the Old Country maintained that the constitution was in no danger.

Contrasts Leaders.

Dr. Manion drew a contrast between the respective attitudes of Mr. King and Mr. Meighen after a defeat at the polls. Mr. Meighen in 1921 was defeated at Portage La Prairie. He came to Ontario and got a safe seat. But at the last election he went back to Portage La Prairie and faced his own people again, stating that he wished to be elected there or not at all. He got elected. As for Mr. King, he ran in North York and was defeated. He went to Prince Albert to find a seat there. Dr. Manion stated that he meant no disrespect to the electors there, but he had seen the lists, and about 90 per cent of the names on some of those lists not in Prince Albert itself but in surrounding districts were names that he could not pronounce. He was not casting any discredit on these people but they were new Canadians, he said, he liked that term, but they were people who did not know our customs and problems. If Mr. King had any sporting spirit he would have contested this election in North York, but instead of that he had gone back to Prince Albert.

Three Real Issues.

There were three real issues in this election; the constitution was not one of them. Talk that criticized the Governor-General's action merely led one up the blind alley of political humbug. The real issues were, first, Customs; second, the need of a stable government; third, the need of a stable tariff. A vote for King condoned all the Customs scandals, and not only condoned them but approved of them with all their debauchery, their filth and the hundreds of millions of dollars lost to the business of the country and the tens, aye the scores, of millions lost to the Treasury. The people, if true to themselves and to this Canada of theirs, must vote against King and against his Government's method of administering the Customs Department. As to the need of a stable government, he quoted the example of France which he said, though prosperous industrially, was in a state of chaos politically as a result of the group system in Parliament. It was necessary to give one party a majority over all other groups. The Conservatives had 116 members in the last Parliament. If they had 130 they could form a stable government. They needed fourteen more members and they would get them. Mr. King needed 29, more than twice the number of Conservatives required. Where was he going to get them? What had he done? He talked of the Robb budget calling it a people's budget. It benefited some people. It benefited the man who had not a car but who wanted one, but the man who was turning in an old car as part payment of a new one lost more as a result of the rebates on the old one than he gained on the new car. As to the reductions in the income tax, Dr. Manion stated that in answer to a question he had learned that about 225,000 people paid income tax, some of them were benefited by the reduction, but this was a small proportion. The great mass of the people did not pay income tax and did not purpose buying cars. What they got was a reduction of one cent on postage once in a while. King had said that he would have made additional reductions—why did he not do it in 1925?

The third necessity was that of a stable tariff. He did not advocate a high tariff but a stable tariff, sufficient to protect the industry of Canada and to prevent the exodus which was still going on of a hundred thousand of the best citizens of the Dominion every year. During the four years' depression the country had lost half a million citizens. The United States was the highest protected country in the world and it was the most prosperous. All the civilized countries except Britain were raising their tariff barriers. France had built up a high tariff wall and at the present moment she could not get enough men to fill all the jobs, while across the Channel there were one million six hundred thousand idle besides the million miners on strike. He did not want his sons to cease to become Canadians, but if they were to remain in their own country they would have to find work. A man could not live on patriotism alone. The resources of Canada were worth millions. There was a great future before it, and with a stable tariff and a strong administration under Mr. Meighen and the Conservatives there would be a great boom in the trade and development of the Dominion.

Mrs. Fallis.

"It seems almost like yesterday since I last spoke to you from this platform in the interests of the Conservative party," said the speaker.

Those of you who were present will remember Mackenzie King's speech where he threatened to vanquish the Tory party, reform the Senate, and promised to break up the Atlantic shipping combine. What have they accomplished? asked the speaker. Mackenzie King made no mention of these things in his opening speech of the present campaign, declared Mrs. Fallis, but if you have read that speech you will have seen that the constitutional issue is threatening the Empire, that the country is threatened with anarchy, that the throne of England is hanging in the balance because Mr. Meighen has been granted dissolution. "You cannot blame Mackenzie King for having that viewpoint—he was always concerned about the safety of the Empire—in fact during 1916 he could not bear the strain and left for the United States, said the speaker.

If Baron Byng and Mr. Meighen have done an unconstitutional act the British people would be up in arms about it, but as a matter of fact they approve of it. The last election the Conservatives had a majority but Mackenzie King assured the Governor-General he could carry on, said the speaker. "Did you hear any criticism of the Governor-General from the Conservatives for his action at that time?" asked Mrs. Fallis. The average Canadian does not need to have any constitutional expert to tell him whether Baron Byng was right or wrong, she declared. There were many public questions that presented good arguments for both sides but such was not the case with the Customs investigation. Not even the staunchest Liberal could find a good word for the way in which the affairs fo the department were administered. Even Miss McPhail supported the vote of censure that was passed on the King government, she said. It had been proven that Premier King knew all about the bribery and corruption that was going on, she declared.

"While you and I were paying into the treasury of the Dominion, the Mackenzie King administration was taking from it." During 1920, the Customs department collected over 62 per cent. of all the revenue collected in Canada. This department was the very centre of finance, and yet the King government had not time to look after this all important question, she said. In face of the revelations that came out the late Minister of Customs speaking at a recent Liberal convention, stated that his department had at all times been above reproach, said Mrs. Fallis. What would they consider bad enough for them to merit a vote of censure? she asked. The speaker declared that if the honor of Parliament had been sullied it was done by Mackenzie King himself. The Liberal leaders have started this campaign in a spirit of bitterness, but they have a lot to contend with. They have the vote of censure, the greatest Liberal paper in Canada, "The Globe," was not supporting them, they had lost the support of their two best helpers—Baldy Robb, who was now in the penitentiary for destroying Conservative ballots—in the far east we find Moses Aziz is in jail a most notorious bootlegger and rum runner, that was at one time released from jail by a telegram from the late Minister of Customs. In conclusion, Mrs. Fallis said, "the Conservative party is starting out in a happy frame of mind. It has nothing to fear—we know we are right—we have the same platform and the same policies as before. On behalf of the women we look to these men to maintain the ideals and traditions of the Conservative party. We expect and know that they will administer affairs in a clean cut, honest and efficient fashion. It is a time for an honest determined effort to better Canada. Mr Meighen was in a difficult position but he has the qualities that are unsurpassed by his contemporaries."

UNANIMOUS CHOICE OF PARTY FRED W. BOWEN IS NOMINATED BY DURHAM CONSERVATIVES

Standing Vote Taken as Soon as Orono Convention Opens.

HEARTY OVATION.

G. R. Geary, Dr. Kaiser and A. J. Fallis Also Deliver Addresses.

ORONO, July 29.—(Special.) — F. W. Bowen was unanimously nominated to carry the Conservative banner in the forthcoming election at a largely attended and enthusiastic convention held in the town hall, Orono, on Wednesday, July 28, representatives from practically every polling sub-division in the riding being present.

P. L. Brown of Port Hope, moved the following resolution, which was seconded by Mrs. Bounsell of Bowmanville, and carried by a standing vote:

"That this convention of delegates of the Conservative party of the County of Durham, unanimously and by a standing vote, offer to F. W. Bowen the nomination as Conservative candidate for the County of Durham, and further pledge him our united support for his election to the House of Commons on September 14th."

Mr. Bowen was given a hearty ovation as he came to the platform on the invitation of the chairman, Mayor T. B. Chalk of Port Hope, president of the Liberal-Conservative Association of Durham County.

Remarking that this was the third convention to be called in five years, and the second in the past year, Mr. Bowen went on to trace the course of events in the last session leading to the resignation of Honorable Mackenzie King, and upholding the action of the Governor General in granting dissolution at the request of Hon Arthur Meighen, though a similar request had been refused to Mr. King, and rightly so, as the speaker believed.

"We are asking the people again to decide which shall be the policy, and which the party, that shall rule in the next parliament, and for your influence in working for, and furthering the interests of, the good old Conservative party."

The speaker intimated that the country is just as much in need today of a policy which shall further the best interests of the Dominion as it was last fall; "the Liberals have a policy of drift without destiny, and legislation without principle."

Speaking of the fiscal policy, Mr. Bowen stated that the trade treaty with Australia, and the French treaty along different lines, have proved detrimental to the Dominion's best interests, and while he had voted against the budget which had reduced the tariff on certain articles, he could not consistently vote for it because there were too many industries of a subsidiary natu hurt by the reduction on automobiles, and most of the taxes removed were war time measures anyway, and should have been taken off anyway.

Customs Probe.

"The most important thing before the country to-day is the customs' probe, and I cannot see how any one can fail to support the Conservative party when they think of that probe. The King government in effect legalized sumuggling, taking off officers and police, and allowing the business to go on wholesale. The Conservative party is willing to have the investigation go on to the fullest extent and the criticism that a special spite has been shown against Quebec is disposed of by the fact that of 25 companies investigated, 22 are English speaking, and only 3 speak the French tongue.

Prolonged applause greeted the statement that, while the constitutional question had been raised by Mr. King, "bringing with it the suggestion whether we shall sever our connection with the British Crown, I am sure we will al stand by the old principle, One King, One Flag, One Empire."

Scoring the group system as anything but a success, and pointing out the advantages of the two-party way of government, Mr. Bowen stressed the need and importance of organization, in his concluding remarks, and urged loyalty to "our leader, Honorable Arthur Meighen, who has no equal as a debater in Canada; to whom I am proud to give allegiance and proud to have the honor of sitting with him in the House." (Applause).

Colonel G. K. Geary

Colonel G. R. Geary, K.C. of Toronto, was the next speaker, introduced by Dr. Bonnycastle, of Bowmanville, who said he was glad to have men of his calibre taking an interest in politics; "a man who fought wit the boys overseas, and who has been honored by his King, and by the President of France."

Colonel Geary expressed his pleasure in "this wonderful gathering and the unanimity with which you have endorsed the candidature of my friend, Fred W. Bowen, who won a fight last year that reflected credit on the County of Durham, and put Mr. Massey just where he ought to have been from the beginning." (Applause).

The speaker said he had been privileged to be at several conventions and if enthusiasm, numbers and interest, counted for anything he believed the Conservative party is on the eve of a victory as great as that of 1911. (Applause).

The Conservatives have a policy of protection for all industries, agricultural and industrial, but the Liberals have no policy and so are at a disadvantage. They are merely vacillated from one point of the compass to another, never developing any stable policy for any number of years at a time, and the late government had shown its inability to cope with the problems needing solution.

The King government had made a bargain with the Progressives that did enable them to carry on through the session, and all legislation was designed to help the Westerner; practically all the promises made were to the Progressive party and one could see its hand all through.

The budget, with its various reductions, will be pointed to by the King administration as a claim to be returned to power, but the big grain crop was one of several factors that helped toward this end, and if the claim that by economy this government had saved many millions of dollars to put in the public treasury could be substantiated, then it would have been entitled to credit. This, however, cannot be done.

Stating that he could hardly credit the charges made by Honorable Mr. Stevens when listening to them in the House, Mr. Geary went on to score severely the maladministration of the Customs Department, by which $30,000,000 was lost to the country annually, stating that "it was a seething mass of corruption, and the debauchery began at the top and spread like a dirty stain until it reached the lower strata. Yet this department is the bank, or till, from which the supplies to govern the country are largely secured, and it should be administered carefully and honestly, for it has a decided effect upon your tax bill."

The report presented by the Investigation Committee, composed of 4 Conservatives, 4 Liberals and 1 Progressive, had censured all concerned in this nefarious business, and there was no question in anybody's mind that the Government was defeated once the findings were made known, because the people of Canada have never stood for wrongdoing in high places.

The speaker upheld the action of His Excellency in refusing to dissolve the House, and said Mr. King had started then the "squealing and the whining he has been keeping up ever since." He insisted that there is no constitutional question involved, and that it has been introduced by Mr. King merely as a smoke screen to hide the outcome of the Customs probe, and condemned the action of Hon. Mr. Boivin in "trapseing from one end of Quebec to another dragging the name of the Governor-General in the dust, and seeking to turn the people's mind from the real issue."

The whole drift of the Liberal party, the speaker thought, was away from the Empire and toward the country to the south; its fiscal policy, economically and perhaps politically, is toward a Continental union rather than one across the seas, with lines running north and south, instead of east and west. The result is a constant gnashing at the ties binding us to the Mother Land, but public opinion is opposed to hostility to the British Empire, and he was convinced that the final answer will be an overwhelming defeat. For the sake of stability the people will show by their ballots they prefer to entrust the Government in the hands of Right Honorable Arthur Meighen, assured that this country will be for all time to come a part of the British Empire. (Applause).

Dr. Kaiser.

Dr. Kaiser, of Oshawa, was introduced by the chairman, and in his opening remarks referred to Mr. Bowen as a good political neighbor at Ottawa, never away from his post of duty; no party Whip having to run around the House to locate his whereabouts. (Applause).

The speaker also predicted that when the election is over and the Cabinet finally formed, Colonel Geary will hold an important post in its membership.

Criticising the opening address of Hon. Mackenzie King in the present campaign, Dr. Kaiser said, "I have read his speech, and admired his pluck, and the brass that goes into his make-up; also his clever play upon words. Every time the Progressives voted with the Liberals, he calls it 'honorable co-operation'; but if they vote with the Conservatives, who must be right once in awhile, he dubs them 'traitors' and calls it 'intrigue of the lowest kind'."

Strong condemnation of the King government as a result of the findings of the Customs probe marked Dr. Kaiser's speech, who thought that the country's greatest problem in connection with the Canadian National Railway might have been solved had the taxes been collected from this department as should have been done.

Some facts in connection with the automobile industry were presented by Dr. Kaiser, who stated that 100,000 people in Ontario depend on this business for a living; that only 11 per cent of the cars in use here are made in a foreign country; that Canadians, by their skill and genius, not only take care of their own requirements but export 40 per cent of the cars made, and this in face of the fact that they have the lowest production of any country in the world, and that automobiles, declared a luxury by the government, are taxed higher in Canada than in any other country in the world.

Through honest workmanship Canadian made cars stand up better than those of foreign make, "and yet the Liberal government would drive this industry to some other country, and drive our sons there to get work in their manufacture. Everything used by Canadians should be made in Canada, and that's the difference between the Conservative and the Liberal policy. Your party calls upon you to work more vigorously than ever before to elect your candidate, and to support our leader, that Canada may say to the whole world she is going to remain a part of the British Empire." (Applause).

Dr. Moore

A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., introduced Dr. Moore of Brooklyn, causing a good laugh by his reference to the latter's avordupois, when he said "the doctor carries weight with him wherever he goes."

A general reference to the constitutional question was made by this speaker, the action of Mr. King being condemned, and the proceedure of the Governor-General in refusing dissolution being strongly upheld.

The doctor was deeply moved as he said that the descendants of the pioneers of Durham County are always going to remain within the British Empire; "and we fellows who went overseas, and who were led to victory at Vimy Ridge by Lord Byng, that man of sound sense, and good British spirit, are not going to see him drawn into a corner by any Mackenzie King." (Applause).

The policy of co-operative marketing of farm produce, sponsored by Honorable Arthur Meighen, was urged upon the notice of the rural producers; also the matter of selective immigration; an adequate protection tariff, revised and brought up to date; and the stopping of the loss through maladministration in the Department of Customs, as well as the loss to Canada from immigration to the States, and he concluded by appealing for a sturdy support of the Conservative candidate, "for our leader has covered in his policy every phase of our industrial and national life."

Arthur White

Arthur White of Montreal was the last speaker, bringing a message from Quebec, which he said was one of hope, for through an unfortunate combination of circumstances his leader had been kept out of that province in the last election, yet this time he would certainly go and his supporters are hopeful that at least fifteen ridings will send Conservative members to Ottawa.

Mr. White was convinced that Mr. King would go to any extreme in his desire for office, and that anything that stands in his way will be sacrificed; he will not, however, be able to humbug Canadian citizens into thinking that self-government is in any danger from the circumstances of dissolution.

"Separation from Great Britain means a step toward union with the Unoted States, and cannot be contemplated with equanimity. The order given by General Currie to Canadian trops when guarding Hill 70, Vimy Ridge, and the coal fields of Northern France, should be in every school book in the land, and contains a message for all loyal Conservatives in the present campaign: "You will advance, or fall where you stand, facing the enemy." (Applause).

The secretary, J. A. Vance, Millbrook, read the following resolution which was carried by a standing vote; the mover and seconder being Dr. G. R. Bonnycastle, and A. J. Fallis, M.P.P., respectively.

"That this meeting of delegates wished to place on record its unswerving loyalty to Right Honorable Arthur Meighen, Prime Minister of Canada, and leader of the Conservative party, and to the principles of the party which he represents, and promises a continuance of our loyalty and support in the forthcoming elections and hope that when the ballots are counted that Mr. Meighen and the Conservative party will be returned by an overwhelming majority."

The meeting concluded with three hearty cheers for the candidates—Colonel Geary, Dr. Kaiser and F. W. Bowen, and the King, and the singing of the National Anthem.

One of Ontario's Best Investments
Highways contribute greatly to people's welfare and pleasure
By making transportation easy, Ontario's good roads foster business, assist the farmer, and bring pleasure to hundreds of thousands of our people. Good roads are one of our best investments.
These roads have cost $180,000,000 of the people's money. Many more millions will be required to keep them in repair and to renew them. This money must come from those who use the roads.
You, as a motorist, are invited to take an interest in the highways. They are yours to use, not to abuse—yours to enjoy, not to destroy. Excessive speed grinds away road surfaces. Drive moderately and you will help to protect the huge investment which you and the other motorists have made in the good roads of your Province.
While confident that the majority of motorists will heed this request for co-operation in preserving the roads, the Government gives warning to the careless that the speed laws are being rigidly enforced.
THE HON. GEO. S. HENRY, Minister of Highways
S. L. SQUIRE, Deputy Minister
Issued by the Ontario Department of Highways to secure the co-operation of motorists in abating the abuse of the roads of the Province.

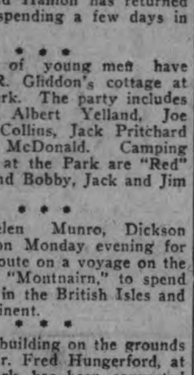
Easy to Gain With Yeast and Iron

New Combination of Yeast with Vegetable Iron Quick Way to Build Up Weight



This new combination of yeast vitamines with vegetable iron, renews the action of sluggish blood cells, drives out dangerous body poisons, increases energy and endurance and supplies the system with vitamines that build up weight.

For years yeast has been known as a rich vitamine food but not until we perfected "ironized yeast" — which comes in concentrated tablet form was it possible to take yeast and iron in the right proportions to build up weight.

Vegetable "Iron" when combined with yeast is quite easy to digest, therefore better for the system. And "yeast" when ironized, becomes just twice as beneficial as ordinary fresh or cake yeast.

Ironized Yeast Tablets are composed of concentrated food elements, therefore, they are pleasant to take and free from drug-like effects. If you are under weight, do not enjoy good health, lacking in energy and force, "ironized yeast" tablets will pick you right up, and if they fail, you get your money back.

Sold by druggists at $1.00 for a large 60-tablet package or sent direct from laboratory on receipt of price. Ironized Yeast Co., Fort Erie, Ontario, Canada.

HER OWN WAY by a Girl of Today

AREAL FRIEND.

"Lela, it is I," said Joan coming forward from behind me.

With a cry Mrs. Cornwall sat up in bed and with a gesture with her weak hands as though trying to push Joan away, said

"Don't come near me, Joan Meredith. I am punished enough for trying to get my husband to get all the money he could out of you.

"This morning I knew that it was I who sent him to his death. I knew he was going to blackmail you. It was I who first put it into his head. I knew about the name of Barry Cornwall and wife on the hotel register, and I also knew what he did not, that I was in the closet of your bedroom all night."

"What?" I exclaimed.

Barry Cornwall's wife paid no attention.

"Oh, I couldn't help it, Joan. You see I was jealous of you, even though I planned it. I knew you were beautiful and rich and it seemed to me that you had everything, everything I did not have to make him happy. And I felt so ashamed when I knew he was perfectly loyal to me.

"And so the morning he gave me that page from the register to keep, I almost told him."

I started forward as she said this. I opened my mouth to ask her where she put it, for I knew that Joan or I must get that page before Jem Smith got there, and I expected him every minute.

It was Joan this time that kept me from starting things. Slowly she went forward toward the bed. Slowly she held out her hands, and, although Lela visibly shrunk back upon the pillows, Joan came near her, and began to speak.

"Dear Lela, I know about it all. He told me last night that you were going to have a child and he told me he loved you, and because he loved you, Lela, I have come to help you. I'll be your friend if you will let me."

"What are you going to do that for? Don't you know that I tried to ruin you! I framed it up for you, and—Oh—my God—that is the reason Barry died. That is my punishment. Let me die, both me and my poor baby!"

"No dear, you are going to live and I am going to take care of you."

The poor tired body of Lela Cornwall straightened out. She had fainted.

LOVE LETTERS THAT MADE HISTORY

(By Joseph Kaye.)

BALZAC AND EVELINE HANSKA

"Adieu, loved friend," wrote Balzac to the woman who formed his ideal of love throughout his artist life, "to whom I belong like the sound to a bell, the dog to his master, the artist to his ideal, prayer to God, pleasure to cause, color to the painter, life to the sun. Love me, for I need your affection so vivifying, so colored, so agreeable, so celestial, so ideally good, of such sweet dominance and so constantly vibrating!"

And again "Why shouldn't you have a poet as other people have a dog, a monkey, a parrot—the more so as I have in me something of these creatures I always repeat the same phrases, I imitate society, I am faithful."

That the beautiful Evelina Hans was a married woman, the wife of a Polish-Russian count, caused no obstacle to Balzac's love. What is most interesting in this love affair is that the Parisian Balzac, of all men, should remain loyal to one love for eighteen years. Rarely seeing the Countess Hanska in her far-off country, he lavished his devotion upon her in a mass of correspondence, waiting and praying for the day when something should happen that would release his beloved and bring her freely to his arms.

The ironic ending to Balzac's romance was that after the lapse of sixteen years, Count Hanska obliged him by his demise and at the end of another two years Balzac brought his cherished bride to the home he had bought for her in Paris and which he had filled with a choice collection of art works, but, a few months after his marriage, he was seized with an illness he had partly contracted on his hurried trip to cold Russia and died.

YOUR JEWEL, COLOR FLOWER

By Mildred Marshall

Today's talismanic gem is the turquoise. When this gem is worn as an amulet no injury or accident can befall. Travel by sea is rendered safe when this stone is present.

Today's natal stone is the pearl. Those who possess one are marked by the gods for admiration, according to an ancient belief. The pearl is considered the most precious and potent of all gems and one which every fair woman should wear if she wished to enhance her charm and beauty.

Green is today's color. The symbolic of joy and hope, it was believed by the ancients to be destructive to friendship.

The pink azalea is today's flower. It brings good cheer to the home which it adorns.

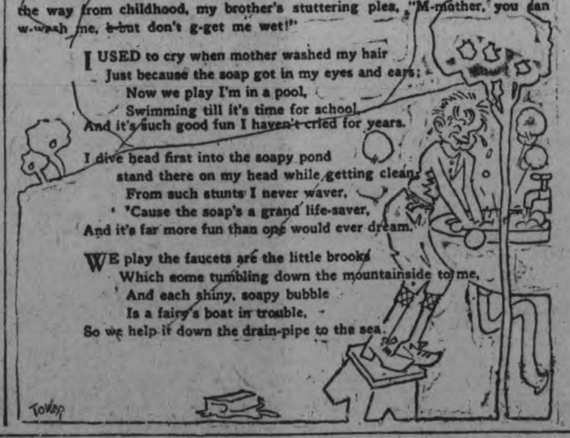
The Washbowl Pool

By SHIRLEY RODMAN WILLIAMS.

DISCIPLINE isn't always a matter of punishment. More often, in fact, right reactions can be gained without friction by making things interesting. Grown-ups then accomplish what is right and leave only a pleasant memory with the child. The little every day problems of keeping clean are with us always and some children are more difficult to manage than others. Why, I knew a little girl who screamed so when her hair was being washed that her mother always performed the ceremony on the porch, so the neighbors would know that the child wasn't being beaten. It is commonly claimed that little boys reach a stage when, aside from playing in it, water is detestable. I'm inclined to believe it. Too, often for denial, I've seen little boys come from a trip to the washbowl with a delightful black ring around the clean spot on nose and mouth where their hands had passed. And how clearly there comes to me, all the way from childhood, my brother's stuttering plea, "M-mother, you can w-wash me, b-but don't g-get me wet!"



I USED to cry when mother washed my hair
Just because the soap got in my eyes and ears;
Now we play I'm in a pool,
Swimming till it's time for school.
And it's such good fun I haven't cried for years.

I dive head first into the soapy pond stand there on my head while getting clean;
From such stunts I never waver,
'Cause the soap's a grand life-saver,
And it's far more fun than one would ever dream.

WE play the faucets are the little brooks
Which come tumbling down the mountainside to me.
And each shiny, soapy bubble
Is a fairy's boat in trouble,
So we help it down the drain-pipe to the sea.

HOROSCOPE

"The Stars Incline, but do not Compel"

THURSDAY, JULY 29, 1926.

Contrary planetary influences rule this day, according to astrology. It is well to devote attention to current affairs and to make no new ventures.

Again the stars smile on newspapers and their publishers, for there will be interest in reading.

Under this sway long-hoped for messages of good fortune may be expected.

There is a sign supposed to increase interest in writing and this form of expression is likely to be tried by many persons devoid of talent.

Out of much effort in turning out poetry and fiction real American literary geniuses will appear among the crowd of the uninspired, it is foretold.

Closer international ties between the United States and South American countries are indicated. Art is to be one of the strongest of the new mediums of friendship.

Women would better delay important effort of all sorts, for there is an aspect menacing to their larger ambitions.

This is read as not a lucky day for love affairs. Wooers probably will be persistent but fickle.

Marriages are to be numerous in the autumn when summer romances will culminate, but many engagements will prove to be not binding.

Better understanding regarding international financial settlements is indicated for the autumn.

Conservation of eyesight is to be a matter of vital interest and there will be education to protect the vision, it is foretold.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of surprises. Big plans may be materialized, but vexations are to be expected.

Children born on this day probably will be possessed of unusual ability. These subjects of Leo often are capable of conquering everything in life, except themselves. They should be wisely trained and educated.

CHRISTINE.

Christine, meaning Christian, comes from the Greek verb chrio, meaning to touch or anoint. In early times it was translated to signify the Old Hebrew prophetic Messiah (The Anointed) and became the title for the Savior, the very touchstone of faith.

The first person known to have been baptised under the title is St. Christina, a Roman virgin of patrician birth, martyred in 295. Tradition declares that she was thrown into Lake Bolsena with a millstone around her neck, but it floated to the surface supported by angels and she was finally shot to death with arrows. Naturally, she became a patroness of Bolsena and of the Venetian States, where Christina is a popular feminine name.

Her fame traveled through Greece and Hungary and was brought from the latter country to England and Scotland by the Atheling family in the person of Christina, Abbess of Romsey. The Scotch promptly abbreviated the name to Kirstin. Germany preserved the original Christina, but has several diminutives, among them Stine and Tine.

Through John Bunyan's Christiana as the feminine of the allegorical hero of "Pilgrim's Progress," this form became popular in England. Christine is Kirste or Kirstine throughout Scandinavia. Chrissie, Xina, Christiana, and Christina are English favorites. France favors Christine only, and Italy calls her Cristina. In Germany she is Christiane and Kristel. Portugal has an odd form Christinha.

Christine's talismanic jewel is jade, whose potency for good fortune and health seems limitless. It is a sacred stone to the Chinese who believe that all good things come to her who wears it and evil can have no power over her. Given to a newly-married couple, it is said to assure the birth of an heir within the year. Christine's lucky day is Monday and 6 is her lucky number.

MASCULINE TOGS.

The wide girdle, which gives the effect of a waistcoat, made of white pique or satin is very charming with the dark wool suit.

When 70 beats 50

Have you ever met these two men? They are real people, and their cases are well known to their friends.

One of them has just turned seventy. He is a genial, cheery individual, glowing with health, almost as active now as ever he was. His golf handicap is 9, and he plays to it.

EVER SINCE HE WAS THIRTY HE HAS TAKEN KRUSCHEN SALTS

The other, who is twenty years younger, is the sort of man who is said to be "too old at fifty." He is tired of life; you can see that by the lackadaisical way he goes about his occupations. Success has always eluded his grasp. He has lost the capacity for enjoying himself."

THIS MAN DOES NOT TAKE KRUSCHEN

The most interesting feature of these two cases is that nature originally endowed the younger man with the better constitution of the two; for the other actually started life with an inherited tendency to rheumatism and gout, of which he now shows no signs at all.

It is unnecessary to labour the obvious moral that the man who has acquired the healthy Kruschen habit can nearly always give points to the man who has not, in spite of the handicap of age and natural constitution.

Make the experiment yourself. Take that tiny pinch of Kruschen Salts—"as much as will lie on a 10 cent piece"—every morning in your breakfast cup of coffee or tea. You won't be able to taste it, but in a few days you will begin to notice its effects. Your liver and kidneys will be gently, but effectively, stimulated to perform their proper function—regularly, adequately. All the waste matter that has been clogging your system will be removed. New, pure blood will be set coursing through your body; you will feel refreshed in body and mind, glowing with a new sense of health and fitness, you will be a different person altogether.

And then you will wonder how you ever existed in the old days before you began to take Kruschen.

Tasteless in Coffee or Tea

Put as much in your breakfast cup as will lie on a 10 cent piece. It's the little daily dimeful that does it.

Kruschen Salts

Good Health for Half a Cent a Day

ECONOMY.—A bottle of Kruschen Salts costs 75c and contains 160 doses. This works out at less than half a cent. a day for the gift of good health. Next time you pass a drug store, remember that this druggist stocks Kruschen, and get a bottle. Get one to-day.

SOLE IMPORTING AGENTS: CHARLES GYDE & SON, MONTREAL.

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A UNIQUE CHIFFON AFTERNOON FROCK.

Madame procured some very unusual material last Winter—the finest kind of chiffon velvet printed to represent leopard's skin.

She made a gown of it for a prominent young actress, who was simply delighted with the effect, and who came back this Spring to ask if such a thing could be had in chiffon.

Madame promised to find out for her, and after scouring the entire place succeeded in getting a length of imported chiffon that is really lovely. It represents leopard's skin, and is different from the effect in velvet in that it shows wide stripes of the dark and light material, so the dress can be made up of the light, with sections through it of the darker material.

Madame began by measuring her material carefully, for she could only get a limited amount of it, and then considering where she would have the darker sections fall.

She studied the problem at her leisure, then set to work to draw a design to submit to the actress client.

I was much interested, for the yellow and black combination of the material is ideally becoming to the young girl, who is a very light blonde and who can wear yellow to perfection.

The sketch, when finished, showed a very smart and very simple frock. There was a slender panel of black chiffon through the center of the skirt which extended into the inset belt. I've always liked these inset belts because they are slenderizing in the extreme.

The kimono blouse showed short sleeves that fitted close about the upper arm and then had deeply pointed folds of the black chiffon for cuffs.

"She'll love that!" I remarked enthusiastically. "I can just see her in it, and it will suit her perfectly."

Madame thought so, too, and was pleased with her conception of the frock, as any successful designer should be.

When the young client came in she was most enthusiastic, and begged to have the frock in time for a garden party on the coming Saturday. Madame promised it, and a big leghorn hat with black velvet crown.

This Smart Chiffon Is Printed In Leopard Spots and Trimmed In Black.

One of the most remarkable inventions in the service of humanity stands to the credit of Miss Iza Thompson, an instructor in a school for the death in London. Known as the Thompson Sensitive Flame, it is a beacon of hope to the deaf. An ordinary gas flame, regulated so that it vibrates to every sound, it overcomes the hitherto insuperable difficulty of teaching word-sounds to the deaf-mute. By means of the vibrations of the flame he is trained to remember the particular sounds in the alphabet, and the sequence necessary for the production of words.

ONCE UPON A TIME — THE GIANTS AND THE HERD-BOY—IV — by W. J. ENRIGHT.

THE STORY UP TO NOW

ONCE A POOR BOY LOOKED AFTER THE SHEEP OF A GREAT LORD. NIGHT AND DAY HE SPENT IN THE OPEN FIELDS. ONE NIGHT HE HEARD A CALL FOR HELP AND FOUND A GIANT WITH AN INJURED FOOT, WHICH THE BOY BOUND WITH HIS SHIRT. THE GIANT THEN TOLD THE BOY TO COME INTO THE WOODS TO BE REWARDED, AND TOLD HIM TO WEAR A BELT WHICH WOULD MAKE HIM INVISIBLE. THERE HE SAW MANY GIANTS AND GIANTESSES MAKING MERRY. THEY SOON STARTED UNDERGROUND.

THE HERD-BOY STOOD BESIDE THE FRIENDLY GIANT AND HELPED HIMSELF TO ALL THAT HE WISHED TO EAT.

WHEN HE HAD FINISHED HE THOUGHT TO HIMSELF, "WHY SHOULDN'T I PUT A LOAF OF THIS BREAD IN MY POCKET? I SHALL BE WANTING IT TOMORROW." SO, WHEN NO ONE WAS LOOKING, A LOAF SLIPPED OFF THE GIANT'S PLATE AND DISAPPEARED. THE GIANT LOOKED DOWN AND WHISPERED SOFTLY, "ARE YOU THERE, HERD-BOY?"

"YES," REPLIED THE YOUTH. "THEN JUMP UPON MY BACK AND HOLD TIGHT," SAID THE GIANT. "SO THAT I MAY TAKE YOU UP TO EARTH AGAIN." THE HERD-BOY HELD TIGHTLY TO THE GIANT AND IN A FEW MOMENTS FOUND HIMSELF ONCE MORE AT THE EDGE OF THE FOREST.

THE GIANT HAD VANISHED. SO THE BOY RETURNED TO THE SHEEP AND TOOK OFF THE INVISIBLE BELT WHICH, WITH THE LOAF OF BREAD, HE HID CAREFULLY IN HIS BAG.

TOMORROW—THE MAGIC LOAF.

"Here," said the Fuzzy Fox to the White Wolf one day, "is the bottle of ink."

"That doesn't mean anything to me," growled the White Wolf, who was a cousin to the Woozie Wolf. He sat in his den trying to keep cool and the Fox had come over to see him with a bottle of the black stuff. "I didn't ask you to bring me any ink," went on the Wolf.

"I brought it without being asked," laughed the Fox.

"What's the joke?" the Wolf wanted to know.

"The joke is going to be on Uncle Wiggily," went on the Fox, "but the ink is going to be on you."

"I never was very good at guessing riddles," spoke the Wolf.

"It's like this," explained the Fox. "Uncle Wiggily has an automobile, and on the back he carries an extra, or spare tire in case he gets a puncture. Now that spare tire is black, but you are white, so, to make you black I have brought this bottle of ink."

"Still I don't understand," said the Wolf.

"Oh, how queer!" sighed the Fox. "Well, it's like this. With this ink you will blacken your fur until you are the color of Uncle Wiggily's spare tire. You will curl yourself up inside the tire and ride behind the rabbit's car without him knowing it. At a lonesome spot in the woods the car will stop. Uncle Wiggily will get off to put on his spare tire and then you and I will grab him. How's that for a trick?"

"It sounds good," said the White Wolf, "but how do you know Uncle Wiggily will stop his car in a lonely spot to take off the spare tire?"

"He will have to stop there because he will have a puncture," answered the Fox.

"How can you be sure he will get a puncture?" the Wolf asked.

"I will make sure of it by scattering some sharp tacks in the road at that spot," snapped the Fox. "Say no more, but ink yourself and get ready to do your part as I'll do mine."

So the Wolf put black ink on his white fur until he looked the color of a black spare tire on the back of an auto. Then, watching his chance, the bad chap curled up inside the circle of the tire and waited for Uncle Wiggily to come out of his hollow stump bungalow to go riding. The Wolf, who was now black instead of white, did not have long to wait.

Soon out hopped the bunny, his pink nose twinkling happily, and into his auto he jumped. The Fox had run on ahead with a paper of sharp tacks, which he was to scatter in the road at a lonely spot.

"It looks as if it would rain soon," said Uncle Wiggily to himself as he started his car. "But I don't care." I have my umbrella top up. I can't get wet."

So away he drove, as the Fox knew he would, for the bad chap had listened at an open window the night before and heard Nurse Jane tell the rabbit gentleman to bring her some carrots the next day. To get carrots Uncle Wiggily had to drive along the lonely road.

Well, of a sudden it began to rain. It rained very hard, and when Uncle Wiggily reached the lonely spot in the road, all of a sudden he heard a loud hissing noise.

The Wolf put black ink on his white fur.

"That's either a snake or a puncture," said the rabbit as he stopped his car and got out to look, and, surely enough it was a puncture. "Somebody has been scattering tacks in the road," said the rabbit as he saw them. "I wish the Police Dog was here. Well, it's lucky I have a spare tire."

Uncle Wiggily hopped around th back of his car to get the spare tire, and the Fox, who was hiding in the bushes, thought this was now the Wolf's chance. But as the rabbit looked he cried

"Oh, what's that white beast curled up in my spare tire? It's a White Wolf! Ho! I'll run and get the Police Dog!" And without stopping to take off the spare tire, Uncle Wiggily ran away as fast as he could.

For the rain had washed all the black ink off the Wolf—do you see?—leaving him white as he should be. And the bunny saw the bad chap quite plainly before going too near.

"Fooled again!" growled the Fox, jumping out from behind the bush. "And all on account of the rain. Come on, Wolf, before the Police Dog gets here to arrest us."

So the bad chaps ran away, and when the Police Dog came back with Uncle Wiggily he helped change the tire, so it all happened for the best. And if the gas stove doesn't go to the movies all by itself and leave the tea kettle home alone, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's toothache plant.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

By Blanche Silver

BESSY MEETS A BUSY LITTLE NURSE GIRL.

Bessie frowned and pouted when her Mama asked her to mind her baby ister and brother while she went down rrr baby ister and brother while she we town.

She put Baby Sister in her buggy and they went out under the trees to play, but Baby Sister didn't want to sit still and Bessie couldn't keep her quiet.

"Oh dear," she sighed, "I wish I was an ant or a bee or a ——"

"Goodness knows I don't see why you should wish a thing like that," laughed a tiny voice and Bessie looked down at the wee little ant sitting on a blade of grass in the sun. "I don't see why any one should wish themselves an ant."

"Well, I do," replied Bessie. "You folks don't have anything to do all day long but run around and play in the sun. You never have to take care of your baby sister and brother like I do."

"Is that so?" laughed the tiny Ant. "Well, that just shows you don't know anything about ant life or you wouldn't say that. Why I'm taking care of several baby sisters and brothers this very second. See those small white things down there?" She pointed down to the grass under her. Bessie saw them and laughed. "Those are my baby sisters and brothers. It rained last night so I had to take all of them up into the sunlight to dry out. My older brothers and sisters are taking out the grain from the store rooms. It got all wet too."

"Why, I never heard of such a thing!" exclaimed Bessie. "I thought the life of an ant was all play."

"No play until after our work is finished," and Miss Ant ran down the blade of grass and one by one carried the wee white bundles back into the ant hill. Then when she had finished she came out and invited Bessie inside. The baby sister was sound asleep and Bessie's brother was playing in the sand so she followed Missy Ant into the ant hill.

Bessie never saw so many little ant children in all her life. She almost gasped when she thought of the work those babies must make for their older sisters.

"Now if you think I have nothing to do," laughed Missy Ant, stepping up to some queer-looking bundles of grayish-white. "These children are ready to hatch out of their third sleep and they must have help." She took the cocoon cradle of one and slowly helped out the wee little ant. Very carefully she unfolded the wee little legs and smoothed out a pair of loSely little wings. "Oh see, it's a Queen Ant," she cried gleefully. "How lovely. You know it's only the males and queen ants that are hatched with wings. And when a nurse finds a queen ant she will be lucky all day."

"These Are My Baby Sisters."

She washed and cleaned the little royal ant very carefully and took her up in the sunlight to dry, never leaving her for a second. "When she's older she will take a crowd of winged brothers with her and fly away and build a new home."

"But I never knew ants had wings," exclaimed Bessie

"Only until they find a new home, then they take their wings off and settle down," laughed Missy Ant. "You'll have to excuse me now," and gathering up the little queen ant she carried her down into the ant hill.

Just then Bessie's Mama came home and Bessie ran to tell her what she had seen. Of course Mama thought she had fallen asleep and dreamed it all, but Bessie knew better.

A ghostly sewing machine has recenty been terrifying people in Portugal. It was first heard in a house in the city of Oporto. Hundreds of people heard it running steadily for many minutes at a time, and since then it has been heard in numerous other places throughout the country. Nothing has been seen, and so far there has been no explanation, although the services of scientists and mechanics have been enlisted in an effort to solve the mystery.

FINE WORDS.

Fine words are fine for days of joy,
And yet the heartache of a boy,
A little boy, wants not fine words.
Even as birds
Only a few, sweet notes employ
To fill the summer air with song,
So, in some hour of childish wrong
And childish grief,
Seek not with words to give relief.

And, even in our later years
Of deeper hurts and hotter tears,
Fine words will never seem to touch
The heart as much
As when the suffering spirit hears
Some word of comfort or of praise
That someone speaks in simpler phrase,
Or feels a hand
We need no book to understand.

Fine words are not what sorrow needs
But kinder thoughts and gentler deeds
Than days of happiness require.
The great words tire —
When some soul weeps, when some heart bleeds,
Then come as comes a mother mild
To heal the heartache of a child,
For it is then
That man is but a child again.

Daily Short Story

A ROSE FOR THE PROFESSOR.

There is something of inspiration and a great deal of pathos in the rows upon rows of youthful faces that blossom on Commencement Day platforms in the flowery month of June. At least, so Professor Knowlton thought as he watched his particular graduating class step blithely up to receive their sheepskins.

After all, in their hands lay the future. So much for the inspiration part. Could one look forward fifteen—twenty years? Ah, there lay the pathos!

What would Mary Norcross be doing then, the brightest girl the college had known for a decade? Constance Foster? Mary Louise Leavenworth? He paused, speculatively, over Mary Louise, who, at that very moment, stood waiting for her diploma, her eager, alive little face uplifted eagerly to the president's solemn mien.

Professor Knowlton happened, for all his twelve years' seniority, to be in love with Mary Louise, but he would as soon have thought of telling her as of resigning his job. To begin with, he had an idea that all the girls regarded him as only slightly less ancient than the prehistoric animals they studied in his geology course.

Furthermore, he knew that Mary Louise's future was carefully mapped out for her by her parents. A year abroad, a year in society, and then, presumably, a suitable marriage. That is, a marriage in which money, birth and good looks loomed large.

As far as that went, he himself came of splendid New England stock. His salary was that of full professorship, and when he looked in the mirror he saw a keen-eyed, clean-featured, square-chinned young man who could readily claim to be several years younger than he was.

Perhaps if he had met Mary Louise through any other medium than the socially stultifying one of the classroom there might have been a chance for him.

Now all these random thoughts had been chasing each other through Dick Knowlton's brain as solemnly, one by one, the girls passed up the steps, across the platform, and down again, coquettishly shifting their mortar board tassels from the undergraduate to the graduate position, while the sober strains of the Priests' March rang in the vaulted building.

The bestowal of the diplomas marked the end of the program. A few minutes later, to the ringing of the college chapel bell, the graduates marched out, scattering on the campus, meeting their friends and receiving the flowers which had been sent them.

Somehow, the professor managed not to lose sight of Mary Louise. Her little sleek bobbed head drew his glance as she moved here and there and everywhere, her arms filled with yellow roses.

He felt an absurd twinge as he watched her. Was she perhaps already engaged to some nice young man?

Such a little while longer to see that sleek bobbed head! Tonight, at the president's reception, tomorrow at the alumni luncheon, and then—well, perhaps in five years—or ten—at some class re-union. His heart ached strangely and he cursed the reticence which throughout four years had kept him from maintaining anything but a cool teacher-pupil relation.

He tried to fancy himself getting Mary Louise alone for a moment and saying to her "My dear Miss Leavenworth, I have been madly in love with you for some time. Will you marry me?" He could see the look of surprise creep into her gray eyes, the quick laugh with which she would set aside his proposal. No, nothing should wring his confession from him in these last brief moments.

A sudden drift of people toward the chapel steps where the junior class had gathered to serenade their departing sisters, brought him unexpectedly face to face with the girl who dominated his thoughts. Well, he must congratulate her and say good-by.

He held out his hand and felt her cool little palm next to his. "I wish you every bit of luck in the world," he said formally.

"Thank you," she said quietly, with just a little catch in her voice. "Seems funny it's all over!" She smiled and turned away. Then, impulsively, she swung around, and choosing one of the loveliest of her roses. "Won't you—oh, Dick, by any chance, did you send me these yellow roses?" she breathed.

It was all over in a moment then. Each had seen in the other's eyes a whole tale of love and longing. The unconscious little "Dick" had told the man something he had never dreamed of.

But, "How did you know that I sent them?" he asked. "I didn't intend—"

"Why," said Mary Louise, in tender amusement, "one day in class you said that nature never made a lovelier flower than the yellow rose. I was half in love with you then and ready to remember every word you uttered. When they came today—such quantities of them—I—I couldn't but just wonder—"

And then the whole junior class, faculty assembled, and guests of the university, had they been watching, could have seen Mary Louise rising on tip toe and putting a yellow rose in Professor Knowlton's buttonhole. But what they were saying—oh, that was only for each other.

CHAPMAN WOULD BE AN AMATEUR IN OSAGE LAND

Oklahoma Still Has Its Hard Riding Outlaws Ready With Gun or Fist.

Skilled Crooks Arrange Lay Out of Jobs and Exact Revenue.

WHEN "PAWNEE BILL" MET HIS MATCH.

The old west is still untamed in Oklahoma—but the brisk, dapper men who are conducting the federal investigation into the Osage murders are beginning to put a halter on it.

This was demonstrated rather neatly when "Pawnee Bill" Lillie, veteran frontiersman and former partner of the immortal Buffalo Bill, strode into District Attorney Roy St. Lewis' office, accompanied by Colonel Zach Mulhall, his partner.

With bluff, breezy manner, Pawnee Bill roared out:

"What's this I hear about my old friend Bill Hale being in jail?"

District Attorney St. Lewis, the immaculate city man, batted nary an eye.

"Yes," he said evenly. 'We've got him in jail and he's guilty and we're going to hang him."

The bluff heartiness of Pawnee Bill faded like the morning mist before a western sun.

Oh, hmmmmmm, is that so?" he asked.

And he and Mulhall stalked out quietly.

BY BRUCE CATTON.
NEA Service Writer.

GUTHRIE, Okla.— No sir, I reckon this Gerald Chapman just naturally wouldn't cut any figure at all out here. I reckon if he started in to rob a bank the boys would just push him aside and say, Just who are you, buddy, anyhow? Let experts do this'."

The speaker is a long, lanky Oklahoman lounging at ease in the back room of a speakeasy on a Guthrie side street. He is a type—a type that, if you understand it, helps you to understand why such a thing as the incredible Osage murder mystery could happen.

For Oklahoma was settled by white men only thirty-five years ago. It is as near to America's vanished frontier as anything you will find in this day of soft drink bars and radio. It still has its outlaws, its bad men," its hard-riding gunmen and its ten-gallon hats.

They are a different breed from the gunmen of the cities, these Oklahomans. Take away the gun, black-jack and knife of the most murderous yegg of New York or Chicago and he would be a creature devoid of harm—a skulking coward. Take away the Oklahoma bad man's weapons and he will proceed with his fists.

They are straight forward chaps, these Oklahomans, outlaw and law-abiding citizens alike. It makes you wonder if there isn't something to that stuff about the great open spaces," after all.

Catching a Bandit.

Consider Alva McDonald, for instance. He was, until recently, United States marshal here. He is a brawny, smiling sort of man, who speaks with a drawl and who in his stories, reveals the spirit of the westerner.

You was asking me about the time we caught Dutch Webber," he says.

Webber, you know, was a real bad outlaw. He'd held up banks and trains for fun. I guess—wouldn't pull a holdup in the night time, but insisted on broad daylight.

Well a deputy named Snelson and I went to a house outside of town to get Dutch. Snelson goes in and tries one room I tried another. It was Snelson that found him.

The two men must have come together too quick to draw. Anyhow, when I got in where they were they was rassling—only Dutch kept kicking Snelson on the shins. Man, he pretty near kicked the shins off him. So I stuck my gun in his ribs and told him to stretch. He saw me and says, All right, Alva, I'll do it for you but not for Snelson.'

You see there was a lot of personal bad feeling between Snelson and Webber. And so, goin' back to town in the car that night, Webber got killed."

Alva's interviewer emitted a howl at the nonchalant way in which this bit of information was let fall. The ex-marshal turned in surprise.

Oh, it was all right," he said. It was a perfectly proper killin'."

McDonald shed a bit of light on the customs of Oklahoma's bandits. He did it inadvertently, as one reveals something he thinks not worth the telling.

This man Ike Ogg," he began, He at that time was managing Al Spencer, who I've always considered the greatest bandit America has produced in this century. Al was—"

A manager?" McDonald was interrupted. How come?"

They Have Managers.

Oh, these outlaws all have managers, just like prize fighters," he said. The manager, he fixes up where they're to go and who they're to hold up, and makes all the arrangements—and then they split with him.

For instance: the manager will go to a bank, to get a bill changed or some thing, and get the lay of the land—how many people are apt to be around, where the safe is, how the exits are fixed and so on. Then he tells his outlaw and the outlaw goes and sticks it up.

But Ike had tough luck once. He went to Enid and bought about forty of these little rubber finger-tips that drug stores sell. He had all his men put 'em on, so they wouldn't leave any finger prints. All but two of 'em had been in the pen and their finger prints was recorded.

Well, the outlaws held up a Santa Fe train, near Enid. They got away with it all right, but like idiots they dropped all their finger tips along side the track when they got through. So the detectives got these finger tips, found out where they had been bought, and arrested Ike.

But the outlaws weren't caught. Ike didn't squeal."

TRADE CONDITIONS IMPROVE IN RUSSIA

Russian Foreign Trade Reaches Almost Pre-War Mark.

MONTREAL, July 29 (Canadian Press).—In its July Bulletin the Royal Bank of Canada publishes the following interesting article on Russian economic progress:

The extent to which Russia is to be a serious factor in international trade during the next few years is a question that is causing considerable discussion on all sides. In last months letter we gave a brief summary of current conditions in Germany, and no treatment of the industrial outlook for Germany would be complete without some mention of current Russian prospects.

The necessity for export markets has caused Germany to seek closer trade relationships with Russia. Russian foreign trade is an increasingly important element in international commerce. In the last two years Germany has exported $100,000,000 worth of goods to Russia. In order to encourage this trade, the German government is financing these exports with sufficient credits so that agricultural implements, for instance, may be paid for from the proceeds of two harvests. In order to secure this market Krupps has established four model farms in Russia where their machinery may be demonstrated to the peasants of the surrounding territory. As the Russian is not familiar with modern methods in agriculture, lumbering or mining, the process of introducing modern machinery is one which will require education and patience. Before the war there were less than 500 tractors in all of Russia—12,500 were used in connection with the last harvest.

While it is undoubtedly somewhat difficult to form any accurate estimate of industrial and economic conditions, yet figures from Russian sources indicate that production in some lines is now approaching, pre-war proportions. Forty per cent more oil was exported from Russia in their fiscal years of 1924-25 than in 1913, but iron and gold production was only about half as great. Textile production has tripled in the past two years and is now on practically a pre-war basis. The pulp and paper industry is now producing about 95 per cent of its 1913 volume. But primarily, Russia is an agricultural country and the progress made in this field is more important than in other activities. In 1925, 225,000,000 acres were sown as compared with 245,000,000 acres in 1913. So far as planting is concerned, the following table shows the progress being made:

AREA PLANTED IN VARIOUS CROPS
(Thousands of Acres)

	1913.	1922	1924	1925
Grain	215,659	117,674	177,579	194,400
Sunflower Seed	2,205	3,989	5,696	6,759
Potatoes	6,938	8,338	10,556	11,257
Cotton	2,119	140	1,229	1,629
Sugar Beets	1,890	456	842	1,193
Hemp	1,755	364	1,796	2,083
Flax	2,774	1,134	2,994	3,676

During the first years of the present regime, Russian money was inflated in somewhat the same manner as in Germany. By March, 1924, however, the Russian Soviet had realized that it must have stable money and some means of securing credit abroad; the whole currency system was changed and a new note, the Tchervonetz, was then issued, having a valued of $5.146. The rouble was given a value of $.5146. Since that time the tchervonetz has been maintained at dollar parity. They claim reserves against their note issues amounting to about 40 per cent.

The question as to the possible stability of Russia is one of interest throughout the world. Outside attempts to upset the present government have received little help from the people of the country. The Russian peasant secured land ownership from this government, with the result that he does not wish a change however little he may believe in the doctrines for which the government stands. The industrial worker receives better pay and greater privileges from the government than he received under the former regime. With both the industrial worker and the peasant satisfied, those who desire to upset the stability of the government have no powerful group within the country to whom they may look for assistance. So far as the economic situation is concerned, the Russian compares conditions under the old corrupt aristocracy with present conditions, and does not desire a return to the old regime. One factor, the importance of which is hard to estimate, is the wholesale effort that is being made to educate the people. As they become more literate, and as there comes to be a more free exchange of thought with the outside world, some knowledge of the progress and standards of living that exist elsewhere will be acquired. The desire for the rewards of individual initiative may then make so great an appeal as to cause them to seek a change in the theory of their government. Education may eventually work great changes in Russia but there is no immediate sign of any marked instability in the present organization.

Distrust of the Soviets stability, antagonism to their theories of economics and the fear that they may repudiate new debts as they have already repudiated the debts of the old regime, have combined to make business men regard Russia as a poor credit risk. Commercial relations have been resumed with Soviet Russia, but there is little prospect that Russian credit will command the confidence of the busines world until they restore the private property of foreigners confiscated during the revolution, and make some provision for the funding of the debts outstanding against the country.

No matter what may be thought of the policy of trading with Russia, the actual facts of the case are that Russia is carrying on a substantial trade with the outside world. In the March issue of the Federal Reserve Bulletin, Russian imports for 1925 are given at 736,934,000 roubles ($379,250,000) as against exports of 559,447,000 roubles ($287,900,000). The greatest portion of this trade is with the United Kingdom, although the exports from the United States last year had a value of nearly $100,000,000.

RAIN.

Why do ya kick when it rains a bit, and why does it make ya throw a fit? Just wait a while, till the clouds have gone, and then take a look at the old front lawn.

Think o' the trouble it saves ya, man. Helps ya to sidetrack the sprinkling can. Think o' the growth that the garden's gained. How 'bout the muscles that are not strained?

Maybe ya planted some seeds last week—waitin' and hopin' ta see them peek. Fate serves this dish in its garden cup the rain comes down an' the seeds come up.

Nature, ya know, has ta have a drink. Maybe a man doesn't stop ta think. Cut out the frettin'—'cause what do ya gain? The most you can do is—just let it rain.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK?

THAT if your newspapers went out of business your city would soon be known as a city of the dead.

THAT it would grow backward so fast that in a short while your streets would be a good grazing place for cattle, and the only traffic you would have would be the people who were moving away or those passing through from one live city to another.

THAT newspapers are modern builders of business.

THAT they are builders of cities as well.

THAT as they progress so will the home city progress.

THAT it is money in your pocket to see them grow, for the better they are the better your city will be.

What you want is a live city to live in, not a dead one to die in. Keep your city alive by supporting your newspapers.

(By C. J. B.)

The winning streak of the Gooderham and Worts ladies softball team of Toronto, which was almost as long as the name, was stopped at James Stevenson Park last night by the C.G.E. ladies, the Peterboro girls winning by the score of 10-1 in a game marked by excellent fielding on both sides.

The game, despite the score, was a spirited contest between two well matched teams. The margin was gained by the locals principally through the splendid pitching of "Babe" Vincent, who struck out ten of the "Distillerettes" and allowed only three hits. Her opponent, Miss White, was unable to strike out one of the C.G.E. girls, and allowed thirteen hits, including two triples and a double.

The attack of the winners was led by Violet Langton, who had four hits, one a triple, in five trips to the plate. She received a rather unpleasant shock when the ball, thrown from right field to head her off on the three base hit, struck her on the head as she reached third base, although the error of the fielder made it possible for her to score. Hazel Plunkett, Babe Vincent and Cathie Taylor were the other heavy hitters. Miss Plunkett made three hits, including a double, while Misses Vincent and Taylor made two each. One of Miss Taylor's hits was a triple.

The fielding of both teams was especially snappy. The work of the two pitchers was noteworthy, as they handled fifteen chances between them without a slip. Miss Lilley, the visiting shortstop, made a number of fine throws to head off runners, rarely missing the chance to get the farthest advanced runner on a force play. Her running mate, Miss Griffiths, at third, made several putouts, one on a double play, by her watchfulness in tagging runners who overran third base. Miss Palmer was loudly applauded for her fine running catch of a foul fly.

Both teams made errors but, for a change, they were more numerous in the outfield than in the infield. Dropped flies and poor throws made up the six outer garden misplays, while grounders caused the infield misfortunes. The one run scored by the visitors, and the four made by the home team in the fourth, were contaminated, but heavy hitting accounted for the other six.

The grandstand umpires had a great time advising Walter Perks, who officiated at the plate, regarding the difference between balls and strikes, but his umps made a very good showing, and was ably assisted by Bob Ross on the bases.

YANKEES SCORE FROM BROWNS

Shocker Brings Home Winning Tally in the Ninth Inning

NEW YORK, July 29 (Caandian Press).—The Yankees were at St. Louis yesterday and won again from the Browns 3 to 2. Babe Ruth struck out three times. Shocken doubled in the ninth and came home on Comb's single for the winning tally.

Boston made it two in a row from Detroit at the Michigan city. Ruffing held the Tigers to four hits to permit a 5 to 4 victory. Boston backed away at Rip Collins over six innings, getting three runs on six hits, one a homer by Regan, two men were on base when Collins was relieved by Dauss, and Jacobson's two bagger scored them.

Red Faber let Washington down with six hits in Chicago, while the Sox hit Reuther opportunely to even the series by a 5 to 2 win.

WIN FOR HYDRO.

CAMPBELLFORD, July 28—St. Mary's and the Hydro provided an exciting game in the Softball Association here last night, the electric boys winning 8 runs to 7. St. Mary's came from behind twice to tie the score, but Cowell's drive in the last half of the ninth was good for the circuit, when the ball got away from Eddie Bush. It was a hard hit line drive that the little St. Mary's fielder failed to hold.

When the Saints put across two runs in the ninth, to tie the score the crowd had visions of another upset, as in Monday night's game, but it was of short duration for Cowell picked out the first strike pitched and made the circuit.

JOPLINGS WIN OVER CHEMONG

Runyon and Cowain Feature in Softball Game Last Night

SCORE 12 TO 3

Jopling's evened the count on Chemong Pavilion last night when they defeated them by a score of 12-3. Two pitchers were used by the Pavilion in an attempt to stem the tide of runs and hits, but Jopling's were using their war clubs with a vengeance.

Tommy Holyman started on the mound for the Pavilion but he was hammered hard. He was relieved by Carl McLean, who fared no better. Dormer twirled a steady, effective game for the winners and held the Pavilion in check all the way.

Jopling's gave their pitcher wonderful support with Runyon and Cowan, the Toronto boys, showing up exceptionally well. "Hap" Bradshaw at second and Jimmy Hall at first also showed up well. The outfield turned in a good game.

Runyon and Cowan were the heavy hitters for Jopling's, the former getting in a couple of extra base drives.

The losers strengethened up considerably for this battle, having Bradburn at first, Lowe at short, Rutherford at third, Mullholland in the field and McLean as extra pitcher. Although the team turned in good ball the pitchers were hit hard and often, and good solid hits won the game for Jopling's.

The rival managers were making freak bets again on the game, and when it was all over Manager Fred Jopling had the extreme pleasure of watching Manager Forler of the losing team scale a big pine tree. When he was a good distance up he gave three cheers for the winners.

The teams:

Jopling's—Dormer, p; Baker, c; Jimmy Hall, 1b; Bradshaw, 2b; Runyon, ss; J. Cowan, 3b; Jack Hall, cf; Gillespie, lf; L. Cowan, rf.

Four Moundsmen Unable to Stop Corsairs for Pittsburgh

NEW YORK, July 29 (Canadian Press).—Pittsburgh won its second straight from the Giants yesterday, Meadows blanking the home club, 6 to 0. Four hurlers were unable to stop the Corsairs, while New York made only five hits and failed to get a runner past second base.

Across the river, the Cincinnati Reds nosed out Brooklyn, 4 to 3. Adolfe Luque yielded but seven hits and fanned nine batsmen. The entire Cincinnati outfield went through the nine innings without a fielding chance.

At Boston the Braves won, 3 to 2, over Chicago in a thirteen inning contest featured by errorless ball and sensational fielding. Singles by Welsh and Brown and a base on balls to Moore filled the bases and spelled victory for the Braves when Burrus singled.

The St. Louis Cards divided a double header at Philadelphia, losing the first, 6 to 3, and taking the second 5 to 4. Cy Williams hit a homer with two on base in the opener.

All the members were present, consisting of Reeve J. A. Middleton, Deputy Reeve George H. Simpson, M.O.H. Dr. J. A. Morgan, and the Secretary.

The minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Dr. Morgan reported small-pox as existing in this district at present.

After consideration the Board of Health recommended that all who have not been vaccinated recently be vaccinated at once.

After discussion of the growing practice of sending cases of certain communicable diseases to Chemong Park during convalescence, it was decided that the M.O.H. investigate the legality and wisdom of such procedure and report at the next meeting.

Moved by Dr. J. A. Morgan and seconded by Deputy Reeve Simpson tht Sanitary Inspector J. A. Jobe have two signs printed and placed on the Chemong Road at each end of the swamp in the fifth concession, prohibiting the depositing of garbage and other refuse therein.—Carried.

RAIN HOLDS UP DAY OF SPORTS

Marmora Field Day Events Were Being Well Contested.

SOFTBALL TOURNEY.

MARMORA, July 29 — The field day organized by the Young Men of St. Paul's Church on the grounds of Marble Cliff Pavilion, Crow Lake, drew a large crowd on Wednesday afternoon. The chief feature was a girls' softball tournament for which teams representing Marmora, Deloro, Madoc, Springbrook, Stirling, Havelock, Norwood, Warsaw and Tweed entered. Owing to rain and other difficulties it was not possible to play the tournment to a finish. The four teams left in the running are Marmora Springbrook, Tweed, and Warsaw, who will play off for the Embury Cup next Monday afternoon in Marmora at the Regimental field day there. Results of played games are as follows:

Deloro ..... 120 321 0— 9
Marmora ..... 002 022 5—11
Umpires—Kerr and Regan.

Madoc ..... 300 704 2—16
Warsaw ..... 236 114 x—19
Umpires—Ralph and Kerr.

Stirling ..... 1 1 1 5 0— 8
Tweed ..... 0 6 3 1 x—10
Umpires—Hughes and Regan

Havelock ..... 2 0 0 0 0—8
Norwood ..... 0 0 4 3 2—9
Umpires—Hughes and Regan.

Norwood ..... 0 0 2 0 0—2
Warsaw ..... 0 2 4 0 x—6
Umpires—Allen and Beckett.

In all these games a good standard of softball was seen, Norwood and Marmora coming from behind in the last innings to win their respective games. On the afternoon's play the Warsaw team looked the possible winners of the tournament, but will find stiff opponents in Tweed. Refreshment booths were well patronized and the dance in the evening in the Pavilion, when Clarke's Collegiates furnished music, drew a great house. An artistic display of fireworks on the Lake at 8.30 p.m. was enjoyed by young and old alike. Dr. A. T. Embury, ex-M.P., donor of the cup, was present in the late afternoon.

May Blush Without Guilt, Munich High Court Decides

MUNICH, Bavaria, July 28.—Blushing when spoken to without introduction by a good-looking girl on the street is not sufficient evidence to show guilt of a crime by an unsophisticated young man, the Munich Court of Appeals has ruled.

Lola Springer, typist out shopping for her employer, lost a 50-mark bill. Retracing her steps she accosted Emil Junge, the first person she happened to meet, and asked him whether he had found the money. Junge stammered that he had not, but his face reddened and Lola had him arrested.

Junge maintained that he had not found any money. He blushed, he said, because he was naturally a shy boy. The Municipal Court fined him 100 marks, and Junge's counsel appealed.

The higher Court, in dismissing the case, held that, while blushing nowadays is a rare phenomenon and might arouse suspicion, it was not as yet accepted as legal evidence of guilt.

HELD CONVENTION

Hope Township Religious Educational Branch Met in Canton Church.

PORT HOPE, July 29.—The Hope Township Branch of the Ontario Religious Educational Association held a convention in Canton Church on Tuesday, July 27.

This township branch has not been active for several years, but through the efforts of Rev. E. Cooke of Newcastle, assisted by Rev. J. Lane of Canton and Rev. D. R. Clare of Welcome, this convention was planned.

Rev. W. E. Fletcher of Oshawa was the representative of the O.R.E.A. and by his addresses did much to make the convention a success.

The programme for the afternoon was as follows:

2 p.m.—Devotional exercises; Rev. D. R. Clare. Roll Call and Report of Schools. Appointment of nominating committee. Address, "Evangelism in the School: When and How," Rev. D. R. Clare. Solo, Miss Hazel Bamsay. Round table conference, Rev. W. E. Fletcher. Supper was served on the grounds.

In the evening Rev. J. F. Lane, the pastor of the church, was chairman. There was a song service for half an hour, followed by devotional exercises by the pastor.

The report of the nominating committee was given as follows:

President—Rev. J. F. Lane, Canton.

Vice-President.—R. C. Symons, Welcome; Sec.-Treas., Mrs. R. R. Elliott, Elizabethville.

Department Superintendents. — Children's, Miss Percy Carroll, Canton; Boys', Franklin Bannister, Garden Hill; Girls' Miss Emma Noble, Perrytown; Young Peoples', Miss Hazel Bamsay, Welcome; Adult, Rev. Crisall, Perrytown; Home Department, Miss Wallace, Wesleyville; Teacher Training, Miss Ada Langdon, Canton. Missions, Mrs. Dawson Beebee, Morrish. Temperance, Mrs. Bert McCulloch, Zion.

Next convention at Morrish; time suggested, September.

Mr. Fletcher commenced his address by asking if the audience thought the "good old days" of their fathers' better than the present?

This is a time of progress. It is seen in the churches. First the lighting system was candles, then coal oil, gasoline, and now electricity.

On the farm, the old way was the sickle, the scythe, cradle, reaper, binder, etc; and now, there are machines where the grain is cut, threshed and cleaned.

So there is growth in the spiritual world.

The farmer selects his seed and plants the seed when the ground is ready for that kind of seed.

Graded lessons are the selected seed to be planted in the little child's mind, which is ready for it.

Mr. Fletcher gave several illustrations of wrong, early impressions, children had because the little minds were not ready.

Responsibility for the winning of the young for God's kingdom was placed on those present.

If young people pass the 'teen age, statistics show that:

(1) Over 20 years of age, only 15 out of 100 are brought into the church;

(2) Over 25 years, 4 out of 100;

(3) Over 30 years, 1 out of 1,000.

The speaker pressed the need of organized work among the young in the Sunday School.

More than two hundred clubs are affiliated with the Amateur Athletic Association, which is the governing body of all amateur athletic sports held in Great Britain. The association has done magnificent work in popularizing athletics since it was organized in 1880.

BILLY EVANS Says

Watch the Sox.

It's a question of legs with the Chicago White Sox.

If Everett Scott's underpinning holds up and Manager Eddie Collins isn't handicapped by his leg injury of last fall, the Sox are going to be troublesome.

Since there are few more important positions on a ball club than short and second, it is easy to figure what the condition of Scott and Collins means to Chicago.

Chicago has great spirit, a remarkable catcher, mighty fine pitching and best of all a smart ball club, well-handled by one of the brainiest managers in the game.

If the Sox have a weakness it is lack of reserve strength. At that, the club is better fortified than last year.

* * *

Yanks Come Back.

In looking over the major league ball clubs in spring training, I ventured the opinion that the New York Americans were a first division possibility.

I went even further and said the club was going to be just as good as it wanted to be.

It is beginning to look as if the Yankees have decided they want to be very good.

After a poor start in the exhibition games, the Boston Braves beating the club its first three meetings, the Yanks began to hit their stride.

When the team started north with the Brooklyn Dodgers for a series of 12 games, it was ready and rarin' to go.

The result of that series is now history. The Yankees accomplished the almost unheard of feat of beating so strong a club as Brooklyn 12 straight ball games.

Of the first 16 games played in the American League, the New York Americans won 13 and lost only three, a matter of 25 out of 28 wins against major league opposition.

Not only Ruth, but the Yankees as a team, are doing a most decided comeback.

* * *

May Upset Dope.

Chick Evans is going to play in the British amateur golf championship.

For those who do not know, if there are any such persons in this wide world, Chick Evans is one of the game's greatest golf players.

While his game hasn't been quite up to standard for perhaps a year, due to business reverses, Evans has the competitive spirit and is best with much at stake.

When he wasn't named as a Walker cup representative, it occasioned much surprise in golf circles.

Recently while in Chicago I learned from some of his friends that the slap handed him by the 'powers that be" in golf, was largely responsible for his decision to journey to England this year and play in the amateur open, as well as several other important events.

It would rather tangle the situation if Evans went big in the British tourney, also prove rather embarrassing to those who selected the Walker cup team.

* * *

Dope Takes Tumble.

Spring training data has certainly been shot to pieces during the first three weeks of play in the major leagues.

The Brooklyn club, at that time was showing the way to the rest of the National League, after dropping 12 straight exhibition games to the Yankees.

On the other hand, the Boston Braves, the sensation of the Florida Grapefruit League, a team picked by the experts to be the dark horse of the National League, was last.

The world champions, Pittsburgh Pirates, away to a bad start, were in seventh place. In the American League, Philadelphia picked by many to win the pennant was sixth, while the highly-touted St. Louis Browns were last.

Many other form reversals featured both races during the first weeks of play. However, the baseball season is a long grind, a matter of six months, in which it is possible to have many upsets.

SECRETS OF STARS INSIDE BASEBALL

as told by Billy Evans

(By Ty Cobb, World's Greatest Ball Player.)

To be a great batsman, a player must have a comfortable stance.

My idea of a comfortable stance is both feet about six inches apart with the weight equally distributed.

Such a style enables the batsman to shift without being in any way handicapped. He can step into the ball or pull back before taking his cut, according to the style of ball pitched.

Keep the arms away from the body when hitting. Holding them close makes a batsman practically helpless on any ball that is pitched inside.

It is also impossible to get any power back of the swing. The batsman is practically forced to hit the ball with the handle of the bat if at all.

With the hands held away from the body as the pitcher makes ready to deliver the ball, the batsman is in a position to bring the hands and arms back and get plenty of power back of the swing regardless of what kind of a ball is pitched.

The grip of the bat, like the stance, should be comfortable. This is largely a matter of personal opinion, but I have always favored spreading the hands a trifle.

I find it is much easier to control the desire to swing as well as the actual swinging of the bat with a spread grip rather than holding the bat at the extreme end of the handle.

When holding the bat at the extreme end in both hands, a player, having made up his mind to hit and started his swing, is unable to hold back, even though he realizes the pitch is a bad one.

The weight of the bat and the size of the handle are likewise a matter of opinion. Few great batters use the same style bat. Once again the point I want to stress is, use a bat that feels comfortable in your hands and is easy to control.

Never press, despite the style of pitching. Always try to be natural.

In particular, do not press when you are in a batting slump. Such happenings are common to baseball and impossible of explanation. They are simply a part of the game.

I strongly favor choking up on the bat when trying to put the jinx on a slump. This naturally shortens the length of the bat, making that much less to control, and to a certain degree lessens wild swinging.

One must have one's hands at the extreme end of the bat to swing wildly. Choking, by shortening the bat, tends to prevent it.

Diamond Disputes Decided

by Billy Evans

Runner is on first base. Pitcher, while off rubber, delivers ball to batter at which he does not offer. What is proper ruling?

* * *

Such an act on the part of the pitcher must be construed as a balk.

The calling of the balk, because of delivery of ball to batsman, while off the rubber, entitles runner on first to advance to second.

The status of the batsman is in no way affected.

If there had been no runners on and the same situation arose, the umpire would rule the pitch a ball, regardless of whether it was over the plate or not.

Indoor ice hockey has been revived as a summer sport in San Francisco after an absence of 10 years.

Moviegraphs

CATALINA ISLAND, Calif.—Thirty miles from the California mainland, faintly discernible, across a blue channel where the flying fishes play, lies the island of Santa Catalina, where Paramount's $2,500,000 sea epic, "Old Ironsides," is being filmed.

Here, as an innocent bystander, and by dint of retrospective fancy, I have participated in the historic battle of the "U.S. Constitution" with the Tripolitan pirates of 1804. And if the completed film retains the pungent savor of the drama here enacted, it will be indeed a memorable offering.

I write this in a little tent, one of hundreds comprising the movie camp, on a narrow neck of land below which the riding lights of Decatur's replicaed fleet wink in the night.

The Battle Over.

About me 1500 men snore after the sweat of battle maneuvers. The tang of powder, the din of cannonade, the shouting of combatants touched almost to blood lust by grip on a flashing saber, the creak of tackle, and the pelt of a stiff sea have bedded the impression of reality deep in mind.

For the hour at least, that dark hulk down in the cove here is the ship by which the young American navy memorialized its heroic exploit in the Mediterranean.

And James Cruze, director, must keep alive in his men the illusion that they are actually making history, not merely mimicking for a movie.

On one side of the Catalina isthmus the old flotilla of 1804.

On the other, far over at San Pedro and Wilmington, the searchlights of the present Pacific battle fleet fingering the skies—a world of modern machinery, steam craft, wireless, of speed and power.

And yet by aid of all these modern devices it is proving a strenuous task to duplicate what Decatur's crew did with calloused fist, warps, windlass and stout hearts 122 years ago.

"We'll Try It Again."

Five times this day, at two-hour intervals of laborious preparation, the cameras whirred for a long shot as the "Constitution" and her enemy maneuvered to achieve the precise swinging broadside desired.

And after each trial the voice of Cruze, whispering over a microphone from his distant camera float, "We'l try it again." All day for one successful shot.

Compared to the making of his "Covered Wagon," which was a tough job, "Ironsides," Cruze says, is far more trying. Storms, fogs, accidents, narrow searoom before the constructed forts of Tripoli and various vicissitudes already have added an additional million dollars to the projected cost of the picture.

Twenty-seven days of shooting time have been lost to date, with the daily budget running about $35,000.

Breakfast at 5:30, box lunch aboard ship, supper at 6 p.m. in the camp, operated like a military establishment. A 12-hour workday. Activities, at first strange and exciting, tending to become monotonous. Long waits between camera shots—men playing quoits, reading, horse-playing, snoozing on the decks, then suddenly tensing to a few moments of furious activity as the call comes from the camera float, with men manning the guns and mounting to the fighting tops. Hard to keep up esprit.

And yet in the mind of most of these extras, a hard-bitten horde supporting the principals—Wallace Berry, George Bancroft, Charles Farrell and Esther Ralston—some stimulus of patriotic pride, some echo of school book history perhaps, which sustains enthusiasm and which is inbuing "Old Ironsides" with a fine sincerity.

Boy Abandoned in 1856, Now Aged, Seeks Relatives

The Rev. Lloyd B. Gilmour of the Five Points Mission, New York, has received an appeal to help establish the parentage of the boy who was left at his mission seventy years ago.

Several years before the Civil War, an English woman accompanied by a boy who wore red top boots landed at Castle Garden. The boy was ill and was kept in quarantine for a few days. In that time his mother disappeared and when he was released from the hospital he was sent to the mission. A few weeks late, a Captain Van Meter, then in charge of the mission, took the boy with others to the Middle West to find homes for them. Attempts to find his mother had failed.

The boy could not even remember his last name. A brother, he said, had died on the voyage and was buried at sea. His questioners submitted several names to him, hoping he might recall his own from them. He selected McCann as sounding most like his. His first name was Albert, he said.

Albert McCann grew up in Farmington, Ill., where he joined a cavalry regiment and served in the Civil War.

At the close of the war he learned the tinsmith's trade and went to Winterset, Iowa, where he found work. There, one day, a girl entered his shop, carrying a bird cage to be repaired. Young McCann delayed the job and the girl called several times for the cage. There is no record of the bird cage ever having been repaired but a year later, on July 8, 1868, the girl, Frances E. Sanford, married the young tinsmith.

Today Albert McCann and his son, Roy, own the Joplin Cornice Works at Joplin, Mo. He is 79 years old and his wife 76.

In writing to the Five Points Mission, Mrs. McCann asked if any information was on record there of the English mother of the boy with the red top boots. At her request Mr. Gilmour is making the incident public.

Pitcher Grover Alexander, who has landed with the St. Louis Cardinals after having been given the gate by the Chicago Cubs, has been playing professional ball for 17 years. His first engagement was with the Galesburg, Ill., club back in 1909.

HELPFUL HINTS BY GOLFING STARS

By Special Arrangement With Colliers' Magazine.

WALTER HAGEN—WATCH FOOT ACTION.

Be sure that you are set properly before attempting to hit the ball. The feet play an important part in the address of the ball, in the back swing, the top of the swing and at the finish. Some pros have gone so far as to say that the action of the feet is everything. This is not all, of course, but without the proper foot movement there is no chance for the beginner to get very far in learning the game.

Foot action is not only essential in golf, but in every line of sport that I know of. I used to play baseball in my youth and reached the point where I had to decide between professional ball and golf.

I learned the game thoroughly. My specialty was pitching and I soon discovered that my feet had almost as much to do with hurling the ball as my hands. At bat I found that there was everything in the way I handled my feet.

The fielders find this true, too. The first thing a shortstop or a baseman is taught is how to stand to receive the ball.

KINGSTON LOSE TO BELLEVILLE

Ouelette Had a Slight Advantage Over Cairns in Pitching.

SCORE 12-7.

BELLEVILLE, July 29.—By defeating Kingston by 12 to 7 here yesterday, the Belleville C.N.R. team remained in the hunt for the honors in the Central Ontario Baseball League. Both played good ball, with Ouelette of Belleville having a slight advantage over Cairns of Kingston on the twirling mound. Vern Weir of Belleville and Harry Batstone of Kingston shared the heavy hitting honors, the former securing a homer and the latter two triples.

CHANNEL SWIMMER QUITS NEAR SHORE

Norwegian Halted By Rough Water Close To English Coast.

BOULOGNE, France, July 29 (Canadian Press). — The English Channel has defeated Olaf Farstad, a Norwegian swimmer. Farstad started at 10.43 o'clock yesterday morning at Cape Griz Nez to swim across to Dover, England, but was forced to give up the attempt at 3 o'clock this morning.

Farstad, who is a policeman, gave up a mile and a half from the English Coast, when rough water made continuance impossible. The performance is considered one of the most remarkable in recent Channel history, for he entered the water without grease, goggles, or headcap, usually deemed indispensable in such efforts.

ALL SAINTS' ROYALS MIDGET CHAMPIONS

Victory Over Kiwanis Team in Closely Contested Game.

The All Saints Royals won the City Midget championship last evening when they defeated Jack Deannard's Kiwanians to the score of 3-2, in a closely contested battle.

The game was a hectic encounter with the teams playing errorless ball, and snappy play was the night's password. The score stood 0-0 till the third innings when Hope knocked a nice single, followed by Jones who gave the crowd the thrill of the evening when he walloped Crary's offerings for a three bagger, bringing in the All Saints first run.

With the All Saints one up, the Kiwanis team got down to playing a little better ball and a few times looked dangerous, but they lacked the punch to score. The score stood 1-0 till the 6th, when Hollingworth, the All Saints keystone sack man hit the ball for a single and Hatton following Hollingsworth whacked the ball for the second three base hit of the evening, scoring Hollingsworth, and Hatton came in on the run later. The Kiwanis team fearing another defeat began to come out of their stupor and buck up. Hall led the attack in the last innings when he knocked out a pretty single. Rishea, the base ump. called him out, but reconsidered his decision to safe. Cotton next knocked a wallop and scored Hall. Holland next to bat knocked one out and scored Cotton, but owing to the darkness the All Saints' players could not see the ball. The next batter was out and the game was ended.

Crary pitching for the Kiwanis, pitched good ball, but was a little shaky at times. Cripps for the All Saints, pitched like a veteran.

A. Kay, umpire in chief; Rishea on bases.

BELLEVILLE TEAM STILL IN RUNNING

Victory Over Kingston Adds Interest To Saturday's Game.

By beating Kingston in a slugging match yesterday, in which the Nationals showed their old-time ability to punish the offerings of Bruce Cairns, the Belleville team remained in the running, a game and a half behind the Petes, and Saturday's game between the two teams at Riverside Park assumes a new importance. A Belleville win would put Walter Gerow's men right on the heels of the Petes, and the latter cannot afford to take any changes with the hard-hitting railroaders. Al. Heckman is slated to do the gunning for the Petes, while Ouellet is the likely Belleville choice in spite of the fact that he worked yesterday. The game should be one of the best of the season, and should attract the biggest crowd of the year. Umpires Alex. Kay and Edgar LeBarr will be in charge, and will send the teams away at 3 o'clock sharp.

ROBBERS TAKE BAG OF MONEY

Force B. and M. Baggage Man To Give Up $65,000.

THREE IN PARTY.

SALISBURY, Mass., July 29 (Canadian Press).—Train robbers obtained $65,000 in cash from a baggage master of the Boston and Maine train at Salisbury Point station to-day. The money had been sent by the Federal Reserve Bank in Boston to the Power River National Bank at Amesbury.

It was reported that three young men appeared in the baggage car just before the train stopped at the station and forced the baggage man to throw off the bag containing the money.

The bandits covered William Jordan, the baggageman, with pistols, and three registered mail pouches were thrown off. Police believe an automobile was waiting in the heavily wooded section that surrounds the tracks at that point. Jordan was thrown from the train and rushed to Salisbury to give the alarm.

The bandits pulled the bell cord of the train, and before it had stopped, leaped from the car and escaped. Before the hold-up they had been passengers in the train, and made their way without difficulty into the baggage car.

THEATRE

AT THE REGENT

J. FARRELL MACDONALD PLAYS TITLE ROLE IN FOX FILMS PRODUCTION AT LOCAL THEATRE.

"The Dixie Merchant"—a Fox Films production, directed by Frank Borzage and featuring J. Farrell MacDonald in the title role with Madge Bellamy and Jack Mulhall, comes to the Regent Theatre Friday for a two day run.

Into this absorbing story of the South are woven thrills, romance, comedy and pathos—all the ingredients of a successful picture—entwined in such a way as to hold the interest from start to finish. Added to this the cast fits exceptionally well into their respective parts and the plot is devoid of complicating kinks.

J. Farrell MacDonald is cast as Jean Paul Fippany, the old Southerner, who is 'The Dixie Merchant" in the story. In this character he gives one of the best performances of his successful career shading the comedy over with touches of pathos—making a real and lovable though lazy personage out of old J. P.

Miss Bellamy plays the part of his spunky little daughter Adia, the only one in the Fippany family who has nerve enough to make the old merchant do anything in a hurry. Her love affair with Jimmy Pickett, son of the wealthy benefector of the Fippany's, adds another real note to the picture.

Frank Borzage, who is noted for his ability to make masterpieces from simple, human stories directed the production and is enthusiastic over the results.

WEATHER CLEARS FOR BIG REGATTA

Withdrawal of Boston Club Only Drawback at Canadian Henley.

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., July 29 (Canadian Press). — After nearly twenty-four hours of continual rain, weather conditions are clearing this morning for the opening of the 44th regatta of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen on the Royal Canadian Henley course this afternoon. Most of the crews up until this morning have been working out in the rain. Indications are for favorable weather this afternoon for the big card of fourteen eliminations contests. With the arrival of the Undines of Philadelphia, the West Sides of Buffalo, and Brockville this morning, all the crews are ready for what promises to be a successful regatta in every sense of the word.

The only drawback has been the scratching of the entry of the Union Club of Boston in the senior eights, whose place will be taken by Winnipeg. This has definitely clinched the question as to whether or not the Hanlan memorial trophy is to return to Canada.

The only possible chance it has of going out of the Dominion lies in the remote possibility of the Detroit junior eight winning both junior and senior eight-oared championships.

After travelling all the way from the Manitoba capital without accident, the Winnipeg club was unfortunate enough last evening to have their double shell fall while being unloaded from the Toronto boat. Argonauts promptly placed their boatman at the service of the Western club and the damaged shell has already been repaired.

LAWYER SCIENTISTS ARE STUDYING SHEEP

Trying to Trace the Family Tree of Rocky Mountain Species

NEW YORK, July 29.—John M. Holaworth, of Port Chester, N. Y., and Lee Parsons Davis, of New Rochelle, left New York on July 27 on an expedition into the mountains of northern British Columbia for the purpose of tracing the family tree of the Rocky Mountain Sheep. They will travel by pack-train and canoe through a practically unexplored region to the headwaters of the Peace River and will be in the north until next October.

The expedition is being undertaken for the United States Biological Survey and Natural Museum of Washington. The main object is to learn the relationship between the Northern Stone Mountain Sheep and the Bighorn sheep of the main Rocky Mountain Range. In addition the explorers will collect specimens of various species of mountain sheep and of cariboo for the museum.

The members of the party are probably best known as members of the legal profession but have also established a notable reputation in scientific circles as explorers and big game hunters. Mr. Holzworth is a former Assistant District Attorney of Westchester County and has figured in several notable court battles. For the past four years Mr. Holzworth has been collecting specimens of sheep and cariboo under special permit from the Canadian Government and for the U.S. Biological Survey.

Most of the travel will be by pack train through hitherto untravelled mountain wilderness country. The altitude being upwards of 10,000 feet, snow storms will be encountered after September 1st. The route will be by Canadian National Railways to Prince George, British Columbia, thence by canoe up the parsnip River to the head of the Peace River. There pack horses will be secured and the expedition will continue by pack-train for the remainder of the trip.

SEARCHERS FIND BODIES OF THREE BOYS IN LAKE

Balsam Lake Gives Up All Victims of Canoe Tragedy.

TWO YESTERDAY.

Recovery of Harold Bakewell's Body To-day Winds Up Search.

FENELON FALLS, July 29 (Special).—The body of Harold Bakewell was recovered this morning at 9.30. It was found near the place where the last two were recovered. This brings to an end the search for the bodies of the eleven victims of the Balsam Lake tragedy of July 2).

Two bodies, identified as Harry Mills of Galt and Vernon Clarke of Toronto, were recovered yesterday. The first recovery was made on the west shore in the vicinity of Coboconk, a mile north of Grand Island, the body being seen floating by four men in a motor boat. Rev. W. J. M. Swan and Ed Lant of Toronto identified it as Mills from general appearance, from a ring with the initials "T. Y. M. C.," apparently standing for Trinity Young Men's Club of Galt, and by a watch which had stopped at 8 o'clock. It is believed Mills carried a letter written to his mother, and which he planned to post in Coboconk.

Clarke's body was recovered in the district being dragged, coming to the surface shortly after searchers had passed over the spot where it had lain. It was not far distant from where the canoe had been beached on Grand Island.

It was stated at first that this body was Harold Bakewell but Lindsay undertakers said that identification had been completed by Rev. Mr. Swan, and Coroner Logan had been notified that it was Vernon Clarke.

Peter Mills, father of Harry Mills, and an uncle, both of Galt, visited the lake yesterday and were at Rosedale, the headquarters for the searchers, when Mills' body was recovered.

City Sends Wreaths.

TORONTO, July 29.—A wreath in token of the city's sympathy will be placed on the casket of each of the boys who lost their lives in the Balsam Lake tragedy, the Board of Control decided yesterday.

There will be a meeting this morning at the City Hall to consider plans for a memorial service for the boys. Representatives from leading public bodies will attend. No decision was made on Controller Hacker's resolution that Sunday next be set aside as a day of mourning for the drowing victims, with a public memorial service in Queen's Park. It will be dealt with at this morning's conference.

ANOTHER HURRICANE EXPECTED ON COAST

Lull in Wind is Reported Along Florida Coast.

SAVANNAH, Ga., July 29 (Canadian Press).—High seas and wind of increasing intensity along the Georgia coast early to-day presaged the advent of a tropical hurricane which, thundering up the Florida coast since Monday, has left damage and destruction to shipping, property, communication lines and crops which may run into millions of dollars.

The weather bureau reports early this morning placed the storm centre near Georgia coast, about 50 miles north of Jacksonville.

A lull in the wind, the usual indication of an approaching storm, was reported at many points along the Georgia coast to-day. Summer residents of the islands along the coast have deserted their homes and fled to the mainland, fearful of the approaching storm.

SHAW URGES RETURN TO GOLD STANDARD

Europe Should Have an International Currency Says Critic

LONDON, July 29 (United Press).—George Bernard Shaw today undertook the self-assumed role of finacial advisor to France, urging a return to the gold standard as a step toward the establishment of a supernational currency for Europe.

"No action is honest enough to be trusted with inconvertable paper currency," said the British sage, "least of all a democratic action. "We must return to the gold standard. We must also begin to work toward an international European currency which should be one of the first concerns of the League of Nations. Inflation is a "casus belli."

Becoming personal, Shaw applied the typical Shavian torch to the dry materialism of the war debt debacle. "The French Government," he stated, "by inflation, has taken from me 90 per cent on the debt due me. The German government took 100 per cent from me. Therefore, instead of preting about disarmament and the like which never prevented war and never will, let's take in the problem of establishing a super national currency for Europe."

"A social organ which could demonetize any state letting its currency fall below par would be something worth working for and would do more to prevent war than all the Washington conventions that ever stabilized armaments by abolishing them.

Not Only Hear But See By Telephone Claims Paper

PARIS, July 29 (Canadian Press)—Le Matin claims that it will be possible within a few months for persons telephoning not only to hear but to see each other.

Edouard Belin, inventor and Prof. Holweck, of the Radium Institute, says the newspaper, after exhaustive experimenting, have succeeded in adapting a principle of telephotography so as to instantaneously transmit likeness and reproduce it on phosphorescent screen.

In the experiments, the distance was small and images indistinct but it is believed apparatus will be perfected until it is possible to transmit a more distinct image over the longer distances.

DOMINION POLICE ASSIST IN PROBE

Inspector Alexander Confers With Provincial Authorities About Liquor Mystery.

TORONTO, July 28. Canadian Press. — With the arrival in Toronto from Windsor to-day of Inspector Alexander of the Dominion Department of Customs, the Federal government allied itself with the Provincial government in an effort to get to the bottom of the poison liquor mystery, which has baffled the Ontario authorities for the last ten days, in which deaths of 18 Ontario people are involved.

Inspector Alexander, who has been on the border making some investigations, reported to Hon. W. H. Price, acting Attorney General, and conferred with him and with General V. A. S. Williams, Commissioner of the Provincial Police, regarding means of rounding up the "master-mind" at the head of the bootlegging ring.

ONTARIO MAY HAVE ELECTION THIS FALL

Report Sets November as Month For Provincial Contest.

TORONTO, July 29 (Canadian Press)—The Ontario Provincial election in the early part of November is forecast in a Toronto report today which says: "Active co-operation of Hon. W. H. Price, provincial treasurer, in the Conservative organization work for the Dominion elections is not mere indication of the affection of Federal and Ontario Tory parties. It is rather emphasis on the decision of Premier Ferguson and his colleagues to hold an election this fall. November has been tentatively fixed as the month and the date will probably be not later than 16th. Contrary statements as to the coming Provincial contest may be disregardeded. Inner Conservative circles have been made aware of the decision both here and in a number of tactical points throughout the Province. In particular those in which prohibition element is strong have had word."

GRESSMAN'S

DENIES REMARKS MADE BY LIBERAL LEADER IN SARNIA SPEECH THAT HE IS PERSONALLY RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF ALCOHOL VICTIMS

Hon. N. H. Stevens, Minister of Customs, Stamps Certain Utterances Made by ex-Premier Mackenzie King as Dastardly Inuendo.

QUOTES EXTRACTS FROM SPEECH AS BASIS

States Liberal Minister of Customs Made an Agreement With Government Distilleries Whereby Denatured Alcohol Was Turned Loose Upon the Public.

OTTAWA, July 30 (Canadian Press).—In an open letter to the leader of the Liberal party, handed out this evening, Hon. H. H. Stevens, Minister of Customs, describes as "dastardly inuendo" certain remarks made by Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King in his Sarnia speech. Mr. Stevens declares that Mr. King attempted in that speech "To fasten in the public mind the thought that I am personally responsible for the death of these thirteen victims of alcoholic poisoning." He quotes from Mr. King's speech as a basis for his declaration.

Mr. Stevens states that, immediately on taking office, he gave orders that not another ounce of denatured alcohol was to be released from any Canadian bond and that this order was being strictly observed. "Therefore," he continues, "if any of this poisonous alcohol is still to be obtained in the Dominion of Canada, it is alcohol that you and your colleagues released on the unsuspecting public, and I may say that from the middle of December last up to your inglorious exit from office, your Government distributed over 175,000 gallons of this poisonous concoction for beverage purposes."

The full taxt of the letter follows:

Open Letter to William Lyon Mackenzie King

Sir.—During all the years that I have known you, I have endeavored on all occasions to extend to you that courtesy which is due from one gentleman to another, and to render you the respect pertaining to one holding the high office of the first minister of the crown. However, your utterances at Sarnia on the 27th instant, as reported by the Canadian Press, call for a public reply, and, I regret to say, were so false and unutterably unfair that it will be necessary for me to characterize them in language which heretofore I have refrained from addressing to you.

Owing to an illness that has prevented me from taking any part publicly in the campaign I have been unable to deal with these questions, and I am taking the opportunity to addressing this open letter to you.

You are reported as saying:

"Mr. Stevens, the Minister of Customs, has announced that mounted police had been strung along the border, yet we read that thirteen people have died as a result of drinking poisoned liquor smuggled into Canada."

This dastardly inuendo is deliberately calculated by you to fasten in the public mind the thought that I am personally responsible for the death of these thirteen victims of alcoholic poisoning. Having given utterance to this invidious insinuation in your usual cowardly fashion, you seek to shield yourself by adding such words as:

"I am not going to say that Mr. Meighen's administration is responsible . . ."

But in case this might be taken as in exoneration, you later add:

". . . That the smuggling took place in Tory Ontario with a Ferguson Government in office. . . ."

Thus having attempted to poison the public mind, and, in your own estimation safeguard yourself from effective reply, you drawn certain ludicrous comparisons. You have ever been an adept at evasion, equivocation, and subterfuge. You never take a public stand on any clear, definite ground, but by using false statements and half-truths seek to prejudice your hearers, and by these circuitous methods secure for yourself access to office.

I will now give to the public briefly some of the facts in connection with the distribution and sale of poisonous alcohol.

First, according to sworn evidence, your own minister of customs, Honorable George H. Boivin, made a secret arrangement with Mr. W. J. Hushion, of Montreal, a former Liberal member, whereby the said Hushion and the notorious James Cooper and their associates of the Dominion Distillers would be permitted to distribute hundreds of thousands of gallons of alcohol in distinct contravention of the Canada Excise Act. This alcohol was denatured by adding thereto brucine sulphate, and dilythlyphthalate, and when sold within the Canadian law, is limited wholly to certain hospitals, infirmaries, and for medical purposes for external use exclusively and "must on all occasions be labelled poison." But under oath the notorious James Cooper, Leo George and W. J. Hushion, declared that they knew it was being purchased from them for beverage purposes. Your Mr. Boivin's only excuse was that it was to be exported to the United States contrary to the laws of that country as well as those of Canada. Much of this never left Canada at all and was distributed in Ontario, and while some of it went to the United States it was equally poisonous to Canadians as well as Americans. This was done with your knowledge and you publicity in the House of Commons exonerated and defended the action of your Minister of Customs in this regard.

Immediately on taking office I issued orders that not another ounce of this class of alcohol was to be so released, and this order is being strictly observed and carried out. Therefore, if any of this poisonous alcohol is still to be obtained in the Dominion of Canada it is alcohol that you and your colleagues released on the unsuspecting public, and I may say that from the middle of December last up to your inglorious exit from office, your government distributed over 175,000 gallons of this poisonous concoction for beverage purposes.

If, with your usual facility for evasion, you advance the argument that the present unfortunate cases of poisoning are due to "wood alcohol," then the answer to your venal insinuation is that for at least forty years, wood alcohol has been manufactured in Canada for industrial purposes and released without any restrictions whatsoever. This disposes of your inuendo that the alcohol causing the poisoning was necessarily "smuggled."

Another matter referred to by yourself, and by one of your ex-Ministers, Mr. Motherwell, and also Mr. Goodison, speaking on the same platform with you at Sarnia, namely, that the information which formed the basis of my charges in the House on February 2nd last "had been stolen." This statement is absolutely and without qualification false and known by you to be false. All of the information that I used was secured by me openly and honorably, such of it as was given me by the Commercial Protective Association was obtained by them at their own expense and had previously been submitted to you personally and to the former Minister of Customs and other ministers of your Government, but your refusal as Prime Minister to act on this information forced the business men of Canada to appeal for a Parliamentary committee to investigate, an appeal which had been made to you over a year previously and which you had refused to grant. The result of the inquiry by this Parliamentary committee, composed of four of your own supporters, one Progressive friendly to you, and four Conservatives, is set forth in the report to Parliament, which report was adopted by Parliament and which you on page 5130 of Hansard referred to in the following words:

"We accept the report as it comes believing that it creates what, in the opinion of the members of the committee of this House, is most necessary in the interests of our country at the present time."

And further you say:

"With respect to every recommendation in that report my government is in entire accord."

I now quote from this report (which was accepted in its entirety by you) the following clauses, which brand your utterances in Sarnia with a more complete denial than the privileges of the public press will permit me to express.

"In the opinion of the committee such unmatured spirits are unfit for human consumption and their release is injurious to the public health."

This action is peculiarly apropos to the false statements made in your address at Sarnia regarding alcoholic poisoning, for it must be remembered that four orders-in-council were passed by your government just prior to the last election authorizing the release of unmatured alcoholic liquors.

The report also declares that:

"The Honorable Jacques Bureau, then Minister of Customs, failed to appreciate and properly discharge the responsibilities of his office."

Also referring to the smuggling into Canada of stolen cars:

"The procedure followed by the Department in dealing with cars stolen and smuggled has resulted in an advantage to the thief and receiver as against the owner of the car."

Sir, I brand your utterances at Sarnia as knowingly false and pregnant with slanderous inuendos unworthy of one who has been entrusted with the leadership of a great political party.

DENIES CHARGE.

HON. H. H. STEVENS
who denies the charge laid against him by Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King at Sarnia yesterday.

OTTAWA, July 30 (Canadian Press).—The replacement of colored dining-car crews with white crews on the Canadian National Railways main line between Montreal and Toronto in all probability will be referred to the C.N.R. Employees' Board of Adjustment No. 2, according to A. R. Mosher, president of the Canadian Brotherhood of Railroad Employees. CIVIC HOLIDAY DATE CHANGE

Council Will Consider Bylaw Making Date First Monday in August.

COMMITTEES MEET

Peterborough's Civic Holiday, after coming for years on the second Monday in August, will be observed on that date for the last time this year. That is, if the Aldermen at their September meeting consider the matter in the same light as they did last night at a meeting of the Finance committee. The question of changing the municipal holiday to agree with the majority of Ontario cities in holding it on the first Monday in August, was first brought up by a letter from a special committee of the Kiwanis club. The letter came too late for any action this year, but a by-law is to be introduced at the September meeting changing the date for years to come.

Acting Mayor N. Phelan and Alderman J. M. Greene were appointed to interview Mrs. Allan and the Rev. J. D. Paterson regarding any steps the city can take in connection with the death of Raymond Allan.

The matter of arranging a date for visiting the power house of the Orillia Water and Power Commission was left to Aldermen Phelan, Meyers, and Cotton. The matter of having the aldermen visit this municipally owned plant was brought up by a correspondence in which R. R. Hall, K.C. arranged with the Orillia authorities to make this visit possible.

The purchasers of the recent issue of debentures, through their solicitors' suggested that a number of changes be made in the city's by-laws covering the method of assessing for sewers and sidewalks, to bring them into more modern form.

Representation at the meeting at the Union of Canadian M[unici]ties, in which Peterborough is the only city that has maintained membership from its inception, was left to acting Mayor Phelan, while City Clerk Armstrong and Assessor Henry will attend the meeting of the Ontario Municipal Association.

Immediately after the finance meeting the Board of Works convened with Alderman Ackerman, the acting chairman, presiding. The main subject of discussion was a new road roller and it was decided to buy one from the Sawyer-Massey firm. It was felt by the engineer and aldermen that roads could be built more cheaply with a heavier roller equipped with a scarifier, and that they would be so much better than those now being built that the requests for pavements for strictly residential streets, such as Weller street, would cease.

The construction by-law for paving Rubidge street was ordered prepared, so that surface drainage and sewer work might be started. It was also decided to pave the Smith street bridge to prevent further damage by water.

JUDGE SPEAKS IN PLAIN TERMS ON WRONG DOING

When Sentencing Two Young Men on Serious Charge.

AT HAMILTON.

Youths Blame Bootleg Liquor For Their Shocking Crime.

HAMILTON, July 30 — In the bootleg tragedy which has appalled Ontario, Judge Gauld, in County Criminal Court yesterday, said these deaths were "a shocking corroboration of the travesties that exist under the present system."

His Honor gave vent to some plain speaking on the matter as a result of a shocking case involving two young men and two girls, one under 14 years of age, of Brantford. They came to this city one night a few weeks ago ostensibly to attend a theatre. Instead, they all went to "a rooming house," where the girls were plied with liquor and defiled.

Reginald Brown, one of the youths, was sentenced to two years, less one day, in the Ontario Reformatory. He had a previous record. Gus Gardham, the other man, was sentenced to from three months to two years, less one day. They were charged with carnal knowledge. They blamed liquor—bootleg hootch—for their plight.

Judge's Scathing Comment

Judge Gauld's scathing comments follow: "These cases reflect a condition which from being an insidious unseen menace some years ago has now grown to a defiant, barefaced danger. Statements made at the preliminary hearing, and also in this court, disclose the ease and certainty with which intoxicating liquors can be procured, and the open facilities for the indulgment of carnal acts such as these two young men stand convicted of. It has been the experience of this court for many months that a great part of its labors is given over to the hearing of cases dealing with violations of the Temperance Act, and their inseparable association with lust and vice of various kinds. And this notwithstanding the unceasing and vigorous efforts made by the officers of the law to see that the temperance laws enacted by the Province of Ontario are respected and properly enforced.

Simple Matter to Get Liquor

"It was a simple matter for these young men to secure liquor in the City of Brantford. It was just as easy to find it in the City of Hamilton, and also to locate a house of assignation for the accommodation of themselves and their paramours. The recent horrifying news of many deaths and cases of blindness in this vicinity from drinking liquor, illegally procured, is a shocking corroboration of the travesties that exist under the present system."

Many citizens wonder why the keeper of the "rooming house" who would rent rooms to two men, one of whom was accompanied by a girl under 14 years of age should escape punishment.

Edison Seeking Fee For Use Of His Name

NEW YORK, July 30 (United Press).—Thomas A. Edison has brought suit in Federal Court to prevent the further use of his name by the Edison Radio Corporation.

His petition states he has never had any connection with the radio company. In addition to an injunction the inventor wants compensation for whatever benefit the company may have derived from his name.

SIX MEN TAKEN IN LIQUOR CASE

Arrests Follow Indictment For Manslaughter By U. S. Jury.

BAIL NOT GRANTED.

TORONTO, July 30. Canadian Press. — The police dragnet closed in this morning on Canadians who were indicted yesterday at Jamestown, N. Y., on charges of violating the prohibition law, and who are suspected of being connected with the poison liquor trade which has caused the death of 18 persons in Canada and a larger number on the American side.

The Toronto police took into custody Max Wurtzman and Henry Goldstein this morning, while Hamliton officers arrested Ben Kerr, Niagara Falls. The police took from their beds this morning James Sacco, 25, single, John H. McRae, aged 53, a contractor, and William Herbert, aged 32, a salesman.

All six men are held on charges of manslaughter, without bail.

Hon. Mr. Price stated this morning that further arrests in connection with the drive might be expected today. The arrests in Toronto are stated to be the first definite step towards a general clean-up of bootlegging fraternity in this city. The police are on the lookout for two or three other Toronto persons who are implicated. It is stated from other sources that there will be considerable action today toward unravelling the trail of poison liquor throughout the province.

Max Wurtzman and Henry Goldstein appeared in police court this morning. In both cases it was charged that on July 24, in the City of Toronto, they did slay and kill William Maybee and Olive Guertin, Maybee and Mrs. Guertin were the first Toronto victims of the alcoholic poisoning wave.

FLOOD DAMAGE IN JAPAN HEAVY

Property Loss About $5,000,000, While 300 Lives Are Thought Lost.

HOUSES SUBMERGED.

TOKIO, July 30 (Canadian Press) The meagre news that trickles in from the flood area in Niigata Province reveals a terrific toll in death and destruction. Latest reports fix the dead, injured and missing at about 300, and the damage to property at $5,000,000. The village of Tochio was the hardest hit of all communities. At this place 1,500 houses were demolished and many people drowned. In the entire flooded area some 8,000 houses were submerged.

THE WEATHER.

July 30—Pressure is high from the Northwest States across the Great Lake to the Atlantic, and low over the Southern States. The tropical storm has moved inland to Alabama, and appears to be dispersing. Scattered showers have occurred in Ontario and Western Quebec, while in other parts of the Dominion the weather has been fair.

Forecasts: Lower Lakes and Georgian Bay—Moderate winds; fair and a little warmer.

ANNIVERSARY OF START OF WAR FINDS BALKAN AREA DISTURBED AND MUCH UNREST IN NEAR EAST

League's Influence Has Prevented Resumption of Fighting in East.

THOUGHT WANING

France Disturbed By Syria and Britain Fears For India.

(By Clifford L. Day, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

LONDON, July 30. — On the 12th anniversary of the battles which began the world war, the Balkan area, where the first shots in that conflict were fired, was upset to-day by intrigue and irregular battles which might at any time raise the spectre of war in Europe.

The latest of the irregular clashes occurred this week at Krivabalanka, on the Jugo-Slav-Bulgarian frontier. Only the intervention of the League ofNations to date has prevented open hostilities. Once these got well started the major powers of Europe would soon be involved in another catastrophic struggle.

Many informed observers to-day believe that the League's influence is waning, principally because of the rerecent difficulties at Geneva and the failure to effectuate the Locarno agreements for peace and security.

If the Locarno commitments are not lived up to it is the opinion of many persons that the League would be unable to prevent the spread of hostilities once they began in earnest.

The Near East is also a disturbing factor of the peace of Europe. Owing to the difficulty France is experiencing in controlling her Syrian mandated territory, the French public is genuinely disturbed over reports of the French reverses and the uneasiness is aggravated by the secrecy behind which the French troops are operating in the Near East.

Great Britain is carefully watching developments in this sector. There is always the possibility that the rebel influence may spread to the British mandates in the Near East or to India. In this connection the Earl of Reading has just returned from a term as vice-roy. He traced the current unrest in India to the disturbing effects of the world war. Agitation is increasing daily in Britain for the strengthening of the army and aid defences in India. A symptom of this agitation is the campaign of the Conservative Morning Post to emphasize the potential threat of Soviet Russia against British interests in India.

Best Purse Wins Title Says Australian Member

MELBOURNE, Australia, July 30. — United Press. — "Granting of British titles is becoming an 'absolute scandal, a question of trading, where the best purse wins,'" Laborite Representative McGrath charged in the Lower House of Parliament.

McGrath said that he had no doubt some Australian principals were expecting to receive titles when the Duke of York, King George's second son, visits Australia in 1927.

He ended by offering a resolution pointing out that the granting of titles is contrary to the sentiment of Australians, but the House adjourned without voting on it.

NO AMENDMENTS TO FINANCE BILL

French Deputies Vote To Expedite Progress of Poincare's Measures.

LARGE MAJORITY.

PARIS, July 30 (Canadian Press) —The Chamber of Deputies today voted against the submission of amendments to Premier Poincare's financial measures, thereby greatly expediting the progress of the bill through Parliament in the opinion of political observers.

The vote was 350 against 201 for suppression of the right of the Deputies to propose amendments to the measures which must now be accepted or rejected as introduced by the Poincare ministry.

The measures which will come up in the Chamber tomorrow morning are expected to produce tax receipts of 2,458,000,000 francs in 1926 and 9,192,000,000 francs in 1927.

GIRL DROWNED AT ROSEDALE

Tiny Visitor Falls Into Canal Near Scene of Balsam Lake Tragedy.

BODY RECOVERED.

LINDSAY, July 30.—Betty Alchen, 2½-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alchen, of Oshawa, was drowned this morning at 11 o'clock in the Canal at Rosedale. Mrs. Alchen, who intended spending the summer at Rosedale, was visiting at the house of Bridge Tender Suggitt. While the mother was upstairs this morning the child wandered to the wharf and toppled off into the water. Mr. Suggitt rescued the little one and the pulmotor from Lindsay worked two hours over her, but life was extinct.

The drowning, following the Balsam Lake tragedy, has cast quite a gloom over Rosedale.

NOISELESS AUCTION.

ROTTERDAM, July 30.—Holland steps to the front with a noiseless auction. The buyers sit in numbered chairs watching a dial that shows the range in prices. When a person desires to drop out he presses a button on his chair and the one left at the end gets the article.

KNOX CHOIR PICNIC.

Members and Friends Have Enjoyable Outing at Cobourg.

Knox Church Choir with their friends held their annual picnic to Cobourg yesterday. The afternoon was spent playing softball, which caused much nervous strain upon the four umpires under the capable direction of Andrew Mackenzie as umpire-in-chief. The fielding features were numerous—mostly of missed opportunities—but a splendid catch by Rev. J. A. Mackenzie deserves special mention.

At 6.30 the entire party, 72 strong, assembled at the United Church, where the Ladies' Aid had prepared a most sumptuous repast, which was thoroughly enjoyed by all. Following the supper a brief program was arranged during which H. J. McCannan filled the office of chairman most acceptably. Rev. W. McDonald spoke of his pleasure at being present at such a jolly gathering and after referring to the evidences of the social capabilities of the choir as well as those musical, related a story of the "Macs." Mrs. Huffman at this point expressed the thanks of the choir to the committee who had arranged the picnic. Rev. Mackenzie once again demonstrated his ability as an entertainer of great merit in reciting in humorous fashion "The Charge of the Light Brigade," followed by Whitcombe Riley's "Out to Old Aunt Mary's," in more serious vein.

A motion proposed by A. Pitchford, seconded by Mrs. Wood, was heartily presented to the Ladies Aid of Cobourg for the splendid way in which they had entertained the choir at supper, to which Mrs. Winters responded most graciously. Rev. Dr. Brown of Cobourg also extended greetings to the visitors.

Before the Doxology was sung a vote of thanks was tendered by R. J. Devey and Mrs. Williamson to the friends of the choir in providing transportation for the occasion.

The party then adjourned to the beach to enjoy the fine band concert and later dancing at the pavilion. The picnic thus ended proved to be one of the most successful ever held by the choir.

All the arrangements were most capably handled by the men of the choir.

THREE MEN HELD FACE CHARGE OF MANSLAUGHTER

Hamilton Men, Out on Bail, Are Re-arrested With Companion.

MISTAKE MADE.

Re-arrest of Two Men Follows Criticism of Magistrate's Action.

HAMILTON, July 30. — On the instructions of Hon. W. H. Price, Acting Attorney General, three men alleged to be implicated in the bootleg tragedy, were arrested on charges of manslaughter last night by Detective Crocker and Provincial Inspector Ward.

The three men are: Joe Romeo, Italian; Edward Miller, a youth, who were really re-arrested, and Harry Sullivan of the Ideal Kennels, Main street East. They are being held without bail. Romeo and Miller were arrested on Tuesday, and were held on nominal charges of vagrancy until Wednesday morning, when they appeared in the police court and were admitted to bail in sums of $2500 each. Mrs. Veronica Sullivan went bail for Miller, and Mrs. Perry, wife of Rocco Perry, went bail for Romeo.

Magistrate Jelfs Criticized.

Magistrate Jelfs was the target of criticism by the Provincial police because he admitted the two men to bail. He explained last night that he did so because yesterday when they appeared before him he asked the Crown Attorney if the latter had a more serious charge than vagrancy to lay against them? When the Crown stated that there was no serious charge at present, His Worship said he deemed it proper, under the circumstances to admit Romeo and Miller to bail at $2,500 each.

The fact that they were rearrested last night supports statements made earlier in the day by the provincial officers that the release of these two men was a mistake as "they hold the key to the situation." The arrest of Sullivan is another development considered significant, as he is said to have been questioned at police headquarters on Wednesday subsequent to Miller's arrest, but denied all connection with the bootleg tragedy, and was not held.

Valuable Information Secured.

Miller, it was said, gave the police much valuable information, and signed a statement. When Sullivan was not held it was later stated that "Miller was taking the fall for higher-ups."

From what can be learned here tonight, the arrest of these three men has virtually completed one vital phase of the police investigation. All three men are said to be boot-leggers. All of them, it is further alleged have handled the poisonous liquor, which D'Angelo, the local Italian being held in Milton jail, sold to victims in Oakville, who died early last Saturday morning.

Ninety Indicted.

BUFFALO, N. Y., July 30.—The indictment of about ninety Buffalo and Niagara Falls men by the Federal Grand Jury at Jamestown yesterday on charges of violating the prohibition law signalized the breaking up of one of the most important illicit liquor organizations in prohibition history, in the belief of Federal officials.

The organization had ramifications as far west as Detroit and as far east of the Atlantic Seaboard, and was declared to be one of the biggest sources of bootlegging on the continent. Disclosures concerning this huge rum ring eclipsed in public interest the developments in the investigation into the distribution of poisonous alcohol in Western New York and Ontario, which resulted in the deaths of more than two-score persons. Buffalo police announced that they had located 2,000 gallons of a 4,400 gallon shipment of poisonous alcohol. Much of the remainder was disposed of in small lots throughout Western New York and along the Canadian border.

Jacob Frye Surrenders.

NEW YORK, July 30.—Another development in the widespread investigation was the surrender of Jacob Fry of this city to Federal authorities, with a confession that he sold five gallons of alcohol obtained from James Voelker, alleged poison-liquor distributor, to the proprietor of a Lockport drinkery.

Frye says he sold the tin of bad alcohol, not knowing it was poisonous, to Mrs. Peter Haber, wife of the owner of the Union Hotel, Lockport. Mrs. Haber and Walter Saltys, bartender, are charged with manslaughter in having sold liquor which caused several deaths.

The Federal authorities took their open step against the ring last May 17, when they raided the Third Ward Political Club, on Thirteenth Street, Niagara Falls. About 12,000 gallons of alcohol and 5,000 gallons of whiskey were destroyed. Later the permits of the Jopp Drug Company and the Falls Tonic Company were revoked.

ARMY CRUSADERS VISIT LAKEFIELD

Capt. Barker Gave Short Address On Work Done in England.

LAKEFIELD, July 29. — Two members of the Church Army Crusaders visited Lakefield on Sunday morning and assisted at the service in St. John's Church. One read the lessons, and the other, Captain Barker, spoke of the work done by the Church Army in the Old Land, giving a short historical sketch and explaining some of the various departments. He took his text from the 35th and 36th verses and part of the 40th verse of the 25th chapter of the Gospel according to St. Matthews: "For I was an unhungered and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me. . . . Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

The visit of these Crusaders was a great inspiration and one which was much appreciated as a privilege.

There was no service in St. John's Church in the evening, and Rev. W. Cox and a number of his parishioners motored to Peterboro for the services in St. John's Church and in Victoria Park given by the Crusaders.

The band concert held on Thursday evening last week was one of the most successful ever held in Lakefield, the attendance being very large, and there was great approval expressed of the performance, all of which was most encouraging to the bandsmen, who have been making a special effort for these open air concerts.

The following was the program:

March—"Lynton."
March—"Ranger."
Waltz—"Sweetheart."
Overture—"Tryme."
March—"Old Black Joe."
Waltz—"Rosalind."
Overture—"Queen City."
March—"Auto Club."
National Anthem.

The Baptist, Regent Street and United (Presbyterian) union excursion was held last Friday, per steamer "Stoney Lake," to Wallace's Point, where a programme of sports was run off. The superintendents of the Sunday schools, Messrs. A. J. Kidd, H. R. Wagar and J. Nicholls, were in charge. There was a record attendance, and a delightful time, which, with gratifying financial returns combined to make it one of the most successful excursions held from Lakefield.

Two years ago the children, headed by a small but vigorous committee, held a very successful regatta on the river just opposite the dock. This is an ideal course, superior to those at Stoney, Clear or Chemong Lakes, and there is plenty of room for a real regatta as there is lots of room for spectators. Last year it was planned to repeat the performance, but it was postponed until it was too late. This year steps have been taken to revive it, and, if possible, make it an annual affair. The youngsters had a creditable cash balance two years ago, which has been lying in the bank ever since.

FRIDAY, JULY 20, 1926.

ON THE INCREASE.

The fact that three cars from the State of Ohio which passed through Peterboro yesterday carried banners endorsing the candidature of one Henry as sheriff may merely been the result of the occupants' idea of a joke.

The Examiner, however, prefers to believe that the charms of the Kawartha district have attracted so many Cleveland people this summer that it is considered worth while to carry on political propaganda over here.

Anyway, the banners seemed to be evidence to that effect, and the incident serves to call attention to the fact that an unprecedented number of visitors from Ohio is in this district at the present time, the increase perhaps being due to the success of Canada-Cleveland day in June when this country received an unusual amount of advertising.

The effect of such an influx of tourists is being felt in many lines of business and is ample justification for the efforts made to stimulate the tourist traffic and to secure for this district its share of visitors.

HEROIC WORKERS.

Balsam Lake gave up the last of its dead yesterday when the eleventh body was recovered by the searchers.

The grim and labourious task was thus terminated.

Of those workers, voluntary and paid, who have so faithfully carried out the sad duty of recovering the remains of the eleven victims of the war canoe tragedy, it is impossible to speak too highly.

Men toiled long hours at the oars and with the drag nets in a broiling July sun with no thought of anything but the necessity of claiming as quickly as possible the victims snatched by the waters of Balsam Lake.

Day after day, from early morning until darkness made the work impossible, these workers remained at their task, scarcely stopping to snatch a hasty lunch.

It was gruelling toil, and when success finally crowned their efforts and the harvest of the dead commenced, only men who steeled their hearts with grim resolution to finish their mission could have carried on.

To these men and to the cottagers and campers in the vicinity of Balsam Lake who gave them every assistance general thanks is due.

TAKING CHANCES.

Agitation for safer conditions at summer resorts should not be confined merely to condemning the use of canoes.

The accident at Balsam Lake should serve to give warning of the danger of overloading any boat, canoe or otherwise.

Everybody who knows anything about our lakes and rivers knows that it is quite the usual thing to cram too many passengers into small power craft.

The spectacle of a small launch powered with an outboard motor and so loaded that her gunwale is only a few inches above the water is all too common, and in view of the suddenness with which storms spring up on some of Ontario's inland lakes, there is a very serious element of danger in crowding such boats with passengers.

The canoe is a menace when it is carelessly or inefficiently handled; other boats used so much at summer resorts become equally dangerous when crowded beyond their safe capacity or when chances are taken by those in charge of them.

Banning canoes will not solve the problem; the public must be educated to think always in terms of safety if accidents are to be materially reduced.

AN INEXPLICABLE FEATURE.

One of the inexplicable features of the Balsam Lake accident that will undoubtedly be incisively dealt with when the inquiry commences is revealed in an interview with Edwin Lant, one of the boy members of the camp whose story of the trip made to Coboconk on the night before the tragedy throws new light on the affair.

Lant, only a youngster, was the coxswain of the crew which started out on Monday night for Coboconk.

There were fifteen in the party, but Lant, after watching his crew work for some time, ordered a return to the camp because he was dissatisfied with the way in which some of the boys were paddling.

The expedition returned to Long Point, and eight of the crew named by Lant as inefficient paddlers were taken out, and the remaining seven eventually made the trip to Coboconk and return in safety.

Yet the following night when the camp director was arranging his crew to make the ill-fated trip, seven of the eight boys discarded by Lant the evening before as inexpert paddlers were selected to make the trip, and only two of the crew who had accomplished the journey in safety were included.

Why, in view of the fact that the mission of the expedition was to bring back several other boats, nearly half of the crew should have been comprised of boys whose paddling was so bad that the youthful coxswain of Monday night's crew refused to cross the lake with them is one of the unfathomable mysteries surrounding the tragedy.

LOCOMOTIVES ON THE STREETS.

Secretary Hoover, of Washington, was strictly accurate when he referred the other day to automobiles as "high-speed engines running helter-skelter over our streets and highways;" for that is what they really are, says The Ottawa Journal. He was also right as to conditions on both sides of the line when he said: "We allow anybody to drive a more dangerous engine over the countryside at the same speed as a locomotive, and to do it after not more than a few days' instruction." That they kill 20,000 people annually, injure 600,000 or more, and destroy $600,000,000 worth of property—"more than ten times the disaster of our railways"—he regarded as the inevitable consequences of the liberties given to the drivers of these destructive engines.

It is, of course, futile to use intemperate language about the matter; but we must all soberly realize that we have got to put on our thinking caps. Secretary Hoover was talking to the police chiefs of the United States and Canada, meeting in convention at Chicago, when he made the foregoing observations, and was referring to their two great problems—crime and the regulation of automobile traffic. He was aware, as should be everybody, that the police cannot be ubiquitous. They cannot watch every mile of the public highways, nor every block of city streets. Unless there is a ready disposition on the part of the people, whether on foot or in autos, to co-operate with the officers of the law, very little can be done toward checking recklessness or lowering the annual toll on life and limb. That is the outstanding fact in the situation.

Autoists are not, however, different from other human beings. They are reluctant to become informers. It would expose them to misunderstanding as to motive, and also to considerable personal inconvenience. That reluctance would, however, be greatly modified if all sane operators of motor cars were banded together for the explicit purpose of making our streets and highways safer than they now are. It must come to that. There would seem to be no other way.

A LIMIT TO BIG CITIES.

The urbanization of North American has been a salient and startling fact of the past half-century. The process has been going on much longer in the United States than in Canada because that country had a far earlier start in population and development. In New York State it began about 1860. Twenty years before, there were 500 manufacturing towns and villages in the State, each local community being nearly self-sustaining. Grain was brought to the local grist mills, lumber to sawmills, cattle to slaughter-houses, hides to tanneries and wool to carding, spinning and weaving mills.

Conditions were similar in Ontario and remained so until a much later period. In the 'seventies there were many such communities in this Province which have since dwindled or lost their industrial character. In New York State today there are actually fewer persons living on farms and villages of less than 2,500 population than in 1820. Only 10 of the 56 counties had an increase in rural population in the past decade. Eleven cities account for more than 86 per cent. of the population growth of the State between 1850 and 1920.

There are several causes for the change. Railroads, coal, steam-engines and machinery are among them. Small mills gave way to larger ones which could install unlimited automatic machinery because they could have steam power, and could get coal cheaply by rail or water. The railroads over which they shipped their products brought more distant agricultural regions into competition with the local farmers.

Industrial concentration has gone apace producing ever bigger cities which absorb the life of the smaller industrial towns, with some exceptions, of course. Is it possible that the city, after it passes a certain size, will begin to shrink and become subject to the law of diminishing returns, like an industrial plant itself? George Soule, in The New Republic, argues that such is the case. Cities are beginning to impinge on each others' watersheds. New York in pursuit of water has already approached the Mohawk Valley, hundreds of miles away. The highways have become congested with traffic. Terminal charges and trucking now account for a much larger part of the retail prices of food products in New York than the freight charges to the city from points across the Continent. The more the people the greater the land values. Rents, costs of production, and costs of living generally, rise to uneconomic levels. Taxes also soar. The annual cost of local government in New York City is $151.66 compared with $56.44 in a typical smaller city and $27.91 in a village. Says Mr. Soule:

> "It is not likely that we shall go back to the small, scattered, self-sustaining communities. But with proper regional planning, we may perhaps have medium-sized, non-congested towns surrounded by farming and recreation regions, in which land values, crowding and costs do not progress beyond the mark of economic and social inefficiency."

The future may, therefore, not be with the big city but with the smaller one. The greatest industrial magnate in the United States, Henry Ford, has begun the decentralizing policy in his own undertakings, and plans to distribute the units of his system so that the workers in each may have easy access to the surrounding country and combine factory labor with rural homes and occupations.—London Advertiser.

EDITORIAL NOTES AND COMMENT.

The political fight will soon get out to the sidelines, and the campaign will be on in earnest.

Early fall fairs run into unusual opposition in the form of a Federal election, but are likely to survive the ordeal.

The use of canoes of any kind at Boy Scout camps has been officially banned. But it should be remembered that other craft are dangerous if they are not handled with care.

Some of the attacks made upon the canoe are evidently the work of people who have never been in one.

Both Mr. King and Mr. Meighen are to be in the West at the same time, but neither is likely to be of much help during the harvest.

Just how widespread has been the sale of poisoned bootleg whiskey in Ontario the authorities have been unable to determine. The only way to be safe is to leave all contraband stuff strictly alone.

Sir Francois Lemieux, who is o continue the customs probe, might commence by inquiring into the cruise of the revenue steamer Margaret, which has been introduced as one of the election issues.

The manager of Kingston's Industrial Fair, R. J. Bushell, may be a Progressive candidate in Frontenac-Addington, in which case it is easy to name one constituency in Ontario where the campaign will not be a quiet one.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

CHICAGO, July 30.—(Canadian Press). — Sensational reduced unofficial estimates of the 1926 wheat yield in the Canadian Prairie Provinces brought about a lively upturn of wheat values yesterday. Closing quotations on wheat were strong at virtually the day's top figures, 2 1-2 to 3 1-2 net higher, with corn 1-2 to 3-4 up, oats unchanged at 1-8 off and provisions varying from 25 decline to 10 gain.

The newest Canadian crop estimate came from a leading Chicago expert who has made an extensive tour of the spring wheat belt, who says hot weather and insufficient moisture have greatly curtailed wheat prospects in the last month. His forecast is much below any other recent figures, and is roughly 100,000,000 bushels less than was harvested last year in the Canadian territory referred to. According to this authority, the three Prairie Provinces will harvest this year not to exceed 279,000,000 bushels—Manitoba 35,000,000 bushels, Saskatchewan 196,000,000 and Alberta 48,000,000.

An unexpected result in wheat quotations at Liverpool contributed further strength to the wheat market here. Besides the weather map failed to show rains which had been reported in Canada and the forecast was for fair and warm conditions there, undesirable at present. Meanwhile, export business today amounted to 500,000 bushels and the premiums paid for wheat at the Gulf of Mexico were relatively one cent a bushel higher. Vessel room was chartered for 250,000 bushels to be shipped from Chicago to Buffalo.

Unfavorable crop reports from Iowa and Illinois, together with high temperatures and lack of rain in various parts of the corn belt, gave firmness to the corn market. Demand for oats lagged. Provisions averaged lower as a result of eastern selling.

MONTREAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 30. — (Canadian Press).—Owing to the majority of foreign bids for Canadian grain being out of line with local exporters' views, the export trade on the Montreal market yesterday was again curtailed. Only an odd lot of oats and barley changed hands. The domestic trade in oats has also been quiet, but prices recorded a fractional advance.

The feature of the flour trade was the stronger feeling that developed for spring wheat grades of flour and prices were advanced ten cents per barrel. The demand for these grades was extremely dull. The winter wheat situation was quiet, but prices were unchanged.

Extreme dullness marked the trade in millfeed, but the undertone to the market was steady. The demand for standard grades of rolled oats was light and prices ruled steady.

The local and export trade in butter was quiet and values were easier. The receipts were 4,688 packages.

Under a continued small enquiry, cheese prices exhibited a weaker tone and western grades were offered at 16½c to 16 5-8c per pound.

The egg market was without any new feature to note. Prices were unchanged and the trading was quiet. The receipts were 1,396 cases.

STERLING EXCHANGE.

MONTREAL, Que., July 30. — (Canadian Press).—Sterling exchange rates were quoted here yesterday as follows:

Sterling demand, $4.84 7-8.
Sterling cables, $4.85 3-8.

FATHER'S LUNCHBOX.

(Suggested by "Just Mother," Virginia, Minn.)

When Daddy comes from work at night
We all just run!—and this is why:
Inside his lunchbox there's a bite
Of cake, a sandwich, maybe pie.
Of course there's pie upon the shelf
That we could go and get ourselt,
But it's more fun to wonder what
We'll find, a piece of cake or not.

When Daddy comes we all just run
And take his lunchbox right away,
For things like that are lots more fun
Than things you had for lunch today.
It's fun to see just what he had,
Eat from a lunchbox just like Dad,
Guess if there's cake, and guess the kind,
And never know just what you'll find.

But you'll find something, you can just
Be sure of that, when Daddy comes,
And something more than only crust
And something else than only crumbs.
We never knew him yet to bring
A box without a single thing.
I think he leaves it there for you,
For that's the way that Daddies do.

HOW DO YOU SAY IT?

(By C. N. Lurie.)

Common Errors in English and How To Avoid Them.

(Copyright, McClure Syndicate.)

"KEEPING COMPANY."

If you wish to be precise in your choice of words, you must not use the expression, "keeping company." So say the grammarians and the purists.

But the trouble lies in the fact that they do not provide us with a good substitute for the expression. How shall we describe the state of affairs when a young man is paying attentions to a young woman, and she is accepting them, but they are not engaged to be married? One recent writer says

"In fact, there is no way of expressing this idea very definitely. One says that a certain young man has been 'going about' with a certain young woman, or that he is a 'frequent caller'."

It seems probable, that the phrase, "to keep company, will survive, and will eventually be received into good language. Some of the dictionaries recognize it, but they call it "provincial."

AS ITHERS SEE US.

The Peterboro Examiner,
Peterboro, Ont.
Dear Editor:

With your kind permission I would take this opportunity of expressing a visitor's views of traffic conditions on the streets of this fair city.

Mr. Editor, I would compliment you on the beautiful streets, residences, and public buildings, which your city should feel proud of; also business conditions compare favorably with the rest of our wonderful province.

I am not a pessimist nor a chronic kicker, but must register my views as above, re traffic conditions. It probably was my inexperience in driving on your streets, but the fact remains that I only avoided a serious crash several times in my two days sojourn in your Lift-Lock city.

No doubt your traffic laws are identical with other cities, but surely are not enforced, as the drivers of all vehicles appeared to me to be the most careless of any city which I have visited.

In explanation would say that three times in two days, cars, which were parked on the wrong side of street in the middle of the block in business section of the city, swung out from the curb and made a right turn, into the face of oncoming traffic—on the right side of the street. One of these I have been informed was an alderman, who no doubt helped form your traffic laws.

Another complaint, or might I say peculiarity of some of your drivers, is the fact that several times I was nearly sideswiped by trucks, which were parked by curb, and when I was passing immediately, without warning by hand or horn, swerved out into traffic, endangering all cars in the immediate rear.

No doubt your city drivers are acquainted with the above conditions and govern themselves accordingly, but what about visitors who are unacquainted with the haphazard way your traffic is governed.

Now, Mr. Editor, I feel sure that your city fathers do not wish these conditions to exist and am dropping you this line to let them know that it is glaringly noticeable to outsiders.

Assuring you that I have the welfare of Peterboro or any Ontario city at heart. I am an old Ontario boy. I am,

Yours truly,
A VISITOR.

DR. FRANK CRANE'S DAILY EDITORIAL.

"JUSTICE IS DENIED TO NO ONE"
By Dr. Frank Crane.

A heart warming example of the beautiful and humane common sense of legal system took place recently in Los Angeles.

A woman whose husband had abused, beaten and thrown her out of the house, applied for a divorce.

Witnesses testified to extreme cruelty. There seemed to be every reason for granting the decree. The judge was about to pass favorably upon the case.

Then Hizzonnor was struck by a bright idea.

"How long has your husband been cruel to you?"

"I've stood it for twenty years."

Twenty years! Aha! That altered the csae.

Hizzonnor plunged deep into the sea of legal red tape and arose triumphantly bearing a strand with which he proceeded to gag and bind justice thusly:

"In that case you are not entitled to a divorce. In the case of extreme cruelty the law contemplates suit within four years. The theory of the law is that if a wife submits to a course of conduct for more than four years it cannot be construed as extreme cruelty.

"Case closed. Decree not granted."

In other words, if a wife isn't killed off or driven to despair in four years the treatment isn't cruel—at least it is not extremely cruel.

If she lasts for twenty years the benign kindness of the law intimates that she can go on lasting indefinitely.

Cruelty that lasts too long is not cruelty at all!

If such cockeyed reasoning is logic and such myopic decisions justice, this world is madder than the proverbial March rodent.

"Justice is denied to no one," is the motto carved with pious correctness on the wall of the Hall of Justice in this city.

"So's your old man" would make another fine motto—just as appropriate and with as much influence.

Law which hands out decrees like the above is so near-sighted it couldn't see far enough to read either motto anyway.

POSTPONED RATIFICATION OF FRANCO-AMERICAN WAR DEBT

Will Not Submit the Finance Bill Until After Vacation.

STRIKES SNAG.

French Premier Seeks To Stabilize Franc in Near Future.

PARIS, July 30. — The French Government has apparently postponed indefinitely any effort to obtain ratification of the Berenger-Mellon debt agreement and hopes to get new concessions. It will not submit either the Washington or London debt accords to Parliament before the vacation period and this means that they will not be considered by the French Parliament in any event before next Fall.

In response to a question from a member of the Chamber Finance Committee yesterday, M. Poincare replied:

France will pay to the limit of her capacity.

Pressed for specifications the Premier said he did not intend to ask approval of either the Berenger-Mellon or Caillaux-Churchill agreement before the parliamentary vacation.

Inasmuch as it had been M. Poincare's intention to submit these agreements to Parliament without recommendation it is evident that he has made some change in his program.

Wants "Safeguard" Assurance

It was understood last night that the purpose of the Premier is to try and obtain from Washington an accompanying letter similar to that attached to the Caillaux-Churchill accord stating that in the event of German reparations payments under the Dawes plan falling below 50 per cent. of the expected normal, England would agree to reconsideration of the terms of the French debt settlement.

This decision of the new French Government to allow the debt settlement with America to slide for the time being may cause some surprise in the United States, especially in view of the fact that the Briand-Caillaux Government had decided to forego any change of improving the Washington agreement and to ask ratification by Parliament as an essential part of the Government's financial program based on the experts' report prime provision, which was obtaining foreign credits.

But here one must note that M. Caillaux's financial plan builded on the proposed stabilization of the franc through the aid of credits which could be obtained only after ratification of the debt accords.

M. Poincare's Policy Different

M. Poincare has a different policy. Not only does he not seek to stabilize the franc now, considering that this move should await another and fairer day, but his slogan is that France must save herself, and that without the use of foreign credits.

Therefore, of course, he does not see the same need as did M. Caillaux for ratification of the debt treaties.

It is to be noted that M. Poincare has always opposed any debt settlement with either England or America which did not one way or another link France's payments to England and America with Germany's payments to the Allies. Although Foreign Minister Briand as Premier authorized Ambassador Berenger to sign the agreement with the United States Debt Commission a distinct majority of the new Cabinet has gone on record against ratification of the agreement.

And so it is probable that the French Government will send an

PLEADS FOR DOG.

PASSIAC, N.J., July 30.—"Send me to jail, but don't shoot my dog." That was the plea of 18-year-old Josephine Grabouise when a judge offered the choice between jail and a fine of $6.80 for failing to obtain a license for her dog. She was escorted to jail, but was released after being in the day when a friend paid the fine.

Owner is Painfully Burned on Way to Rideau Ferry Regatta.

SMITH'S FALLS, July 30.—Harold Bresee of Syracuse, N.Y., who has a cottage near Newboro' on Rideau Lake, suffered the loss of his big motor boat by fire on Wednesday afternoon, it burning to the water line in midstream. Mr. Bresee was himself badly burned about his arms, neck and face when his boat took fire, and was brought down to the Public Hospital here. Mr. Bresee was leaving his boathouse to attend Rideau Ferry Regatta, when flames shot up from the engine.

H. B. EMPLOYEE DIES IN NORTH

Drowned in Kochochene River, Far From Railway, Two Weeks Ago.

BRINGING BODY OUT.

FORT WILLIAM, Ont., July 30.—Alvin Alexander, 20 years old, temporarily employed by the Hudson's Bay Company as a warehouseman on Kochochene River, was drowned in that river on July 14, according to word received at the local headquarters, the body having been recovered a week later, on July 21. Kochochene River is a stream draining a small lake into Kahkahnagami Lake, and the warehouse is four days' travel from Ombabika, on the transcontinental railway.

The boy's father, David Alexander, of Hensall, Ont., has asked to have the body brought to the track and sent here for interment and the officers of the Hudson's Bay Company are making every endeavor to accede to this request, which involves a four-day trip of considerable difficulty, over many portages and shallows. It may be hard to find men to undertake the trip under the conditions.

Young Alexander was a stranger in the district, having seemingly come to the north country for a life of adventure in the wilds and, chancing to find the situation that he filled with the company available, had accepted the engagement a few months ago.

VANCOUVER, B.C., July 30 (Canadian Press).—Women will be excluded from beer parlors in Vancouver after August 15, the British Columbia Hotelmen's Association decided last night. Placards will be placed at the entrance to all beer parlors stating that women will not be served. The order affects only Vancouver establishments, but a recommendation has been issued by the association urging members in other parts of the province to take similar action.

Mussolini Lands Catch Has Fish For Supper

ROME, Italy, July 30.—Dressed in a gray cape, wearing a jaunty cap and carrying fishing tackle, Premier Mussolini drove his car at high speed from Rome to Anzio, a seacoast town, jumped into a waiting motor boat and, in company with Admiral Sirianni, opened the throttle and started seaward.

When safe from prying eyes on shore, Mussolini started fishing. He got a number of fish, all toothsome red mullets which are cherished by Italian gastronomists. Mussolini gave some to the admiral and kept the others himself, saying, "Watch me eat these to-night."

Then Mussolini hurreid back to Rome, having given the people a practical demonstration of the recent campaign to promote the fishing industry on all Italian shores.

WOMAN TO FACE PERJURY CHARGE

Evangelist is Summoned To Appear Before Grand Jury.

MORE EVIDENCE.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., July 30.—A subpoena was issued last night summoning the Rev. Aimee Semple McPherson before the County Grand Jury next Tuesday, when that body will take up the question of possible perjury in Mrs. McPherson's previous appearances before it.

On July 13 Mrs. McPherson gave the Grand Jury her sworn statement of her alleged kidnapping and captivity for six weeks—from May 18, when she vanished, clad in a green bathing suit at Ocean Park Beach, until June 23, when she hiked into Douglas, Ariz., clad in the grey apron and unbarked shoes and collapsed in a hospital with a story of being held captive in a Mexican shack.

New Evidence Obtained

The evidence prompting the revival of the Grand Jury quiz yesterday occasioned a secret meeting of the entire District Attorney's staff, Keys and ten assistants. Deputy District Attorney Joseph Ryan explained the evidence he collected in the past week at Carmel-by-the-Sea and Monterey, Cal., where, according to Ryan, Mrs. McPherson's story of having been kidnapped last May 18 and held captive in Mexico until June 22 has been refuted by a dozen witnesses.

A number of inanimate exhibits are additional evidence; these include sample of handwriting, fingerprints, a Bible, a grey apron, and several books.

Identified by Witnesses

Three witnesses submitted sworn statements identifying as Mrs. McPherson the veiled and goggled "Mrs. George McIntire," who drove up to a secluded Carmel bungalow and stayed there behind drawn blinds with "Mr. McIntire" from May 19 to 29. Ten persons positively identified "McIntire" as Kenneth G. Ormiston. Ormiston at one time was operator of Mrs. McPherson's church wireless station here, and the man whose wife threatened to name the woman evangelist in suits for divorce and alienation.

One of the occupants managed to cling to the overturned craft until rescued, but Faunterary sank immediately. GOVERNMENT FEARS RELIGIOUS WARFARE

Attorney-General of Mexico Orders Disarmament of All Catholics.

MEXICO CITY, July 30. — Canadian Press. — El Universal Grafico says that Attorney General Ortega has issued orders for the disarmament of all Catholics throughout Mexico, because of reports that some Catholic groups are holding secret night meetings in the capital, causing the authorities to fear the possibility of their planning forceful opposition to the government's religious programme.

It is customary in Mexico for many persons to carry pistols. The police to help them in the task, the newspapers say, will be furnished with lists of all the names of members found in the files of the League for the Defense of Religious Liberty and other Catholic societies.

CAR PROTECTION NOT REDUCED

Tax on Cars Is Reduced Says Meighen at Summerside.

CLOTHING TAXED.

SUMMERSIDE, P.E.I., July 30—Closing his two-day tour of Prince Edward Island, "one of the bases of the Dominion," as he put it, Premier Meighen last night spoke to a crowded hall. It had been arranged that he should speak in the open, but a severe storm swept over the Island and the outdoor meeting had to be abandoned.

For the first time in his tour the Prime Minister met with comment from the back of the hall, but the comment was brief.

"The King Government did not reduced the tariff on automobiles. Are you surprised to hear me say that?" Mr. Meighan asserted.

"Yes," interrupted a voice.

"'You will be still more surprised when you hear me say that they did," Mr. Meighen shot back, and the crowd laughed.

Protection Same As Before

He maintained that the King Government, by removing the luxury tax on Canadian-made cars, had restored the protection to manufacturers of automobiles in Canada as it was before.

"Liberals say that prices of automobies have been reduced," Mr. Meighen continued.

"Of course, they have been reduced. They have been reduced because the Treasury loses the money Every dollar saved by the buyer of a car is a dollar taken from the Treasury. If the Treasury can afford it, all the better. But the King Government, while removing the luxury tax from Canadian-made cars, has increased the sales tax on the poor man's clothes. When we were in power that sales tax was 3 per cent. Mackenzie King's Government raised it to 6 per cent. Two years ago they reduced it to 5 per cent.; it now stands at 5 per cent. The highest we ever had it was 3 per cent.

"These apostles of Liberalism reduced the tax on the rich man's car, but increased the tax on the poor man's coat.

"I see," Mr. Meighen continued, "that Mr. Mackenzie King, replying to this argument of mine, which I have advanced before, asks why I did not move to reduce the tax on clothing. Mr. King says that if I had moved to reduce it, he would have supported me.

Government Had to Do It

"Think of the Prime Minister of a country saying the reason he did not put legislation there was that the Opposition did not move it. If it was right, what kind of a Prime Minister is he that he did not introduce it? A private member of Parliament or a Leader of the Opposition cannot indicate legislation of that kind under the rules of Parliament, and the former Prime Minister knows it.

"The puerility of it all! Imagine the leader of a Government saying that the reason he did not legislate was that the Opposition did not make him!"

SHOW DOWN GRANTED.

Investigation Into McPherson Case To Be Further Continued.

LOS ANGELES, July 30 (Canadian Press).—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson's demand for a "showdown" in the investigation of her disappearance case has been granted. District Attorney Asa Keyes declares the demand will be met with the presentation of "new and startling" evidence before the Grand Jury, which reconvenes next Tuesday.

The Grand Jury also will be asked to consider whether any of the witnesses at a previous sitting including the Los Angeles pastor, were guilty of perjury.

Authorities claim to have evidence that Kenneth G. Ormiston, former Temple radio operator and friend of the evangelist, visited Carmel during the time the woman identified as Mrs. McPherson was there.

Archbishop Collapses While Confirming 5,000

MEXICO CITY, July 30. — (Associated Press.) — The Archbishop of Mexico, the Most Rev. Mora y del Rio, fainted from exhaustion in the Cathedral on Monday during the hours in which he confirmed about 5000 children.

The great assemblage, fearful that the Archbishop had been mortally stricken, dropped to their knees and prayed for his recovery. Attendants carried the venerable prelate to a nearby room and hurriedly administered remedies.

The Archbishop revived, and shortly, despite the almost frantic protests of his associates, returned with tottering steps, and continued the confirmations. Again later he officiated at the Cathedral, although very weak. The Archbishop is 72 years old.

NEW YORK, N. Y., July 30 — (Canadian Press).—According to an announcement made here by Charles Wendell, director, every phase of Canadian home life, resources, industries, products, etc., will be demonstrated at a Canadian exposition to be held here in January, 1927.

Mr. Wendell's announcement said the Canadian and United States railways and Canadian manufacturers had combined to bring the vast resources of the Dominion to the attention of people in the United States.

Displays of the lumber industry, the mining and refining of gold, the fisheries, fur-trapping and many exhibits of manufactures are planned, Mr. Wendell said. Royal Canadian Mounted Police, French-Canadian maids from Quebec Province wearing the colorful costume of the past generation, Canadian Indians and hardy fur-trappers from the Northwest will be present at the exposition, he said.

Miniature displays are being made to bring to the attention of the visitors copies of actual scenes offered in Canada showing both winter and summer sports.

Mr. Wendell said the exposition would be extensively advertised throughout South America for months prior to the opening so as to interest the South American buyers and visitors to come to the United States during January to attend and see what Canadian manufacturers have to offer the South American countries. Delegations of various organizations and trade organizations from South America are being invited with a view to making business connections with Canadian manufacturers, Mr. Wendell added.

An extensive radio programme has been planned, according to Mr. Wendell, and one month in advance of the exposition every radio broadcasting station in the United States will be asked to co-operate and broadcast Canadian programmes and Canadian information.

Mr. Wendell said Mayor Foster of Toronto and Mayor Martin of Montreal had signified their intention to attend as guests of the United States committee and assist with other leading men of Canada and the United States at the official opening by Mayor Walker of New York.

According to Mr. Wendell, the United States Exposition Committee includes Charles M. Schwab, United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, James W. Gerard, former Ambassador to Germany; Bishop William T. Manning of New York, Theodore Roosevelt, Vincent Astor, Governor A. Harry Moore of New Jersey, George W. Wickersham, former United States Attorney-General, and a large number of other prominent men.

The Canadian committee now being formed includes Mayor Martin of Montreal, Sir John Aird, President of the Canadian Bank of Commerce; Lord Atholstan of Montreal and Senator Lorne G. Webster of Montreal, Mr. Wendell stated.

FAMILY STORY IS RECOUNTED

Taylor Family of South Verulam Hold Reunion at Homestead

DATES FROM 1792

KING'S WHARF, July 30.—The Taylor family of South Verulam held a reunion at the old home recently, which was attended by all the members of the family, including grandchildren and great-grandchildren. The day was ideal and a pleasant day was spent by all. The history of the Taylor family back to 1792 was read by Mrs. John Henry Taylor, and many interesting events are recorded.

In November, 1792, Johnny Henley Taylor was born at St. Mary's Church (village), near Torquay, Devonshire, England.

In February 1st, 1793, Agnes Bennett Bartlett was born at Stoke Gabriel, near Totness, Devonshire, England. On Sept. 19th, 1814, these two were married, and they were blessed with a family of eight children, Ann, Bartlett, Susan, Marie, Johanna, Elizabeth, Agnes, John and Thomas.

On April 6th, 1833, they sailed from Torquay, Devonshire, England, for Canada on the Brig Oscar. There was a total of 33 passengers on board and the brig held a cargo of spirits in the hold. The wind blew contrary and landed them in the Bay of Biscay, where they were for a whole week before they again set their faces towards the new land. During this time, on account of heavy seas, many of the clothes of the passengers became wet from the dashing of the seas over the brig, and the sea became so bosterous that the hatches were closed down till the storm abated. The hold of the ship became very foul, but after the storm had passed the hatches were again opened, the ship aired and the clothing brought to deck for drying. However, the wind was still high enough to blow some of their blankets away. Another passenger, carrying a light into the hold of the vessel to see after his belongings, started a fire and a near panic, but Susan, second daughter of the family, with great fortitude and presence of mind, seized a tea-kettle and managed to put out the fire.

The ship Oscar took seven weeks to cross the Atlantic. They finally landed at quarantine some place on the St. Lawrence. Having a clean bill of health, they were soon allowed to leave. The youngest son, Thomas, a lad of six, in the time since they first set sail, became very much attached to the sailors and life at sea, so much so that when they embarked he had hidden and it required quite a search to find him. They finally landed at Montreal. From Montreal they journeyed up the St. Lawrence to Cobourg by boat. In many parts, owing to the swiftness of the current, the craft had to be towed by oxen on the river bank. This took two weeks. The family suffered many privations. Bread was hard to get and shelter nearly as hard. In one case the family slept soundly on the kitchen of a farm house.

At Prescott they took another load, passed on up through the Thousand Islands and Lake Ontario to Cobourg. Here they rested a day or two, and then on to Gore's Landing. Mr. Taylor went to Peterboro, rented a house and returned for his family. This journey was made by waggon and by water via Rice Lake to Peterboro. At Peterboro they moved into another house, where they passed the winter. In the spring Mr. Taylor worked at finishing a house for another man and then lived in it. This man was unable to pay him in money. Best information is that the man was Col. Sparks.

The price was $2 an acre, and the transfer of the property, lot 10, concession 9, Verulam, was entered in the name of Taylor. From then, 1837, until this date these lands have remained in the same name, and is now in the second and third generation of Taylors. Mr. Taylor also bought property in Bobcaygeon, the lands being lot 4, west side of Bolton street. He sub-divided this into five lots with a roadway, giving one lot to each of his then living children. Of these two lots still remain in the Taylor branch and one lot in the Robinson branch. The others have passed out of the family.

While Mr. Taylor was working at house building in Peterboro for no money his wife provided for the family needs by dressmaking and millinery. She also kept the family needs supplied while Mr. Taylor went to Verulam and built his first log house. This was on the east hundred acres on the field familiarly known as the "Old Orchard" field.

In 1837 Ann Bartlett, the eldest of the family, and the two boys, John, 16, and Thomas, 10, came to Verulam. They walked the whole distance, carrying their clothing and a few provisions on their back. The route followed was a blazed trail through the woods for much of the way. They crossed Pigeon Creek somewhere between Cowan Bridge and the old Floating Bridge. The three waded water to their waists before coming to the bridge proper. About three miles south of Bobcaygeon they came to a heavy swamp. This is the swamp between Mr. Fulton's and Andrew Falls' lands at the present time. In crossing this swamp they were guided by a little dog. They had to jump from one log to another, and as it was getting dark, sometimes they slipped off the logs and into the water, and had to help each other out. After crossing they came to an empty cabin, known at one time as the McConnell property. They entered, lay down and slept, tired, wet and hungry. Next day they reached their destination and cabin built by their fathers. This was built by logs, roofed with bark. A barrel was used as a pig-pen. One day a bear came for the pig. He got the pig, but Thomas, 10, drove him away and recovered the pig and put it back in the pen. But Mr. Bear, as bears are fond of young porkers, returned later, got the pig and increased the hardships of these pioneers.

The first thing to do was to clear a fallow for putting in some grain. During this chopping Thomas split his toe with his axe. He bandaged it up and went on with his work.

Supplies of food and clothing were brought from Peterboro on a man's back, and later when the crop was grown, the wheat had to be back-loaded through the woods to Sturgeon Lake, then to Fenelon Falls by rowboat to be ground. This had to be rowed back again to the landing known as Jones' Clearing and back again through the woods home.

A cow was bought and brought from Peterboro. John Taylor carried straw on his back from Emily Township to feed her. Oxen were added later, but no horses were had for many years.

The Verulam property eventually went into the possession of Thomas Taylor. His brother, John, had died when a young man from the hardships of pioneer life. Thomas Taylor married Mary Ivison. They lived happily, if often uncomfortably, together till he was taken at the age of 46 from the effects of a too strenuous pioneer life. During his time he was a local preacher, teacher of singing and music and a leader in his community for good. His name is connected in municipal history as an agitator for school privileges. He gave the land for the first school site where the present Red School stands. School was held in his house in the [illegible] time. Preaching services were also held in his house. He was a [illegible] builder and contractor, building the first wooden bridges in Bobcaygeon, the first grist mill, and helped with the first saw mill for Mossom Boyd. Their house was known as the open-door for all who passed that way, and after his death it was then "Aunt Mary." She was beloved by all. The key of her house was lost. The door was scarcely, if ever, locked. No one who passed that way was refused admission, a meal or a night's lodging. This old home has since passed to the oldest son, John Henry, while the old house has been replaced by the present structure.

On the west half of the lot now lives Thomas Clayton Taylor, a great-grandson of the first pioneer we are honoring today, John Henley Taylor.

Ann Bartlett Taylor — Following the death of her husband, Joseph Robinson, Ann Bartlett opened a store in Cavan, and on one occasion drove a team of horses and a lumber waggon to Port Hope. On this occasion she took a load of grain to Port Hope and returned with a load of goods for her store. At this time the only ministers to be had were visiting ministers, who travelled on horse-back. They held service wherever they could get a congregation.

Susan Taylor—During the boyhood of William Given, he and his mother crossed from the present ranch of William Jones, opposite the Boyd farm, to where William Thurston lives. Next to this farm, during the hour of two before they returned, several sheep were killed by wolves.

Hannah Taylor—Joseph Brown, husband of Hannah Taylor, laid the first shingles ever put on a roof in Peterboro. The shingles were hand made and were still on the roof when he saw it 35 years ago.

MAYORS MEET

Touring under the auspices of the University of Montreal, a party of a hundred officials, professional and business delegates from Quebec, have returned from Western Canada. They were greeted at Toronto by Mayor Foster, who is shown here shaking hands with Hon. Mederic Martin, Mayor of Montreal. The Mayor of Montreal said to the Mayor of Toronto, "It's hot." And it was—about 86 to be exact.

Don't Miss This.

You're behind the times if you don't know that Cod Liver Extract is one of the greatest flesh producers in the world.

Because it contains more vitalizing vitamines than any food you can get.

You'll be glad to know that McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets come in sugar coated form now, so if you really want to put 10 to 20 pounds of solid healthy flesh on your bones and feel well and strong and have a complexion that people will admire ask McDermid & Jury, Bond's Drug Store or any druggist for a box of McCoy's Cod Liver Extract Tablets.

Only 60 cents for 60 tablets and if you don't gain five pounds in 30 days your druggist is authorized to hand you back the money paid for them.

It isn't anything unusual for a person to gain 10 pounds in 30 days, and for old people with feebleness overtaking them they work wonders.

PERDUE FAMILY HOLDS REUNION

Thirteen Brothers and Sisters With Families Gather at Homestead.

FORTY PRESENT

KING'S WHARF, July 30.—The family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perdue held a re-union recently.

It was held at the old homestead which is little changed, having been kept in good repair. It is a picturesque spot, sloping from the hill where the house stands to the lake, and a short distance from the house is a grove of pine trees that has been left, and by the size of the trees and the numbers there it is almost priceless.

The pioneer work of the dear old parents, long since gone to rest, still remains; the stone fences, the little water courses, the bee hives which have been there for years, the orchard which is one of the finest in this part, also the cooler-room, a relic of old days.

The family, thirteen in number, with their husbands, wives and families who came from different parts of Canada and the United States, all gathered there to spend one day together and to be all at home once aafin. There were some forty present including clergymen, and uncles of the family. At four o'clock all sat down to a magnificent banquet, where justice was done to a dinner of fowl, and everything that could be desired. There were two tables set outside on the lawn under the apple trees and all sat down together. It was a picturesque sight never to be forgotten. Speeches were made by several present.

The members of the family are William, who holds a prominent position in Peterboro; Fergus in business in Rochester, N.Y.; Dr. Garnet in Detroit, Mich.; Thomas and Victor who are in business for themselves in Detroit; John, a farmer on the boundary between Ops and Emily; Peter on the old homestead, and Vincent across the road; Mrs. Thomas Sullivan (Mary) of King's Wharf; Mrs. Herbert Hennessey (Polly) of Ennismore; Mrs. Eugene Maloney (Gertie) of Ennismore; Miss K. A., R. N. of Detroit, Mich., and Miss Ruby, teaching S.S. No. 6, Emily. Others present were: Rev. Father McGuire and Father Guiry of Peterboro, Father McAuley of Ennismore and Father McCarney who is in charge at Downeyville during Father Galvin's absence; also three aged uncles, Messrs. William, Edmund and Patrick Herlihey all of Emily. Those who were fortunate enough to be present will never forget the scene, and this wonderful family of the good old pioneer parents.

PLAY 'MOLLY BAWN' DRAWS BIG CROWD

Good Acting Exhibited in Repeat Performance in Harmony Hall.

DOURO, July 30.—The play, "Molly Bawn" put on by the young people of S.S. No. 12, in the schoolhouse a month ago was repeated in Harmony Hall on Tuesday evening and drew a large crowd. The acting of some of the players is remarkably good. Miss Annabel Carlow as the heroine, Molly, was spendid. Perfectly natural throughout, with no hesitation, her acting was fine. Cecil Bolton as the crabbed, testy old grandfather was fine and Miss Ruby Bolton as Sara, the pert maid, could not very well have been improved on. Everett Sloan, as the hero, Alex Carlow as the heroine's brother, W. Floyd as Captain Chadwell, Miss Helen Tedford as Marcia, the evil granddaughter, David Forsythe as the solicitor, Fred Bolton as the ridiculous Potts, and Miss Julia Leahy as Lady Cecil Stafford, and Roland Tedford as a servant were fine performers.

Dr. Munro's orchestra with five violins: Misses Whatley and McMurray, Hector Munro, Olan Leahy and Dr. Munro; Mrs. Taylor at the piano and Gerald Crowe, cornet, furnished excellent music. In the interludes between acts, songs were sung in splendid voice by Mrs. Charles Foster of Warsaw, Albert Bryan, Arthur Carveth and little Miss Dorcas Lloyd of Warsaw. Recitations were given by Mrs. P. Lloyd of Warsaw and Albert Bryan. James Healey performed the duties of chairman in a pleasing manner.
